This state rights offering is considerably below the average for entertainment and both in story and production lacks the necessary qualities to make it even fairly interesting. The theme is of a more or less popular order in which bootleggers and revenue officers play the principal parts with romance woven in and not too carefully. At the outset there is a satisfactory thrill in an automobile going off the road and down the embankment but the action starts and ends with this one incident. The remainder of the picture is a slow moving uninteresting bootleg plot with nothing more exciting than an old man stealing a bottle of whisky every now and then from the cave where it is hidden or the would-be mysterious movements of the bootleggers themselves.

The director has failed to inject any suspense in connection with the situations and although the plot, at best is a weak one, it might have served to slightly better purpose than it has under such poor direction.

No effort is made to arouse the spectator's interest in the outcome of the bootleggers' maneuvers and their final capture comes along in the same easy-going unconcerned fashion as the rest of the story.

Production is way below the average. Exteriors are adequate but the interiors are poor and the photography throughout hardly gets above fair. The picture looks as though it had been done hurriedly and production costs didn't amount to much.

The cast is a mediocre one and contains no players who are known to picture audiences. Marjorie Payne, who is starred, and Ann Deering, who plays the part of her flirtatious sister, are always camera conscious. The male members of the cast are slightly more at ease but there is nothing in the way of real acting to talk about.

Story: Rose LeBarbe nurses MacRae, a revenue officer, back to health when he is injured while on the trail of bootleggers. Rose's father has found the hiding place of the whisky and has been helping himself. When this is discovered the bootleggers decide to put the local dry agent out of the way. This they manage through Rose's sister, Jean, who is "keeping company" with the dry agent to make her real sweetheart jealous. Later MacRae rounds up the bootleggers when they come to get Rose's father for stealing their whisky. MacRae releases Rose's father because he loves her and she saved his life.

May Get By With Another Good Feature Or Good Short Reels

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Unless this can be worked in with a double feature program or used in conjunction with a strong short reel line up it is difficult to offer any suggestions for getting it over. Should you be in a position to use it under such circumstances, you might possibly get it by otherwise there is little possibility of showing it without having them kick.

The title is about the only thing you have to work with or the shot showing the automobile going over the cliff. But this latter bit will indicate a picture of action and thrills and "Beware of the Law" doesn't come under this as the auto spill is the only action bit or thrill they'll see. There are no players names to use. Catchlines will let them know the story has to do with bootleggers if you think that might interest them.
Short Stuff

"Haunted Valley"—Ruth Roland Serials, Inc.—Pathe
Type of production..........................15 episode serial

There are thrills aplenty in Ruth Roland’s latest serial, “Haunted Valley,” and the story while not plausible at all times has been built with the idea of keeping the audience keenly interested always, and giving them a thrill every little while. Of the three episodes that were reviewed, each one built up to a very exciting climax, and ended with a thrill; the first episode ending with a mystery-murder, the second with the hero and heroine falling into an underground whirlpool; and the third with the girl climbing from a speeding motor boat to an airplane overhead by means of a rope ladder.

The locale of the story is in the West, and the girl is the president of a company of construction engineers. There is the usual intrigue and counter-plot incident to all serials, but the interest in this one is really sustained and serial lovers will be well pleased with the results.

There is a large supporting cast which includes many names well-known to serial fans, among them being Jack Daugherty as the hero, Larry Steers, Estelle Jenson, William Ryno, Francis Ford and Edouard Trebeal. George Marshall has directed from the story and scenario by Frank Leon Smith.

A brief idea of the plot is as follows: Ruth Ranger owner of “Haunted Valley,” a desolate tract containing no water, is called to a directors meeting of the firm of Ranger, Inc. of which she is the president. She is informed that there is not enough money to complete the construction work on the Lost River Dam. She borrows one million dollars from Henry Mallison with the agreement that if it is not returned in three months, Haunted Valley will revert to him and that she must marry him. The rest of the action deals in the main with Mallison’s efforts to keep Ranger, Inc. from finishing the different projects under course of construction and thus obtaining funds and also to keep Ruth from learning the real value of “Haunted Valley.”

"Tense Moments from Famous Plays and Great Authors"—Artclass—State Rights
Type of production .........................1 reel tabloid dramas

Weiss Brothers are releasing for the State Right market a series of one reel dramas which give, as the main title indicates, the “tense moments” from famous classics. If one keeps in mind the fact that some of the tense moments are being brought out and at the same time, a sketch of the whole theme given in one short reel, many of the shortcomings may be understood. It is naturally difficult to give the plot and at the same time preserve the beauty and dignity of the classic being filmed, in one reel. However, the result obtained is extremely interesting and where the feature picture being used is a comedy, one of these tabloid dramas may prove a welcome addition to the program.

The four reels reviewed are “The Hunchback of Notre Dame,” “The Merchant of Venice” and “East Lynne,” all of which have been made in England and reconstructed and edited by Charles Gaskill and George Merrick. The photography throughout is clear and the lighting good. The pictures have not been given very costly production but the sets are in keeping with the stories and at times artistic. Naturally in the Shakesperian dramas almost all of the beauty of line is lost, the well-known speeches being necessarily cut to sub-title length.

"Peanuts"—Universal
Type of production .........................1 reel comedy

There is no particular kick to this Lewis Sargent one reeler although it will probably be liked where Sargent is a favorite. The humor is mainly derived from Sargent’s efforts to retain a twenty-five cent piece dated 1893. He has seen a sign in a store window offering to pay fifty dollars for a quarter of that date, but when after many trials and mishaps me finally regains the quarter, he finds that the clerk has made a mistake and that the coin wanted is dated 1863.

You Can’t Build China
In Hollywood!

MOVIE FANS WISE, SAYS PRODUCER

Can’t Put Up a Hollywood Set and Expect Them to Believe It Is China.

To be thoroughly modern a motion picture producer must be prepared to make his plays anywhere on the globe called for by the scenario, and to utilize the best professional talent from whatever nation it can be drawn. This is the opinion and the working principle of Fred Leroy Granville, an American film man, who has completed a picture in Libya, Africa, and who is about to return abroad for the making of five features within the current year.

Mr. Granville, who has circled the earth several times, started in motion picture work by sweeping out the dark room at the old Selig studio. He gave up a good berth as curator of a museum of natural history in order to get a foothold in pictures. He became a “still” photographer and eventually was taken on at a motion picture camera room at Universal City. For several years he photographed features for various producing companies and then launched into producing in the Old World.

PICTURE FANS WISE.

“The motion picture public,” said Mr. Granville, “today, in the offices of Luxor Pictures, with which organization he is affiliated, “is a very wise. You can’t put up a set in Hollywood. You can’t put up a set in Hollywood and expect the fans to believe it is the Great Wall of China. I recently saw a feature, of which the locale was India. I dare say there was not a person in that theater who for a moment believed that the photog- play was made in India.

“The time has come when producers must go anywhere on earth called for by the script. Cosmopolitan Productions sent an entire company to Paris and Monte Carlo for ‘Enemies of Women’ and deserves the highest praise for its ambition and achievement.

FITNESS REQUISITE.

“The actors should be chosen with regard to their fitness for the roles and with no regard as to their nationality. For ‘Shifting Sands’ I engaged Peggy Hyland, who is my wife, Louis Willoughby and Gibson Gowland, all Americans by birth, marriage or naturalization, but in addition I also had some English players. In the succeeding pictures I may employ American and European ladies and sensibly the supporting company where that can be done most satisfactorily.”

Vitagraph to Sell Brooklyn Plant and Build on Coast—20 Specials for Next Year
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph said on Saturday that his company intended building a new studio here on the site of the present plant. The company also plans a theater in the downtown section of Los Angeles.

Negotiations are under way for the sale of the Brooklyn studio to a laundry company and when the sale is completed, production activities will be centered in Los Angeles.

Smith said that Vitagraph would have about 20 special productions for next year. J. Stuart Blackton will head one unit; Smith will personally manage a second, while two other directors will shortly be signed and the studio units thus rounded out to four. Tom Terriss, now in England, but a former Vitagraph director, will make one picture, "Hidden House."

Los Angeles—The following film men have left for the East: Sol Wurtzel and John Zantf of Fox; Jack Cosmon of Agra; Joseph M. Schenck, Sol Lesser and Mike Gore.

Finis Loew Finances O. K.
Martin Golden in the current issue of the magazine of Wall Street discussed low priced stocks, and in a special list cites Loew's, Inc. He says there are 1,060,780 shares of common outstanding; senior securities are placed at $3,506,500; 1920 earnings, $1.70 and 1921 earnings, $2.14; market price $20; working capital $3,500,000; and ratio of current assets to current liabilities, 35%. He then adds this comment:

Earnings since the close of the last fiscal year in August, 1922, have been running at an unusually high level, and this fact, combined with the strong financial position, the elimination of most of the floating indebtedness, the announced declaration to halt the expansion program for the time being, and the proven strength of the business in times of bad business, make the stock look attractive at 20, with a dividend within next few months highly probable.

Whether or Not First National Exchanges to Handle This to be Discussed at Coming Meeting
It is understood that one of the major matters to come up for settlement at the coming annual meeting of First National at Atlantic City will be whether the First National exchanges shall handle any product other than First National releases after Jan. 1, 1924.

For some time there has been considerable discussion among the more important members of the executive committee relative to this matter, but as much as from time to time the release of some "independent" pictures by the exchanges has caused comment and annoyance, even to producers distributing through the First National exchanges.

In the old days when the franchise holders operated the exchanges independent of each other the sale of individual productions other than

Los Angeles—Fox is reported to have purchased 300 acres of land in Culver City. It is understood this will be the site of the new $2,000,000 studio.

Hunter After Exteriors
As reported exclusively in these columns, T. Hayes Hunter is again becoming active in production. He has left for Miami to shoot exteriors for his first picture since "Earthbound." The story was written by Basil King. The producing company is Pilgrim Pictures, Inc.

" Dwelling Place for Shorts"
The financial editor the Evening Post says: "Famous Players" is suggested by some as the temporary dwelling place of a sizable portion of the short account and many market observers have been of the opinion for some time that a nice short interest has been established and carefully nursed along in this stock. The corporation's failure to improve its balance sheet position, in spite of several years of high earnings, brought an explanation to-day in the theory that $13,000,000 inventories more than $12,000,000 represents contracts sold in 1922 which can be collected as the corporation desires, so that liquid assets are really much larger than appears from a superficial examination of the annual statement."

Where Are They?
The coming stars. The coming directors. The coming leads.
No problem is so acute in production circles. It leads to endless discussion which seems to run in circles. There was a time—and not so long ago—when there developed from the "comedy lots" stars and leads. But with the crazy desire for "names" in production the development of material from this source seems blocked. Temporarily at least.

The search for coming directors is quite difficult. A number of producers are watching this with interest. Famous Players particularly. Cameramen are being developed wherever the indication points to even possible success. Hal Roach turned over his Jack London story to Fred Jackman, a former cameraman. And there are others. But there must come further development. And the question is—who are they coming from? Some think the authors themselves will develop into directors. Others that the scenario department will present them. On the Coast you can still hear how June Mathis worked with Ingram.
It's a mighty interesting question.

FINDING NEW FACES
Lots of talk about it. But how much is being done in that direction. Occasionally a new one breaks through. But this is unusual. Yet everyone knows that new faces, new personalities really make this business what it is. There are hundreds of bright girls and young men in Hollywood who never get a chance. Not because the producers do not want them—but just because they cannot break through the system. Ingram has a new girl playing in "Scaramouche." Saw her in a New York cafe. Figured she was ideal for the part. But this is again the unusual.

SURPRISE FOR ZUKOR

Coming. When the head of Famous Players arrives from abroad he will see "The Covered Wagon" for the first time. And incidentally see the finest and best picture ever turned out from his own organization. Which may give him much to think about. In view of what deMille is supposed to do.

LOEW'S IDEA

Talking to Marcus Loew. About the length of features. "Of course there should be shorter features." Says he. But the exhibitor is to blame for the long feature. You try to take a lot of money away from any exhibitor with a five reel picture—just try and do it. I'm not talking about any of the accepted tremendous box office attractions. They are different. But you give Mr. Average Exhibitor a fine picture in five reels and try to get a decent price for it and he balks. He has made the producer feel that it can't be a 'special' unless it's seven reels or more.

May be something to it, boys. Think it over.

ROMANCING AGAIN

Weekly fan publication has it again that Anita Stewart's husband—Prince Miguel de Gragnienza is dead. And that Anita was at his bedside with her three children. Just what Anita has done with her husband Rudolph Cameron; and where she has smuggled the children all this time is interesting. And how she could be at his bedside while he was dying and be making pictures for Cosmopolitan in California at the same time—it's sure puzzling. More romancing.

JUST FOR ONCE

The shoe seems to pinch someone else. The Oil Weekly runs a lot of space. To a yarn. To show that movie stars have larger incomes than oil chiefs. Lovely. But who in this business has the income of young Rockefeller?

POLITICS AND CENSORS

Looks like the existing New York censorship law will not be repealed. Despite that Governor Smith favors it. Indications are that the matter has become a straight party measure. And the Republican Assembly blocks it.

That's the curse of getting mixed up politically. You're in a tough spot. No matter which way the break comes.

Incidentally looks like the Hays organization has done some good work. In the various fights around the country. In 15 states the idea of censors has been smashed.

CONTRACT VALUES

The present wave of production in Hollywood is fine. Fine for everybody. But here's a thought for producers: don't get sewed up with long term contracts with a lot of people. Because when the slump comes—as it always has—somebody is going to be hurt.

SPRING'S HERE

And as usual. It brings mutterings of possible happenings in the national exhibitor body. Lots of state conventions. Lots of speeches. Lots of hope. And lots of ideas. All to formulate in something definite next month in Chicago.

Meanwhile they do say that Al Steffes has his eye on the presidency and that Sydney Cohen's friends insist that he run again. This, despite his reiterated expressions that he has had enough.

In a few weeks all eyes will be on Chicago. At the national gathering. Of course the little old paper will be printed right on the ground. As usual. To give you all the news as quickly as it happens. First. As always.

SORRY

Messed things up. In talking of coming productions. In recent article. Said that Universal would have 12 for the coming season. Meant 12 big dots. Universal will have 52 regular weekly releases. As usual.

those on the First National progr mattered little, but when the changes were grouped for oper purposes by the franchise holders brought about a much different st of affairs. Up to that time it been quite common for the long exchanges to take on "independent product."

Should it be decided to allow exchanges to handle no other prod but company releases a interest question would arise as to what a position could, or would be made, the product on hand.

Paul Bern, formerly editor in of Goldwyn, has been engaged prepare the continuity for its urization of "The Master of M which will be Victor Seastrom's production for Goldwyn.
Porter Series or Hodkinson Release—First is "Michael O'Halloran," Already Finished—Tie-Ups Planned

It is understood that Hodkinson is close to a deal for the distribution of a series of five Gene Stratton Porter novels, the first one to be "Michael O'Halloran." All of the pictures will be made under the direction of the author.

"Michael O'Halloran" has been completed. Production is centered in the coast where James Leo Meehan is directing with Mrs. Porter's daughter, Jeannette Helen Porter, as assistant. The Hodkinson office is understood to have a number of plans under way for national tie-ups on the series which will not be released until fall. It is a great sales to the Porter novels will prove a definite aid in establishing a bloc demand for the productions.

Howes in "The Broken Violin"—Hodkinson Releases "The Broken Violin," Arrow release, and Warren Cooke, as noted in the current issue of "Features." Cooke plays a character part. But the error is particularly regrettable in view of this the first leading opportunity Howes has had in pictures.

Announce Lloyd Contract

First National yesterday officially announced that Frank Lloyd will be the director for the company. The contract was stated in the columns of "Variety" some time ago.

First National has placed Sylvia Keys, Andre Lafayette and Virginia Brown Faire under contract. The three are next year's releases will be "Heavens," "Her Temporary Husband" and "Lord of the Thunder," which have just been purchased. The three are now in the hands of comedy writers. "The Bad Man" and "The Man" were last year's sad-ducks.

Capitol Does $13,677 in One Day

The Capitol reached a new high yesterday for one day's gross on Sunday. "Sons of the Soil" drew $13,677, in paid admissions. Standing room only was all to be had from 2 o'clock show until closing and the house was packed. At one time, the line extended from the box office to the 51st side of the house and almost to the 8th Avenue. A Sunday crowd surpassed any other by over $1,000, an unusual figure for a Sunday. It is believed that "The Sinners," "Foolish Wives" and "Robin Hood" played the theater.

Barber Expected from Coast

Marice Barber of the Cinema Finance Corp., Los Angeles, is due today at the Chatham from the coast.

The First National annual meeting opens at the Ritz-Carlton, Atlantic City, on the 17th.
In the Courts

In the suit of Arthur Brilant against Mack Sennett Comedies Corp. Inc., the verdict obtained by Brilant was reversed not because of lack of weight of evidence but because of a technical flaw in the judge's charge to the jury. This is according to a statement made by Brilant's attorney.

An attachment for $11,500 against the property of the U.S. Moving Pictures Corp., a breach of contract, has been granted in the Supreme Court in a suit of George A. Hopkins for a balance due on legal services for which he claims the defendant agreed to pay $20,000. He alleges that he was engaged July 12, 1922, as general counsel, and that he investigated the status of the corporation to ascertain the alleged misconduct of certain officers and directors in order to take whatever steps were necessary for their removal and defended actions against the corporation.

An answer has been filed in the Supreme Court by Sherlock Holmes, Inc., in a suit by Stoll Film Co., Ltd., for breach of contract to take a second series of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." The defendant alleges that it took the first series of 12 films and paid $60,000 all that was due, and was willing to take the second series of fifteen. It is alleged that the plaintiff broke the contract by selling the first series to the Alexander Film Corp., causing the defendant $40,000 damages. The defendant claims $15,000 more, or a total of $115,000 because the Stoll corporation did nothing to oppose the injunction suit brought by William Gillette and Charles Frohman, Inc., to restrain the use of the name "Sherlock Holmes" in films with the result that the defendant had to bear the burden of the suit and won it.

In the suit of Frank M. Booth against the National Playhouse Corp., which intended to build a string of houses throughout the country, recovery from the corporation and various officers, including Arlin W. Johnson, the president, sums paid by a number of persons for stock, the plaintiff asked Supreme Court Justice O'Malley for an order to take the testimony of Alexander Pantages in Los Angeles by deposition. The defendants are alleged to have represented that Pantages was to have general charge of the management and booking of the corporation, but Pantages was asserted in court to have told B. Rush Stoddard, counsel for the plaintiff, that the representations were false, and that he cut in space ads in the newspapers stating that he was not connected with the venture. Because of the fact that the case is nearing trial, Justice O'Malley decided that the trial judge should rule on the question of getting the testimony of Pantages by deposition.

Hollywood—Wilfred Buckland, who is now preparing sets for “Trilby,” has introduced a system of planning miniature, quickly constructed model settings which it is said will save time and prove very economical.

Tom Wilson has been signed on a long-term contract by Robertson Cole.

Frank Brandow has been promoted to assistant director at the Lasky studio.

Harry Carey has started production on “The Miracle Baby,” by Frank Pierce.

Fred Spencer has finished “Step On It,” his first starring vehicle for Century.

Viola Dana’s next production, “Rouged Lips,” will be directed by Harold Shaw.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have started production on their first Universal serial.

Alf Godling is back on the Century lot directing Baby Peggy in “The Orphan.”

Robert McKim, Hobart Bosworth, William V. Mong and Aileen Pringle, will have parts.

It is understood that Monte Katterjohn has renewed his contract with Louis B. Mayer.

Doris May has completed her part as William Farnum’s leading lady in “The Gun Man.”

Walter Hiers is in Pleasanton in Northern California for opening scenes in “Fair Week.”

Mary O’Hara, former title writer for Rex Ingram will write the titles for “Merry-Go-Round.”

David Butler has returned from San Francisco, where he had been working in “The Fog.”

Peggy Shaw and Alma Bennett support Dustin Farnam in “The Grill,” just completed.

Bradley King has completed an adaptation of Talbot Mundy’s latest novel for an Ince special.

Al Santelle has been signed by P. A. Powers to direct a new series of Winner stories for F. B. O.

Milton Sills has been engaged by Universal to play the leading male role in “A Lady of Quality.”

Archie Mayo will direct the first of the series in which the Gorham offes will appear for Century.

Richard Dix has transported his makeup and other studio paraphernalia from Goldwyn’s to Lasky’s.

Claire Adams will play the leading role in “The White Slaver” with the story being produced by Warners.

After finishing the “Fighting Blood” series with George O’Hara, Mal St. Clair may do a feature for F. B. O.

“Salome’s Fane,” will have a cast including Louise Dresser, Jacqueline Logan, Maurice Flynn and William Davidson.

Work on “La Rubia.” Clara Kimball Young’s new picture for Metro, under direction of Thomas Helfron has started.

Gene Sarazen, golf champion, has completed the series of six reelers on the history of golf for Warners.

Edwin Bibby is the new studio manager at the Coogan lot. Bibby has formerly worked with Mack Sennett and Charlie Chaplin.

John Ralston will appear in several more Century Comedies while awaiting a part in Baby Peggy’s first full length feature.

Otto Matiesen plays the part of Philippe de Villeneuve in “Scarabonche,” having been signed for this role by Rex Ingram.

Camera work on “Judgment of the Storm,” formerly called “Out of the Night,” the first Palmer production, has been completed.

Blanche Sweet is to play in “In the Palace of the King.” This picture will be Emmett Flynn’s first production for Goldwyn.

Elwin Field is appearing in two Universal pictures at the same time. These are “Blinky” and the third of the Leather Pusher series.

Joe Roberts, it is reported, is conferring with financial interests, regarding the formation of a company in which he will be starred.

Frank Brandow has been promoted to assistant director on the Lasky lot. He is working with Jerome Strong on “Children of Jazz.”

The American Society of Cinematographers turned mariners last Wednesday night, when they embarked on the “Cinematographers’ Cruise” on the Ship Civic, Venice, which they chartered for the occasion.

Coast Golf Tourney a Success

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Motion Picture Golf Ass’n tournament, held on Sunday at the California Country Club in Culver City, was a success. About 68 competed.

John Muscall won the Larry Semion trophy with the low gross of 84. The contest for the M. P. News trophy was tied between Mike Farley and Howard Hawke, with a score of 87. The President’s Cup for the low net went to S. Hardy. William Farnum won the Warner Bros. cup for the second low net with 68. Lunch broke up the battle and in the afternoon the scrap was on again. The whole affair was nicely handled by Nat Deverich, president of the association and J. Jessen, secretary.

Here’s Fair Warning

Nat G. Rothstein and Joe Schnitzer are down at French Lick vacationing. Rothstein is having a good time. This is how the weather affects him in his own words:

“Oh, boy, is the weather here great and how Joe Schnitzer and I are knocking the little ball all over the beautiful meadows! And oh, boy, how this water here tastes and smells, oh! Joe and I expect to grab the first and second prizes in the Spring FILM DAILY Golf Tournament Tell the gang to get a lotta practice and quick, too.

Newspaper Opinions

"Souls for Sale"—Goldwyn Capitol

AMERICAN—"The Go-Getter" is really amusing and you have a chance in the midst of adventure. It is delightfully vulgar and an infinite amount of fun. Be a go-getter, and go get your money's worth of frolicsome entertainment at the Capitol. It's a genuine picture, and you'll have a good time.

EVENING JOURNAL—Mr. Griffith in directing "The Go-Getter" has put a last clip and has had every eye for every motion picture producer. The characters are trite, but the story is quite amusing in spots, but the action might be a bit more rapid.

TRIBUNE—We must say that we think trying to make a picture out of "The Nth Commandment" is the most absurd idea any time ever conceived. There is no screen material there.

The story, however, is rather well done, with a certain moving pathos that has the interest for the most part, although, at times it drags distinctly.

The whole idea, however, is that it's well worth seeing, although the cast is exceptionally good. Colleen Moore is perfectly wonderful as Sara.

WORLD—One of the most delicately played cinema characters of recent months is that by little Miss Colleen Moore in Miss Hurst's sentimental yarn of love among the youngsters of the working classes. We liked this picture quite a lot.

Hopes for "Klimg Eye" Cure (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Maurice Tourneur thinks he has a cure for "Klimg eyes," which are caused by the throwing off of ultra-violet rays from the fl. ops. Tourneur's experiments involve a special colored glass picture or the opening of the arc lamp, which eliminates the ultra-violet ray to a point where it is harmless to the naked eye. This is based on the principle of the colored eye-glasses worn in bright sunshine. There is also involved a special photographic film for which the ultra-violet ray matter which has been subdued by the filter in front of the lamp.

"The Nth Commandment"—F. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—The work of Colleen Moore was exceptionally fine, and it even amounts to a "crepe dechine soul" and even to that whose soul is mere, insincerity-ness.

EVENING JOURNAL—The touching charm of Miss Hurst has been sympathetically caught and developed by Frank Borzage, who directed the picture.

EVENING WORLD—It is a sort of chore at best and leaves one with a lot of interpretation points, but if you like the sort of stuff on your screen "The Nth Commandment" will appeal to everyone with a "crepe dechine soul" and even to that whose soul is mere, insincerity-ness.

Herald—* * * written originally by Fannie Hurst, but we can't believe that she is responsible for the finished product. In fact, we have no doubt that she feels quite ashamed of it.

The picture was directed by Frank Borzage, and it must be admitted that he has done a good job, whenever possible. He gives us many scenes of genuine beauty, which are enveloped in themselves and we forget for the moment what it is all about.
If it Thrilled Akeley
It’ll Thrill Anybody!

“The elephant pictures recall vividly the most thrilling experiences of my life. I shall not blame you in the least if, when the final stampede of the elephants comes on the screen, you feel inclined to run.

Carl E. Akeley, America’s greatest authority on big game, especially African big game, so wrote after seeing

MR. AND MRS. MARTIN JOHNSON’S
TRAILING AFRICAN WILD ANIMALS

And Mr. Akeley, in the course of his work for the American Museum of Natural History, has come to be at home in the jungle. It thrilled him.

How much more must it thrill your patrons, when elephants bigger than a moving van stampede into the very lens of the camera;

When Mrs. Johnson herself—she weighs but 110 pounds—stops a rhinoceros charging, his thick sharp horns lowered to rip and toss her.

Never before have the hunters been seen in the picture with the jungle beasts.

Metro courts comparison of
MR. AND MRS. MARTIN JOHNSON’S
with any other jungle picture.

If you see it, you’ll show it.
Decide Against "T"
Appellate Division Directs Judgment for $89,235 Against Charles and Adam Kessel

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has directed a judgment for $89,235 against Triangle Film in a suit by Charles and Adam Kessel, Jr., on a previous judgment obtained in Virginia where the defendant corporation was organized, for the sale to it of $89,158 shares of stock. The Appellate Division reversed a decision of the lower court which denied the plaintiff's motion for judgment and failed to strike out the defenses and counterclaim of Triangle. The decision is unanimous, and unless Triangle can get permission to go to the Court of Appeals and win a reversal there, it will have to pay.

The Appellate Division opinion states that in the Virginia action the defendant set up the plea that the contract was not ratified by the directors, that the suit should have been brought in New York, where the contract was made and the variances were domiciled, and that Triangle had no excess profits which could be used for the purchase of stock.

Los Angeles—Clara Kimball Young plans a long rest after finishing her present and last picture for Metro. She will probably resume work in September under Harry Garson's wing. Garson is understood to have her under contract for a long period.

Hayes Heads Community Trust
Ralph Hayes, former assistant of Will H. Hayes, has been selected as director of the New York Community Trust which maintains contacts with various financial institutions acting as trustees, and which purposes to pool bequests through the trustees for the present and future education and research. Hayes assumes his duties following a vacation in Europe which starts today.

Boosting Hollywood
"Can Anything Good Come Out of Hollywood," is the title of a most interesting little volume by Laurence L. Hill and Silas E. Synder, and published in Hollywood. It is, without doubt, the best answer to just what Hollywood really is that has ever been printed.

The Hay organization, or some big producing company, could find it really worth while to see to it that a copy of this little book was forwarded to every editor in this country. It's mighty fine stuff.

Gus Schlesinger Disposes of Warner Pictures in Many Foreign Countries—Away Six Months

Gus Schlesinger, foreign manager of Warner Bros., who returned on Saturday from Europe, was successful in closing a number of deals for the Warner product. He was gone six months, during which period he spent his time between London and Paris. Schlesinger came back with a firm conviction that in England especially there is a decided demand for good pictures. He said English exchanges are willing to pay good prices for good pictures.

Campbell to Direct

Webster Campbell has been engaged by Bennie Ziedman to direct "The Brigit Lights of New York," which will be made at the Burr studio in Glendale, L. A. Production starts on the 20th. Edmund Goulding supervised the scenario which was written by Gerald C. Duffy.

Sheehan and Fox Officials Back

Winfield R. Sheehan, Sol. Wurtzel, John Zanitt and Vivian M. Moses of the Fox organization are in from the coast. Wurtzel who is in charge of studio activities in the West will be here for only a few days. Upon his return, the fall schedule will be placed in work.

The new studio planned for the coast will probably not be completed for 12 or 18 months. Several sites are under consideration but no deal has been made. The present plant will, of course, be used until that time. Moses stepped off at a number of exchange points on his way East where he found business on the boom. The Fox organization has inaugurated its regular Spring sale drive to clean up this year's product before the new season starts in.

Corporation Shows Gains Despite Decreased Income—Cost of Theater Operation Cut from $6,507,593 in 1921-1922 Period to $5,055,424 This Year—Metro Cost Company More

The financial statement of Loew's, Inc., from Sept. 1, 1922, to March 1, 1923, shows a net operating profit of $1,556,554, or $406,653 more than the net profits for the same period in 1921-1922 when the total was $1,149,901.

The statement indicates that the organization is in fine shape financially. This seems apparent in view of the fact that the gross income, according to the current statement, is $11,202,329, or $410,544 less than that in the same period of the previous year. The cost of operating the theaters and office buildings owned by the company is placed at $5,055,424, or $1,552,169 less than the expense during 1921-1922, when the figure reached $6,507,593.

Told of at Flaherty Dinner—Realism Without Theatricals Urged by Notables

A new epoch in motion pictures which will have a profound influence in developing a broader American international viewpoint, was talked of at a dinner given at the Waldorf last night by the editor and publisher of Asia for Robert J. Flaherty, who leaves tomorrow for Savaii, in the Samoan Islands, where he will make for Famous Players, a picture that will do for the South Sea Islanders what he did for the Eskimo in "Nanook." More than 100 representative people attended.

The belief was expressed that there is need for a school of motion pictures telling the story of various

Charges U. A. With "Fancy" Prices

John Marlow, who operates the Hippodrome and Liberty in Murphysboro, Ill., and the Hippodrome and Annex in Herrin, Ill., has forwarded this office a copy of a letter sent to the United Artists exchange in St. Louis. He blames the company with charging "fancy" prices for its product and requests his name be taken off their lists because he "will not be in position to use any of your pictures."

Marlow concedes that the company is releasing good pictures, but blames it for its "rigid" ideas, which he claims is the reason why "United Artists' pictures are not used today outside of the large cities, as they should be." He then says:

"To the best of my recollections we paid you $1,100 rental on 'The Three Musketeers' for Murphysboro and Herrin, and according to our records and what other productions of the same standard are selling for, we only paid you $1,000 too much."

A copy of Marlow's letter was forwarded to United Artists for comment, but none was forthcoming.

When Hoffman, general manager of Tiffany, returned from the coast recently he stated that Miss Murray's pictures would be state righted after the completion of the Metro contract. There remain four more pictures to be delivered to Metro, including "The French Doll," which is completed. When Hoffman was asked to comment on the above wire, he said yesterday:

"The statement that Miss Murray's pictures would be state righted was a premature announcement. Her Metro contract calls for four more pictures which will take about a year or a year and a half to complete and deliver. That length of time in this business brings a lot of changes."

"MASTERS OF MEN"

by MORGAN ROBERTSON

The greatest story of the sea ever screened!

A thrilling story of he-men, men who wear hair on their chests, whose veins run hot with red fighting blood!

A blunt, vigorous yarn of a boy's fight upward against overwhelming odds, where fight means a hard fist and prime muscle, high courage and a ready wallop!

Shanghaied! Drugged by crimps and flung insensible into the hell hole forward, where sweating, brow-beaten men live like beasts scourged to their tasks with curses and belaying pin.

The sea! The flavor of salt in the nostrils; the odor of pitch in the air, the snapping of wind-swept canvas crackling like a machine gun; the creaking, singing wood straining as she rides the high waves!

All the magic and lure of adventure, the Spanish Main and sailormen!

Love! A timid boy's unspoken dream of his heart's desire; a girl too old fashioned to offer love unbidden; a lad's sacrifice of youth's dearest possession—honor—to protect her from the shame of another's crime; the confusion of bitter misunderstandings that threaten life-long broken hearts!

Uncle Sam's bluejackets! The fighting men of the greatest nation in the world, and what they think and how they live; their loyalty and cheer and youth, eternal, living, fighting youth! The careless devil-may-care "gob," incorrigible, loyal; impudent and loveable!

Romance! The sea spells romance. Red sunsets turn green waves to crashing mountains of blood; noon suns spread gold upon the bosom of the sea, gold that beckons and calls to youth to gather its riches; never-ending mirages of golden bowls at rainbows' ends. And, the sea gives no riches; only character and manhood, bitterly squeezed out of its cold, hard business.

Wholesome, clean, healthy! A boy's life of adventure, free from tawdry conflicts and sex illusions, based on fact gathered by one who served among men, who loved men, who admired men and who wished young America to so live that he might become a man! The trash of silly, social temptations has no place in this story of a boy who became the master of the man.

The Yankee ever has been master of the sea! Decatur, John Paul Jones—history has written the feats of great American seamen into all time. Here is a story of the making of such men; men who acted and argued later; men out of whom Dewey and Schley and Sampson and "Fighting Bob" Evans were chosen, each for his day's work for the Stars and Stripes. Shifty-footed men, with a right and left punch and a keen eye and a high sense of honor and guts to go the limit!

Dick Halpin is the lad you wanted to be; and I wanted to be! He's the fellow we dreamed of, whose fighting courage we envied. He's the boy that assumed another's petty crime and ran away to sea to live it down, that the girl he loved might not be shamed and humiliated by the revelation of her brother's weakness. He's the fellow you and I used to talk about; that lad of strength and honor we built with boyish imaginations up in the haymow, or while idling with a home-made fishin' rod down by the creek. He's your kind and my kind and because we had fathers and mothers to make our way easier we never managed to be him; but we wanted to and we'll live our dreams again with Dick Halpin in this vivid, living story, "Masters of Men."

A master of men wrote this great sea tale. A man whose life was as hard as the diamonds he cut and who never wrote a line until he had lived beyond an average man's age; a man who took a beating at the hands of a brutal second mate with a smile, and who administered a beating with equal cheerfulness; a man who knew the sea and a sailorman's life; who criticized rightfully Kipling and who wrote his first sea tale to prove that a man who knew the sea could write a better story of the sea; a man who earned little by his pen and who starved while he wrote; the greatest writer of sea stories in all literature.

Morgan Robertson, a master of men, wrote the last word in thrilling sea stories when he wrote "MASTERS OF MEN."

rates of the world from the realities of their daily lives, in such dramatic fashion that they will be equally popular with the present studio-made film and possibly more so.

Later in speaking of this type of picture, Louis D. Froelick, editor of Asia said that he and Flaherty believed that a picture should be based on reality of life which they both considered much more dramatic than fiction, out of the hands of the professional director andenable Flaherty to build a great series of films around the primitive races of the world. He told of how Jesse L. Lasky entered an agreement, from which Flaherty to finance such expeditions. When Robert T. Kane spoke he said the Samoan expedition was the first of a series planned by the company. Those present included: Lloyd C. Grisco, Dr. John H. Finley, Genera J. G. Harbord, Mary Garrett Hay, Will H. Haas, Otto H. Kahn, Charles R. Crane, Norman H. Davis, Norman de Whitehouse, Philip Marshall Brown and Roland Clark.

Day Leaves For Brazil
John L. Day, South American representative of Famous Players, will sail on April 14 on his annual trip to Brazil.

Green Goes to Coast
Alfred E. Green, who recently completed "The Ne'er-Do-Well," has returned to the West Coast where he will produce his next picture, understood to be "The Ladies." Green will return East after this production and will again direct Tom Meighan.

New Exchange Occupied
The New York and New Jersey Paramount exchanges are now located in their new building at 331-37 W. 44th St. There are 16,000 square feet of floor space, the ground floor being given over entirely to the storage vaults, store rooms and show rooms.

Paramount's new standardized building now being erected by the company in Memphis, will be ready about July 1. This is located at Front and Linden Streets.

At Broadway Theater
Capitol
The overture at this house is impressive of
"Alida," played by the Capitol Grand Orchestra and assisted by the ballet company and the Capitol ensemble. The news magazine is next, and then comes a three-act theme to the feature, "Souls for Sale." Other selections are listed.

"There is a decided improvement," he said, "in the English ideas of showmanship, The Little Church Around the Corner" and "The Bitterest Man To Look Forward"

Schlesinger intends returning here for a few months and then, following a projected trip of Harry Warner to the coast, together they will go to England to dispose of the contemplated 18 pictures for next year. While abroad, Schlesinger closed the following deals, including not only Warner pictures, but outside product they control for the foreign market.

The six pictures to L. Gassmont, Barcelona for Spain and Portugal; to Nederlandse Bioscoop for Holland to John Olsen and Co., Copenhagen for Norway, Sweden and Denmark; to Gassmont, Paris for France, Scandinavian and Belgium; 1 am the Law" to Nederlandse Bioscoop for Holland; also Hollywood and "Bom Raes to Riders" to 12 Mondo Frank comedies. Films Erika of Paris bought 21 Hawks cartoons for France; Switzerland, Belgium, Italy, Spain and Portugal. Pauley, London bought 36 Felix cartoons for England. Inkwell and Felix series to Olsen for Scandinavia.

Selig Reorganization Completed
But He Does Not Figure in it—Doolittle is President

The Selznick reorganization has been put into effect and with the consummation of that plan comes word that W. J. Doolittle, head of the reorganization committee, has been elected president of the new unit, known as Selznick Distributing Corp., while John S. Woody, vice-president and general manager, has resigned.

Woody's withdrawal comes as somewhat of a surprise in view of the fact that he was allotted the job of whipping the sales force into line and reviving operations as a selling unit. It is understood that he has been prompted to leave Selznick because of another opportunity which he feels is a better one. Thus, it is understood, involves the merging of several distributing units into one large organization with Woody in charge.

Adolph Zukor and Sidney R. Kent are due in from Europe on the Mauretania which docks sometime tomorrow.

Sherman Signed

Bennie Zeidman has signed Lowell Sherman for the heavy in "The Bright Lights of Broadway." A deal is understood to be on for Doris Kenyon.

The Loew Statement

In the report of the financial statement of Loew's, Inc., appearing in yesterday's issue, the caption in part said "cost of theater operation cut from $6,307,593 in 1921-1922 period to $5,055,424 this year."

While this would appear that the cost of theater operations had been reduced over a million and a half, and thus lead to the belief that the theaters were being operated in a manner to bring about this saving, the facts are that during the years covered by the statement, in the neighborhood of 20 houses, all or some of them operating at a loss were closed, and this brought about the reduction noted. Operating costs of Loew theaters are higher today than during last year.

Doddittle, the new president, is also vice-president of the First National Bank of Trenton. He has been here for some time working on the reorganization plan. Other officers are Myron Selznick, vice-president, who will pass judgment on the quality of product offered the company for distribution; Ralph B. Itleson, vice-president, who is a member of the law firm of San, Itleson and Van Voorhis; Walter Jerome Green, secretary and treasurer, who is vice-president of the Utica National Bank of Utica; and Charles E. Pain, chairman of the board of directors, who is a Chicago attorney. The directors are the officers, Mark Hyman of New York and M. C. Levee of the United studio, Los Angeles. Lewis J. Selznick will have no hand in the management of the company but will act in an advisory capacity.

Selznick Distributing does not intend producing, but will handle the product of outstanding producers. The first purchase is “Will H. Conquer Dempsey,” a two reeler, which shows Louis Firpo, the pugilist, in training.

THE MYSTERY OF

KING TUT-ANKH-AMEN'S EIGHTH WIFE

1. The whole population of the United States—from New York to California—are waiting NOW to see the story of King Tut-Ankh-Amen ON THE SCREEN. If you don't believe it, ask the first man, woman or child you meet on the street!

2. In all the history of Motion Pictures, THIS is the TIMELIEST Production ever made!

3. It is the Colossal Clean-Up of the Year—the Mightiest Money-Making Mint ever presented to Wide-Awake Film Men looking for Big, Clean, Novel, Audience-Pleasing SENSATIONS. This Picture will do for the Picture Theatres what Rubber Heels do for Shoes—annihilate hard-going!

4. It is a picture worthy of being played in the Best Theatres in the country—aside from its even GREATER VALUE AS A TIMELY GOLD-MINE!

NOTE: When the Picture was Written and Made there was no notion entertained that it would almost be a perfect parallel, in its main episodes, with the recent tragic news from Egypt concerning the death of a splendid man and renowned explorer, with the old legends of poisoned tombs—but the fact IS the story of THE MYSTERY OF KING TUT-ANKH-AMEN'S EIGHTH WIFE contains so much matter that parallels the unfortunate tragedy of Lord Carnarvon, the prophesy of Marie Corelli and the mystic explanations of Conan Doyle, that it would seem the Producer and Director and Author were all three gifted with Clairvoyance and the power of prophets.

If every director in this industry realized with what importance the Director's issue—out June 6th—was read by important executives—the men who say "yes" and "no"; if every director would understand what it means in dollar insurance to tell what he is doing; what he has done, what he plans to do, the Director's issue would be overcrowded with advertising.

The great misfortune is that many directors think the world knows all about them, and will never forget. In reality it is just the reverse. This is a swift moving period. And people forget only too quickly.

This is the director's opportunity. He can tell his own story; in his own way, knowing that the men he should have contact with will read everything printed in this issue. And this particular issue will be filed away—for reference purposes—make no mistake about that.

A summons in a suit for $16,000 has been filed in the Supreme Court by Edward B. Levy, a lawyer, against the Adeline Amusement Co.

The Appellate Term of the Supreme Court has affirmed a judgment for $720 obtained by Capt. Floyd C. Nims against Leon Wagner for the alleged conversion of a Pathé camera.

In a suit in the City Court by Hollander & Bernheimer against Malcolm Strauss for $1,500 for legal services the defendant consented that a judgment for $750 be entered against him.

A verdict for $1,502 was returned against Pathé Exchange, Inc., by a jury in the City Court in a suit of Jacob Landy in behalf of the stockholders of the Western Photoplays, Inc. The plaintiff alleged that Pathé invaded the American rights to "The Great Gamble," and that the defendant collected $62,547, of which the sum sued for remained due. The defendant counterclaimed for the same amount for film sold to Western Photoplays.

A judgment for $63,557 was entered in the Supreme Court in a suit of Raymond Guedes Coghlan against Charles Francis Jenkins and the Graphoscope Co., under an agreement made in 1917, by which he was to get a commission for selling the Graphoscope Co. He sold it to Clark D. Eaton for $30,000 and sued for $48,333 as the balance of $50,000 which he claimed to be due. The judgment includes interest since 1917 and costs.

Supreme Court Justice M. O'Malley has granted an application by William Gillette and Charles Frohman, Inc., to take the testimony of Sir A. Conan Doyle in their suit against Stoll Films and Educational Exchanges over the use of "Sherlock Holmes" in films, and set the examination for April 14th. While the plaintiffs asked for it, defendants said they wanted the testimony also for use at the trial, because they hope to prove that while Doyle gave Stoll permission to use his stories for the films in 1920, he never gave any film rights to the plaintiffs.

Frank G. Hall, has applied in the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining the Penn Export & Import Co., from prosecuting a suit against him for $167,500 on his endorsement of notes for that sum made by Hall Mark Pictures. He alleges that he agreed to settle for $15,000 by the payment of $2,000 in cash and $250 a week from his salary payable by the State Theaters Corp., until $15,000 was paid, and that the last payment was made Dec. 21. He has demanded that the suit be dropped and the notes cancelled, but says that the Penn company has retained a new attorney and is threatening to enter judgment against him by default for the full amount sued for.

Gentlemen:

I am very pleased to inform you that "The Greatest Menace" opened on Friday night at the St-Denis Theatre, Montreal, to a record business. It was necessary for us to have six policemen in front of the House to protect the front of the Theatre. On Sunday, the third day of the showing, all records for the St-Denis Theatre were broken; thousands were turned away, although this Theatre seats 3,000.

I have every reason to believe that "The Greatest Menace" will hang up a new high record for box office receipts in Montreal.

I am leaving for Toronto tonight, and will send the picture to the Ontario Board on my arrival in Toronto, and will let you know the results for Ontario as soon as possible.

With kindest regards,

I am,
Sincerely yours,

No better proof of the quality of a comedy is needed than its ability to satisfy the most discriminating picture audience in the world—the patrons of the Rialto Theatre, New York. Proof that Plum Center Comedies are doing exactly that is found in the fact that Dr. Reisenfeld has just booked another Plum Center for the Rialto—"Pop Tuttle, Detekatif." It's a known fact that and the exhibitor who gives his patrons Plum Centers is feeding them the finest film dessert on the market. The wise showman spends most of his time choosing features. He signs up for short stuff which he knows is consistently good. That’s why so many exhibitors have placed their faith in Plum Center Comedies. It’s YOUR turn NOW!

The music tax situation in Minnesota is still an irritating one. It is hoped to develop a definite plan of action to relieve this situation. In all likelihood, a new arbitrating board will be appointed, similar to the one employed in New York where exhibitors and exchanges have an equal representation.

Sydney S. Cohen is not present. Likewise, there is no representative of the Hays organization here. A good deal of enjoyment was had yesterday morning when J. F. Cubberley led his "ham and egg" breakfast at the West Hotel. In this connection, "Cubby" prepared a special booklet in which he took occasion to inform the Northwest exhibitors not only of the product and k. Film is handling, but also ran thumbnail sketches of well-known exhibitors with a few lines about their histories. He also imitated the review style used in THE FILM DAILY for the breakfast. This appears elsewhere on this page.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,800 feet

Here is one with a genuine wallop for American audiences and if the patriotic atmosphere in this doesn't send them out with their blood tingling and their fervor for the stars and stripes increased a hundred fold, then the guess is all wrong. "Masters of Men," David Smith's production of Morgan Robertson's novel, is an out and out American picture for Americans and it contains an unlimited supply of real audience appeal—the sort that starts them talking about the picture and brings others in.

Much of the credit for the success of the picture belongs to Director Smith for the very worth while and capable way in which he has handled the material and to C. Graham Baker, who prepared the scenario. Added to this there is the splendid performance of Cullen Landis in the role of a sailor of the U.S. Navy, as well as a uniformly well suited and capable cast.

Better Get Your Order In and Then Get to Work On It

Vitagraph's latest production looks like a sure thing for the box office. It has all the requisites of a box office attraction and they are all fully satisfying from an audience viewpoint. "Masters of Men" has been done in a big way and should do a big business. You can safely make promises for it and rest assured your crowd will vote it a winner, unless, of course, you happen to be catering to a foreign clientele. In that case they may not be carried away with the spirit of enthusiasm that the picture is almost certain to create with American audiences.

To start with, Morgan Robertson's novel contains splendid material for the screen and in retaining the author's method of development, Baker has gotten the most out of it and Director Smith has been able to tell the story smoothly, consistently and cover the ground in much less footage than he might have been able to proceed in the usual fashion. This chapter style of telling the story is wholly pleasing and satisfying and eliminates considerable unnecessary detail. And at the same time the sequences dovetail nicely and there are no gaps in the continuity.

The first two chapters are concerned with the early boyhood of the hero and his subsequent entrance into the Navy followed by the entrance of the United States into war with Spain. This leads up to some mighty fine business and includes a variety of thrills and action with sure-fire punch. It all registers and is flavoured with such definite patriotic atmosphere that it is even more impressive than ordinarily. It is distinctly the treatment given the story and the wealth of realism and excellent detail that makes the piece absorbing. For a climax you have the destruction of the famous battleship Maine and the fight in Santiago Harbor.

Cullen Landis works like a real trooper and his portrayal in this is easily one of the best things he has ever done. They are going to get a real thrill out of his many scrapes. Alice Calhoun and Wanda Hawley are both charming in their '98 costumes. Picture patrons all over will "love" the romance of Alice Calhoun and Landis, and Wanda Hawley and Earle Williams. Director Smith had fine cooperation from the whole company.

Story: Dick Halpin is accused of theft by the brother of Mabel Arthur, whom he loves. To save Mabel from humiliation Dick accepts the blame, runs away and joins the U. S. Navy. It isn't until Dick and his lieutenant, Breen, have been shanghaied aboard a sailing vessel, that Dick learns Mabel knows the truth, but before there can be a reconciliation Dick and Breen return to their ship and are pitched into active service at Santiago Harbor. Dick is transferred to work under young Arthur, now an ensign, and is with him when he dies. After it is all over Dick and Breen return to the home town, Dick to claim Mabel, and Breen to claim Bessie, Mabel's chum.

There is a trailer available which you would do well to secure and use well in advance of the showing. Be sure and tell them of the historic episode and of the blowing up of the battleship Maine. There will be those of your patrons to whom the incident will still be current history and they'll be especially interested. Tell them about the excellent work of Cullen Landis, of the action and thrills. The picture really deserves your best exploitation efforts with the receipts proving it well worth your while. You have something to talk about. Do it.

Northwest for Him — Minnesota Leader Launches Attack on Cohen
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—"Al Steffes for presidenty is the cry in the Northwest today." A definite Steffes bo.m for the F. T. O. presidency was launched here today on Tuesday, it was reported Tuesday. The popular president of the M. P. T. O., apparently has the Northwest in back of him.

The boom was started on Tuesday by Tom E. Stanley, a member of the Wisconsin board of directors, and has been taken up by the 154 exhibitors in attendance. Steffes not yet expressed his willingness to run, but that is considered, a mere futility. The fact that sentiment is growing in his favor is hig-ghough reason for him to find an experience. The Northwest leaders have been instructed to attest the Chicago convention with Siles as their candidate.

values, the other with blue-green color values. These are registered by a device which is part of the mechanism of the camera and works in synchronism with the shutter.
The negatives then go to the developer, which is operated by machine, and the developing is done automatically.
After the development is completed and the negatives dried, they go to the patented printer; the negatives with the yellow-green values being printed on one side of a positive film coated on both sides, and the negative with the blue-green values on the other side.
The same kind of registering device is used here as is used in the camera so that the two pictures are superimposed. This registering device is said to insure 100% accuracy. The positive then goes out to a finishing machine, automatically develops, fixes, washes and carries it to a patent bleach which changes silver so that the emulsion becomes absorbent to a group of dyes. There film is treated selectively, first on one side with an organo-red color, then on the other side with a blue-green color. From the dyeing machine it is carried to the dryer and when dry is ready to be projected in the ordinary projector, same as black and white, without any alteration.

Clifton Signs with Fox
Elmer Clifton, producer of "Down to the Sea in Ships," which has been signed to direct for Fox. His first picture will probably be "Six Cylinder Love."

McDermott Resigns
T. R. McDermott has resigned as special representative for Topics of the Day and Aesop's Fables, after three years with those organizations.

"Phonofilm" at Rivoli
The first public showing of "Photofilm," the new invention of Dr. Lee de Forest will be given at the Rivoli beginning Sunday.

Brady Heads Loew Club
Col. J. E. Brady has been elected president of the Loew-Metro Club. Other officers are David Loew, vice-president; Rose Quimby, recording secretary; David Blum, financial secretary and Charles Quick, treasurer.

President Harding will see "The Covered Wagon" tomorrow night at the White House. Cabinet members will attend. Fannus is sending 25 musicians from the Criterion for the showing.

Indefinite Run in Philadelphia
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Philadelphia—"Hunting Big Game in Africa" is booked for an indefinite run at the Forrest here. The picture opened on Monday night with a number of socially prominent people in attendance.

Praises "Bright Shawl" Ad
Frederick W. Geis, vice-president of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank who is also in charge of the bank's advertising addressed the A. M. P. A. yesterday and cited the full page advertisement of "The Bright Shawl" that appears in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post as the sort of copy that banks should follow because of its dignity and simplicity. The advertisement is a full page with a large pencil sketch of Richard Barthelmess as he appears in "The Bright Shawl," while below is a boxed arrangement containing the actual copy, with a limited amount of wording.

Griffith Signs Hamilton
D. W. Griffith has signed Neil Hamilton, who appears in "The White Rose."

Edwards Back
J. Gordon Edwards has returned from Panama where he secured exteriors for a naval picture he is making. Next week, Charles Horan starts a new picture for Fox at the local studio.

-Britton Makes Firpo Film
Leon Britton stated yesterday he has completed a two-reeler with Luis Firpo titled "A Champion in the Making." The picture will be one of the most exciting to come before the public, according to Britton, scenes showing Firpo arriving from South America, in training and actually engaged in the recent fight with Brennan.

No Hope for Repeal
No further consideration and they had since undergone for the repeal bill before the upper house for a vote, but this is considered to be the final vote as it appears that all the spokesmen opposing to be opposed to the passage of the repeal bill. Joseph Levenson, secretary of the commission, has completed his term, but Governor Smith has not named a successor, apparently because he is waiting to learn the attitude of the Legislature toward the censorship situation.

The Committee on General Law of the Senate is considering a measure which would give the laborator a lien on positive prints at the negative until the owner of the picture pays for the work contracted for.

Another measure introduced in Albany has for its purpose the regulation of the admittance of children to theaters.

Joseph Levenson's term as secretary of the M. P. Commission expires at the end of the year. He is still in the offices of the commission in vie of the fact that a successor has not been named.

Edward Lammle Here
Edward Lammle is at the Astor for about a week.

Binghamton, New York
YOU have no doubt noted the wide variety of stories in which Norma Talmadge has appeared, beginning with "Smilin' Through," which was the first of her new series for distribution through Associated First National.

Following the national ballot conducted by theatres all over America in which Miss Talmadge was named by an overwhelming vote the greatest of all feminine screen stars, Joseph M. Schenck decided to present her only in vehicles and roles which would give her recognized genius the widest scope and fullest play.

In "Smilin' Through" her art brought happy tears; in "The Eternal Flame" she sounded the heights and depths of a woman's heart; in "The Voice from the Minaret" she searched the soul of a wife whose heart renounced the bonds imposed by her wedding ring. In each picture in turn she inspired with dramatic realism a different character, time and country. The charm and magnificence of these pictures, the ripening and fruition of a great actress' art, have been applauded throughout the world.

In choosing "Within the Law" it was decided to give the screen a de luxe interpretation of a great American play—the first American story of her new series. As the innocent and beautiful shop girl driven to a life of crime within the law, Miss Talmadge has very great and entirely different acting opportunities. The role is unique and distinctive because it gives her her first chance to portray the fire and passion and revenge of a woman scorned and persecuted. Never has she been more superb.

And the finish and artistry of the production itself has been made possible through the directorial genius of Frank Lloyd, who has directed all but one of Miss Talmadge's new series. Mr. Lloyd's fine understanding of character and of dramatic force, together with Miss Talmadge's great art of interpreting the human heart, has made this what we consider one of First National's very finest productions.

Steffes Boom On

“Ham and egg breakfast” was a great success and following it, Steffes in his report touched on the music tax situation. He said that the law must be observed, but recommended that those exhibitors who insist on fighting it, should get legal aid.

Steffes took a slam at Sydney S. Cohen for the latter’s “unauthorized” severance of relations with Will H. Hays over the uniform contract. Steffes declared he was being arranged for alleged intimacy with Hays and charges that poison propaganda which “can only emanate from one source” was being circulated about him in Minnesota and elsewhere. He reviewed Minnesota’s action of last year in forwarding a questionnaire to Hays, asking the latter specifically what his duties in the business were to be.

“Thus,” he said, “in New York I was welcomed with open arms and Minnesota praised to the skies. Now, however, I am being accused as if I were a traitor, for being constructive and trying to accomplish something through round table discussions rather than playing politics and continuously fighting.

Reciting the history of his dealings with Hays, he said:

“I have been accused of being a Hays man, also a Zukor man, and now a Finkelman and Cohen man. They say I am subsidized. If working for the interests of exhibitors and myself is being subsidized, I am. Fighting without cause cannot accomplish anything. Round table discussions are what is needed, not the quarrel with anyone. I will fight Hays, producers, or anyone else who is working contrary to the exhibitors’ best interests. I will fight every republication of forms, but will work for the benefit of the masses.”

Steffes outlined a plan he has in mind to reduce the cost of insurance. He condemned the tax that has existed so far as the taxation situation is concerned and urged a non-buying attitude until the excessive length of features is eliminated.

Steffes refused to make any comment on the exhibitor distributing plan other than to remind exhibitors that it is separate and distinct from the M. P. T. O., and should be treated as such. He made an interesting statement when he said that some exhibitors could not be blamed for refusing to make concessions when they were being threatened with competition.

“It isn’t rather inconsistent to ask a favor of a man on the one hand and give him a dagger in the other?” he suggested.

High production costs were condemned and a definite hint given as to the possible state-wide booking circuit of the Michigan M. P. T. O. was also there. He outlined the organization work of his unit and explained there re-financing plan evolved at the recent Chicago meeting. This will, in all likelihood, it was endorsed.

Before final approval of the uniform contract, the uniform contract will probably be endorsed. Many South and North Dakota exhibitors are seeking membership in the Minnesota unit which has succeeded in burying a number of the old-line grievances in exhibitor circles.

Plans under consideration would place Minnesota in the front of a fight to oppose future wars through the use of trailers and with the co-operation of the League to Enforce Peace.

Minnesota is also expected to insist that the convention at Chicago be an open one.

Sydney S. Cohen was asked to comment on those portions of the Steffes address referring to him. He said, in part:

“We are in thorough accord with Mr. Steffes in working for the interests of exhibitors. Steffes himself voted with other members of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. to reject the Hays contract and asked us to register him accordingly. If that is the break with Hays that Mr. Steffes has referred to, then he was party to the break.

“As to Mr. Steffes’ criticism of the current issue of Exhibitors Bulletin as an example of camouflaged mudslinging, we have only this to say. The Bulletin is an honest discussion of exhibitor problems in the light of present day events in New York City and other large centers, based on information received from state and regional gatherings from exhibitors in all parts of the United States.

“The attitude assumed by Mr. Steffes in regard to the Hays contract may or may not reflect the opinion of his fellow exhibitors in Minnesota, and after all, matters of that kind must stand or fall on the question of fact.

“There never was a time when Mr. Steffes or any other officer of the national organization of the M. P. T. O. or any exhibitor in the United States was not entirely welcomed at national headquarters, particularly when constructive thought helpful to the independent theater owners of the Country was the result from same. It is idle for Mr. Steffes to assume he is not now welcome at the headquarters. On the occasion of his last visit to National Headquarters, there was no other indication shown than that of extreme cordiality.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Engraved Announcement Card Used

For the showing of “The Christian” at B. F. Keith’s 61st St. N. Y., Edward Lewis, the manager, prepared engraved announcements in the form of an invitation, mailing them to a select list. The cards had a personal touch and consisted of four pages, three of which were blank, the fourth page bearing an announcement of the opening date.

Heavy Snow Fall Helps

Freeport, Ill.—Walter Nealand, local goodwill worker, who recently stopped out here on a tour of the key cities, used heavy snow fall to advantage, to put-over “The Christian.” Nealand got 100 double-laced block cards, tacked them on long pointed sticks, and stuck them in the snow banks along the main thoroughfares.

Omaha Dailies Help

Omaha—N. N. Fridenstein, director of publicity for the World Realty Co., used the Omaha newspapers for the “Mad Love,” snowing at the sun.

Fridenstein obtained four large portraits of John Dry, which occupied the upper half of the Daily News “Rectangular Pink section, underneath” printed an effective business setting caption ting-up with the picture. Other pictures were used in the same manner in the other Omaha dailies.

Baltimore—A comprehensive campaign touching various angles was conducted recently by Eugene Daly of the New theater, in connection with “The Town That Forgot God.” A week before opening, one-sheet teasers were posted on 500 boards throughout the city. They read: “Where is the town that forgot God?” 55 twenty-four sheets were also used. Invitations were extended to the leading clergymen to attend the opening night performances and many used the story of the picture as the theme for their daily Lenten services.

In the lobby a large streamer, bearing the name of the picture, was dropped from the roof of the theater extending over the front of the house. Cut-outs were used in the entrance and on the marquee. The newspaper advertising began a week prior to the opening and was increased daily until Sunday, when a quarter page display was used.

A tieup with a local deep store resulted in carrying “Town That Forgot God” on 25 delivery wagons. Special folder heralds were made, and 11,000 distributed among residences, hotels and stations, a prologue featuring the big storm in the picture was also a part of the program.

Paper Film

Being Developed by Dayton Company—Expected to Add Impetus to Use in the Home

According to the New York Herald, the Dayton Photoproducals Co., Dayton, O., has established a $1,000 factory for the purpose of manufacturing a film made of paper. The Herald describes the process in a following manner:

"In the new device the strip of film is the same width as the ordinary celluloid film. It is used in movie theaters and can be wound on similar reels. It is treated by a special process so that it will receive a photographic imprint similar to that on an ordinary film. The claim is made that at a series of pictures has been shot on one side of the strip the film can be turned over and a further series printed on the other side. The process is said to be such that each picture nearest the light can be projected through the strip without being fogged by the picture on the other side.

Talk of Pettijohn of Hays Organization as Secretary of Democratic National Committee

(F,Special to THE FILM DAILY)

French Lick Springs, Ind.—Following the election in Chicago, a number of important Democratic leaders came to French Lick for a little golf, and a good deal of talk about the political situation. All told there were about 60 men here, more or less prominent in the activities of the Democratic machine.

In the party was Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays organization, who came from Chicago. The pouting of the little pill continued as did the unofficial discussions. One result is the mention made of Pettijohn as the new chief of the Democratic National Committee.

Pettijohn returned from French Lick yesterday accompanied by Lloyd D. Willis. When asked about the report, he confirmed that he had played golf, but would not commit himself. However, he entered no denial.

Making "Vincennes"

Chronicles of America Co. on Fourth Production—Edwin L. Hollywood Directing

The Chronicles of America Pictures Corp., the producing company financially backed and supported by the Yale University Press, is now working on "Vincennes" the fourth picture of the series designed to trace the history since the days of Columbus.

Edwin L. Hollywood is now at work on the picture, the exteriors for which were constructed on a 35 acre plot taken over by the company at Whitestone, Long Island. Hollywood has made all of the pictures to date, "Columbus," in five reels;

Producers to Aid Educators in Studying Pedagogical Film Problem—Plan Re-editing

Five thousand dollars were pledged by producers and accepted by educators yesterday to study the pedagogical film problem.

Prominent producers who are members of the Hays organization and a committee of educators held a meeting yesterday. The money was volunteered by the producers so that active work in this connection could be launched. The first step will be a systematic exploration of the value of the large producers in order to ascertain what existing material can be utilized for this work. It is expected that some of this film can be used, but a good deal of re-editing will be the actual production of one class-room film along agreed lines with careful observation made of the preparation and will probably be necessary. In the Courts

The Ritchey Litho. Corp. has filed a default judgment for $666 in the Supreme Court against the Charles E. Bartlett Prod. of Gloversville, N.Y., for work done.

Supreme Court Justice Erlanger has signed a judgment dismissing the suit of Thorne Baker, a streetcar bankrupt for the National Dram Corp., organized in Delaware to make films, against Thomas Dixon where, as treasurer, treasurer of the company at various times between 1915 and 1921 to recover moneys alleged to have been paid improperly by the corporation to Dixon. The plaintiff has appealed.

The judgment states that during the period of time the court says was proper. The corporation paid him $10,000 in 1920 for fifth terest “A Man of the People,” and $10,000 in 1918 for a “Spanish” which he was told was an incorrect account, and in every home. They had the reels themselves developed to the required point six months ago. The company was prepared to put out the invention last October, when it was suddenly decided to recall the product because of an improvement in the projection machine, which would make the cheaper. They have since been striving to gain a projection machine which could be bought for about $50.

results. It was agreed that distribution would be necessary to enter the discussion at a later date, but this was not touched upon in any detail yesterday. One point talked about was the ideal manner of presentation: whether the lecture should be first given in the classroom and the subject shown in animated form, whether the film should be shown first or the film re-created and the subject discussed simultaneously.

The educators who were at the meeting will attend the luncheon today of the Visual Educational Ass'n at the Astor.

400 to Attend A. M. P. A. Dinner
Everything indicates that the A. M. P. A. "Naked Truths" dinner, to be given at the Biltmore on April 28, will be the most successful of the three annual events to date. With a seating capacity limited to 400 and applications coming in daily, the outlook is that every seat will be reserved at the time that the Prize Bloomer, which is being kept as a surprise, points the way to the dining hall.

Among the events calculated to stir the emotions of every one familiar with the industry will be the hanging of the immortals, the official installation of Clem Deniker, the laying of a pipe line from 729 7th Ave. to the incinerator, a welcome to W. Hays, and satires on well known pictures that have been successful or otherwise.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Telescope Shows Moon

Atlanta—O. A. Kantner exploiter, and H. E. Kingsmore, manager of the Howard, enlisted the services of a timeworn and the local distributor for Indiana trucks in putting across a street ballyhoo for "Glimpses of the Moon." The timer made a 15 ft. telescope mounted on a tripod. It was then placed on the truck and sent through the streets of the city. Banners tied up the picture and the telescope.

"Omar" Goes Sight-Seeing

Scheneectady—An old street ballyhoo with an ingenious twist was worked recently, during the run of "Omar the Tentmaker" at the Strand, "Omar," or his painted and turbaned 20th century namesake, toured the city streets in a car. It was called "Omar's Scheneectady Sightseeing Tour." This furnished the opportunity for a newspaper story on sights to see in Scheneectady.

Serving a Double Purpose

Shortly before the release date of "Are You a Failure?" the Al Lichtenstein Corp., stimulated the interest of exhibitors by a teaser mailing campaign containing a set of four postcards sent out separately from the exchanges. The teasers served a double purpose, of telling the picture to the exhibitor, and at the same time, suggesting to him an effective manner of selling it to his own patrons.

A Good Investment

Lowell, Mass.—Olmstead of the Missouri bought 100 copies of the photoplay edition of "Bella Donna" at 65 cents each and gave them to the Times as a premium for subscriptions. The Times printed a ¼ page ad announcing that every six-month subscription taken between July 1 and April 1, a book would be awarded, giving big display to the picture, and mentioning the fact that it is the first made by Pala Negri in America. This ad ran for ten days prior to the showing.

Lost and Found

The New York showin of "Lost and Found," at the Capitol, was exploited by Eddie Bonis, assisted by W. R. Fenning. A long herald, resembling a circus herald, printed on straw-colored paper, was used freely as well as a small leaflet and the ad was inserted in the "Lost" columns of the daily newspapers asking the finder to return the pearl and the keys to the manager of the theater and to retain the tickets as a reward.

Special Movie Edition

A co-operative tie up has been made by Hodkinson with Grosset & Dunlap, publishers for the "Man From Glengarry," by Ralph Connor. A special edition of the book will be published, in which illustrations from the film will be used. A special jacket will also be used on the film version.

Grosset & Dunlap have arranged for the printing of a special window card which will be sent out to all book dealers and jobbers.

Elaborate Teaser Campaign

Dayton—J. H. Lichtenstein, manager of the State conducted an elaborate teaser campaign in connection with the recent engagement of "The Town That Forgot God."

For weeks prior to the opening, Lichtenstein plastered Dayton with 7 x 11 cards printed in red and blue asking such questions as "Is Paris the Town That Forgot God?" Coming soon to the State Theater!" Giving no date and by substituting the names of other cities in the place of "Paris," the teaser became an effective salesman. Later, 10,000 additional cards were printed, the opening date.

"Barney" Puts This Over

Joe Weil, "U" exploiter, brought Barney Google and Spark Plug to actual life when "The Kentucky Derby" played at the Belmont last week.

Well obtained permission from the King Features Syndicate, which controls the cartoons, and used the team in conjunction with the racing feature. A decrepit looking horse was obtained and also a little man dressed up to look like the sign on the horse's back read: "Barney Google and Spark Plug" entered in the Kentucky Derby at the Belmont Theater today.

The man led the horse through the neighborhood streets for two days preceding the showing.

Using the Navy

Wilkes Barre, Pa.—Manager Ted Kelly and Vernon Gray, the Paramount exploiter, recently arranged for a very effective tie up with the navy recruiting officer for the Savoy during the showing of "Java Head.

Reilly and Gray sold the idea of tying up with the Chinese atmosphere of the picture. This got the A-Boards owned by the Navy and Marine Corps. On one side was yellow Chinese-like lettering urging men to see the wonders of China by joining the Navy, and the Navy and China was like paying a visit to Java Head.

The other side of the board contained stock publicity scenes from China issued by the Navy Dept.

Kicks Against Long Features

L. J. Jacobs, manager of the Strand, Escanaba, Mich. and secretary of Delhi Theaters, Inc., in a letter to THE FILM DAILY says:

"Wont you kindly use the influence of your publication, in such a way, as to impress upon the producer, the hardships that are being worked upon the exhibitor, by excess length of pictures?

"Present day picture lengths are going to do one of two things; either compel the exhibitor to show a night, or compel him to eliminate films, and this last mentioned is going to hurt the business, as I find my patrons do not care to watch nothing but a feature, and on the other hand, I don't consider it good business."

"Many of these seven, eight and nine thousand foot attractions could be cut to six, and greatly improved in so doing."

McCarthy Goes to Washingon

Charles E. McCarthy went to Washington yesterday afternoon to arrange for the showing of "The Covered Wagon" before President Harding, the Cabinet and diplomatic corps tonight.

Fox Suing F. & R.

(Mostly to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—Fox has filed a suit against the Twin City Amusement Estate, operated by Finkelsstein & Ruben, asking $25,000 damages. Fox alleges that last year the theater company failed to live up to a contract to play a series of pictures.

Cuts And Flashes

"Daddy" plays the Strand the week of April 22nd.

Universal has purchased "The Magician," by Somerset Maugham.

Ferdinand Luporini has purchased six "Big Boy" Williams westerns to Argentine.

Harry T. Morey has been signed for Distinctive for "The Green God," through Charles Walton.

Bebe Raniels, Antonio Moreno and "The Exciters" company have returned from a five weeks stay in Miami.

"Tumbleweed," by Hal G. Evans, has been sold to R. H. Macray of Los Angeles, by Brandt & Kirkpatrick.

Edward Small's office has placed Jack O'Brien in the cast of "Under the Red Robe," now in production by Cosmopolitan.

At the regular meetin of the A. M. P. A., yesterday, Horace Judge was presented with a folding desk clock.

Oscar C. Buchheister, who produced the art titles for "Enemies of Women," has completed titles for "The Bright Shawl," and is now engaged on titles for "Little Old New York."

Ten Reasons Why You Should Book This Picture

1. It is an unusual and different picture with an entirely new kind of a story.
2. It has everything in it to make it a box office attraction, a breaker of house records. It will make them laugh and cry and send them out of the theatre talking.
3. It is a picture of emotional realism, replete with heart throbs and human interest; full of sensational, thrilling entertainment.
4. It has more exploitation angles than five ordinary features that can be put over with small cost.
5. It is the kind of a picture that you can advertise big in the assurance that your audience will not be disappointed.
6. The title and the theme furnish a wealth of opportunity for the right kind of publicity.
7. From the first crank of the camera this picture was made with the box office in mind. It is the kind of a picture the public likes.
8. It has been ably and consistently produced with an all star cast. The photography is soft yet clear and the settings in harmony with the demands of the story.
9. It is a picture made especially for the exhibitors of America, a picture they can make a clean up with.
10. Above all it is

Reginald Denny in Jack London Story That Should Go Very Big

"THE ABYSMAL BRUTE"
Jewel—Universal

DIRECTOR ...................... Hobart Henley
AUTHOR .......................... Jack London
SCENARIO BY .................... A. P. Younger
CAMERAMAN .................. Charles Stumar

AS A WHOLE......Thoroughly enjoyable picture that contains sure-fire entertainment and will please everyone

STORY......Contains fine audience appeal and has been splendidly handled; a lot of interesting detail

DIRECTION......First rate; puts the material to good use and plays to the audience at all times

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Very good

LIGHTINGS .................... Good

PLAYERS........Reginald Denny an ideal type and does excellent work; Mabel Julienne Scott appears to try too obviously to impress; a well suited cast on the whole

EXTERIORS .............. Few, but they are attractive
INTERIORS .................. Appropriate
DETAIL ...................... Good

CHARACTER OF STORY......Society girl breaks engagement when she learns fiancé is a prize-fighter, but he wins her back in spite of herself

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 7,373 feet

In view of the cordial reception "The Leather Pushers" series received, it was a piece of fine judgment for Universal to select Jack London's novel, "The Abysmal Brute," as a vehicle for Reginald Denny, who is just the right type for the role of Pat Glendon and entirely capable of the part. The London novel certainly provides first rate screen material and has a far-reaching audience appeal in that it will prove interesting to the men folks from the prize-fight angle and to the women from the standpoint of romance.

And the two ideas have been splendidly blended together by A. P. Younger, who prepared the novel for the screen. But it remained for Hobart Henley to use the scenario to good advantage and he has done so almost without exception. "The Abysmal Brute" is completely satisfying to the exclusion of three more or less unimportant faults, two of which may be easily removed. And they are: first, the picture is a little too long and can still be cut to advantage; second, Henley has exaggerated some of his otherwise effective detail, such, for instance, as the sequence in which the mountaineer-fighter appears at the home of the rich girl and amuses her snobbish family by his lack of table manners—here Henley goes a little to the extreme, but this can also be toned down by cutting; third, Mabel Julienne Scott does not seem quite equal to the role of Marion Sangster.

While Miss Scott seems very sincere and is pleasing she is inclined to give the impression that she is working too hard to get the part over. Insufficient poise is what she lacks most. This is no handicap for the picture, however, and to the majority of picture patrons Miss Scott will probably prove thoroughly pleasing and satisfying. Then with the splendid performance of Reginald Denny, as the fighter-lover, there is surely enough for the picture to be enjoyable. The fight scenes are well staged and contain some fine thrills.

Henley sustains the interest very well all the way and intermittent comedy bits are first rate. At the outset there are some laughs that are great. When the young mountaineer's manager plans a fight with a husky Jewish boy, the latter's little shrimp of a brother protests (in Yiddish titles) that Jakey musn't fight with a "ham and egger." The comedy strain here is going to get laughs and later on some equally effective pathos may get tears—where the fighter-hero returns home to bury his father.

Fine Audience Appeal and Has Plenty of Exploitation Angles

A slight synopsis of "The Abysmal Brute" could hardly do it justice because it is not the mere outline of the theme that makes the picture, it is the wealth of splendid detail injected by Hobart Henley and the excellent performance of Reginald Denny that makes it an A1 entertainment. And it should have a universal appeal because you can make promises for both your men and women patrons.

Be sure to let your men folks know about the several fights staged in the picture and for their benefit play "The Abysmal Brute" up as a story of the prize ring, naming Jack London as the author. If you played Reginald Denny in "The Leather Pushers" series, your folks will surely want to see him in this. For your women folks promise the romance of a prize fighter and a society girl. You can rest assured your feminine clientele will "love" Denny, whose "fan" mail is likely to show a big increase after they see him in this. Universal exchanges will supply you with a very complete book of exploitation suggestions.

March 15, 1923.

My dear Mr. Rapf:-

I reached New York on Tuesday and the first thing I did was to go and see "BRASS." I confess I went with some trepidation; I had no idea how I should like my "child" in other clothes. But I confess I was pleasantly surprised. The spirit of the book - its raison d'être - is all there, and what more has an author a right to ask?

The conscientious effort that has been exerted to make the screen version of the story a first class film is all too obvious, and for this my thanks and due appreciation. In places it is a beautiful picture, in spots it has moments of bigness - never less is bad. Let me say here that I am a harsh critic, particularly where my own work has been altered or edited, and so what I have said of the photoplay you have made of "BRASS" is high praise from me.

I am sure that you will appreciate it when I say that for an author to see his puppets that have originated in his mind and lived there, strutting about on the screen, is a hard, tough, and - may I say - at best an unpalatable experience. I came to the Strand, therefore, prepared to curse; I came away pleased and marveling a bit. In many ways you have accomplished the impossible: you have transferred the spirit, the lesson, the purpose of the book onto the screen, and - still more difficult - you have put Mrs. G. in the picture! That is a real achievement.

Miss Irene Rich does as fine an impersonation of a character as I have ever seen on the screen. She is great. I think much of the picture's success is due to her splendid work. Please congratulate her for me. There is much evidence, too, of fine directing in the picture. I admired particularly some of the quick transitions and the fine judgement displayed in the omissions. On the whole, I think you have made "BRASS" a big picture and I congratulate you.

With all good wishes, I am

Very sincerely yours,

CHARACTER OF STORY........ Crook is cured of amnesia and regenerated through healing power of mountain man

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,800 feet

Like the majority of pictures of the present time, "The Soul Harvest" is much too long and this added to a story that lacks originality and some other elements requisite for a good entertainment, certainly doesn't make this latest Sanford production a satisfying attraction. When directors and producers finally get to the place where they realize the handicap of excess footage, there are going to be a lot better pictures on the market than there are now. At least half of the pictures put out suffer from over footage and in most cases it has more to do with spoiling the feature's chances as entertainment than even a weak story.

With "The Soul Harvest" the story itself is far from new. It is "The Miracle Man" with a variation but there is not a sufficiently strong or original twist to make it distinctive. You have the conventional crook situation in which there is a band, a master mind at the head of it, and the usual hero and heroine crooks who want to reform. Then comes the healer who brings about the regeneration of the whole band.

Of course there is incidental business that includes a robbery, romantic touch, and comedy. This latter quality, however, is conspicuously weak and even Frank Hayes' funny face close-ups hardly serve to bring laughs. Clifford starts the picture off at a good speed but it gradually slackens until after the fifth reel it just drags along to the ending with only the final regeneration sequence and the reunion of hero and heroine to be settled and it hasn't been done in a way to accumulate any particularly effective suspense.

The picture presents a healer which a special title introduces as "Peter the Healer," a character from life who lives in the mountains of California and claims to have a God-given power to heal. Pat O'Malley is a first rate hero and others in the cast fulfill requirements easily.
They'll Have To Be Mighty Fond Of Crook Stories To Like It

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

W. H. Clifford Prod.
"THE SOUL HARVEST"
Sanford Prod.—State Rights

There have been so many crook stories and so many of them similar to each other that it is hard to say just what drawing power another will have. If, however, you have not given your folks a crook picture lately you might get "The Soul Harvest" over satisfactorily. Of course where they like this type of picture and you know a repetition won't annoy them, you can still afford to play with it.

If you wanted to play the picture up on the theory of auto-suggestion, there is a possibility of interesting your folks from that angle. Catchlines will do to let them know it is a crook regeneration theme. The title may be a drawing card but it may lead them to expect a picture entirely different from what it is.

Nothing New In The Story But Has Good Appeal For Right Audience

AUTHOR ............... Leighton Osman and Hery Hull
SCENARIO BY ............. Hope Loring and Louis Duryea Lighton
CAMERAMAN ................. Arthur Martinelli
AS A WHOLE .............. A good "class" picture with first rate appeal for the right audience; will hardly be favored by a critical clientele STORY ............. Of a very familiar order with no new twists to give it distinction; at times quite slow-moving DIRECTION .............. Average; does well enough for the material and supplies adequate production
PHOTOGRAPHY ............. All right
LIGHTINGS ................. Standard
PLAYERS ............ Eileen Percy suitable as the "good" girl; Kenneth Harlan pleasing except when he demonstrates a case of nerves; others Wally Van, Lucille Hutton, Maxine Elliot Hicks EXTERIORS ................. Not many INTERIORS ................. Ample
DETAIL ...................... Some bad cutting CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Girl who vows to keep "straight" is rewarded by love of rich man and inherits fortune of girl she befriended
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... About 6,000 feet

This latest Principal Pictures release is what might be termed a "class" picture in that it will undoubtedly get over satisfactorily with certain audiences while it will not be very favorably received by others. It is decidedly the uneritical and more easily pleased patronage that will accept the offering in the light of entertainment. The theme is of the variety that appeals chiefly to the so-called down town trade where the struggles of the poor girl who tries to keep "straight" and the weakness of her pal who "gets herself a rich broker" is all very interesting.

But with the right audience you can probably do a thoroughly good business with the picture and Irving Cummings has handled the material in a way that makes the situations fairly absorbing. He establishes a fine sympathy for the heroine who strives against temptation and finally wins happiness for herself, and they'll be delighted with her good luck in securing a secretaryship at three hundred a month, as well as with her subsequent romance with her employer. It is all very good business of its kind and the development, for the most part, includes an accumulative interest in the girl and her efforts.

There is one sequence that is noticeably slow, however, where the girl becomes secretary to the young man who writes about psychology and whose servant frequently feeds him milk of magnesia for his nerves. The reason for these temperamental outbursts on the part of Kenneth Harlan is not quite apparent and the motions that Harlan goes through are rather silly. Production values are up to standard. Occasionally the cutting is bad, such, for instance, as the scene showing the girl, her sick pal and a doctor entering an automobile with the succeeding shot showing the doctor in the home of hero's mother. It may be that a title has been omitted here.

The theme at best is a familiar one and usually obvious to the extent that you know pretty well in advance what the outcome will be. Eileen Percy will be well liked as the "good" girl and Kenneth Harlan is the right type for the hero role. Harlan also does good work and the cast throughout is capable and well suited.

Story: Lory James becomes the secretary of young Duncan Van Norman while her pal Eunice goes off with a broker. Duncan is ready to marry Lory when his mother intervenes and just when there is about to be a reconciliation, with Duncan cut off from his inheritance, Lory inherits a fortune belonging to a little white plague victim she had befriended and once more the wedding is off. How Lory brings about the wedding is a good romantic touch.

Be Sure You Have The Right Crowd For This And Then It Should Be Easy
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You know best what type of entertainment goes best with your particular clientele and you will be the only judge for this one. It is decidedly a good number for the right house and will do a very satisfactory business if you have the audience for it. The picture will not please everyone so it is a matter of showing it where it will be favorably received.

The story is essentially one for a less critical crowd inasmuch as it does not contain any especially new or strong situations. They have been used in one form or another numerous times before. Just whether or not the theme will do for a family trade is a question. The situation including the decision of one of the girls to accept the apartment on Central Park West which her broker friend is to provide and some of the subtitles may make it unsuitable for such patronage. The title should prove attractive and should also be easy to exploit.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Miner plans revenge upon pal's step-brothers when they plot against him to secure brother's estate willed to him

George Goodchild's story may have been a much better one than it appears to be in the production provided by Colin Campbell. The scenario evidently wasn't prepared with care and the direction does not improve upon it to a very great extent. The development is choppy and there are too many near-climaxes in the telling. The result is an episodic feature with the interest dragging badly after each anti-climax. There is a lot of arbitrary business in this that is bound to prove annoying. Just as you expect things to straighten out nicely and get running smoothly, something occurs to blast your hopes, usually in the way of some improbable twist that the director has not succeeded in making convincing.

The picture opens with a death-bed scene—not the most pleasant way to begin a story. The locale immediately switches from the Klondike to England with the miner-hero turning from his boots and breeches to evening clothes and society. While this seems a bit far-fetched, it does lead to some rather interesting complications in which hero plans to have revenge upon the step-brothers of his dead pal who have tried to kill him in order to secure the estate willed to him by his pal. This promises to get exciting but the minute the girl appears on the scene, you know, long before the sub-title tells you, that hero will not have the heart to carry out his scheme when the brothers have such a charming sister.

Events following this are improbable and almost entirely lacking in conviction. You are given a series of would-be dramatic moments such as the shooting of hero by the girl when he refuses to carry out his threat to marry her by force. Next comes a jump back to the Klondike again with hero trying to forget and the step-brothers and their sister also in the Klondike with no satisfactory explanation as to their presence.

The chief fault of the picture is poor construction and through a not over careful direction the story suffers considerably and loses most of the entertainment value that it might have. It is possible that it will appeal to Dustin Farnum's admirers who will be satisfied with what he has to do. His performance is quite satisfactory although the role does not require anything unusual of him. Arline Pretty photographs badly in this.

May Do Adequately For Star's Admirers But Don't Make Promises

With "Bucking the Barrier" you might first consider whether or not the star is a drawing card at your box office. If he is you might book this one and satisfy your folks with it. While it isn't particularly strong in any way, the star's performance and the typical hero role he has may be enough to put it over.

However, do not make promises for the strength of the picture from a dramatic standpoint. Rather use the star's name and the title with catchlines such as: "What would you do if you planned revenge upon the person who attempted to take your life and then found yourself in love with his sister? It happens in 'Bucking the Barrier,' Dustin Farnum's latest Fox production at the blank theater.'

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Commissioner of licenses rescues Russian Princess during revolution
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 6,968 feet
Universal's latest offering, "Bavu," has been adapted from the stage play and makes, in its adaptation to the screen, the sort of picture that affords plenty of excitement and thrills that will satisfy those who like their entertainment to take this form, and in addition has been given a splendid cast with many well known names.

There is a colorful background of Russia right after the overthrow of the Czar. The opening scenes showing the meeting of the leaders of the new revolutionary government and the mass meeting of the rabble in the streets of the city, in the pouring rain, are very good and lead one to expect a serious and forceful drama of the new republic.

With Mischka's visit to Bavu's attic accompanied by the Princess, however, the picture develops along the lines of straight melodrama. Particularly noticeable in this scene is the use made of the revolving door at the entrance to the attic, one character going out while another comes in, again and again. However, the thrills are there all right, and the suspense is particularly well held in the bit in which Bavu plunges a sword into the basket in which Mischka has been hiding, the audience not being sure whether or not she is in the basket. The sequence in which Olga is walled up in the treasure vault is a bit gruesome, particularly the shot showing the dead hand. This whole sequence and the following ones could be tightened and the ending could also be cut to good advantage.

Wallace Beery gives a fine characterization as Bavu, the revolutionist, and has been given an excellent supporting cast. Forrest Stanley provides a good contrast in type to him as the lover and both Sylvia Breamer and Estelle Taylor are seen to good advantage. Martha Mattox also gets over a good bit as the grasping servant.

Story: Bavu, a greedy revolutionist, incites the people to burn the city. Princess Markoff is rescued by Mischka, a former servant, but now commissioner of licenses, who is in love with her. Wishing to take her out of the country, it is necessary to have the passport sealed with Bavu's ring. They go to Bavu's attic and a bitter fight ensues, ending in the death of Olga, Bavu's sweetheart, and the escape of the lovers. Bavu follows, but in a race over the snows is drowned.

Good Names and Action That Will Please Excitement Lovers

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

You can safely promise them plenty of thrills and a change from the average picture in "Bavu." The offering has been given plenty of exploitation and you can follow the same catchline—"Sh-h-h Bavu"—"Ever-lasting-ingly Exciting."

The names in the cast will bring them in without any trouble. Everyone who saw Wallace Beery in "Robin Hood" will want to see him in this. Forrest Stanley was the leading man in "Knighthood," and the others are all well known. The fact that it is a story of the Russian revolution is enough to interest plenty of people, but you had better let them know that it is not historically correct.

You can also talk about production values which, on the whole, are very worth while.

While the title may not be as strong as you might want, still you can attract with it by using the suggestion that a mystery and love story is told. This should help.

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Crook, pretending to have power to bring happiness to the soul, is regenerated by his own preaching

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,719 feet

There is a very sad disillusion in store for those who see John Gilbert's latest picture, "The Madness of Youth," because the first few reels of the picture promise an altogether original and interesting crook story and Jerome Storm in his direction has built up a splendid and mystifying suspense that is greatly shattered by the denouement reached in the climax. After so much that is interesting in the way of mysterious events and twists that distract you from every solution that you figure out, the spectator will certainly be disappointed in the time worn crook regeneration idea of "The Miracle Man" order. But this much can be said for Storm—he fooled his audience thoroughly in the early reels by keeping them ignorant of the exact nature of the theme. Or perhaps the credit—or blame—belongs to Joseph Franklin Poland who wrote the scenario.

The story has been rather elaborately mounted with the home of a millionaire as a playground for his frivolous children contributing a good deal in the way of trimmings for the story. There is a masque ball that has been done on a large scale with the house made into a snow palace with the usual side entertainments in the way of dancers and some "wild goings on"—to the extent that the heroine remarks via a sub-title "The party's getting rough," to which the audience will readily agree.

For the first three reels the identity of hero John Gilbert is pretty well concealed and you don't know just what to think—whether he is really a crook hired by the rich man to reform his ultra-modern son and daughter through mysticism. To this point the interest is splendidly sustained but once the regeneration business commences and Gilbert cannot bring himself to commit the robbery which took him three years to plan because "something happened inside of him," the interest begins to wane and the ending is quite flat.

The star does first rate work and until he succumbs to his faked soul-saving theories he makes the role of Javalie convincing and interesting. Billie Dove is good to look at as the girl he falls in love with.

Story: A stranger wins his way into the home of the wealthy Theo, Banning, whom he plans to rob. By pretending to have a spiritual influence he wins over Banning and his family but when it is time to rob the safe, Javalie is prevented by an unseen force and Banning gives him the chance to make good and start life over again, with his daughter's love for Javalie making it still easier.

Will Be All Right For The Average Audience And Star's Admirers

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you don't think they'll be annoyed by the way director Storm fools them with this one you can give it to them but it is disappointing to sit through three and a half reels of what promises to be a story different from the others and then to have it turn out to be the old crook regeneration theme. At any rate the suspense up to the point of the denouement is first rate and if they aren't too critical probably they won't be so terribly disappointed.

Where the star is popular you can appeal to his admirers with catchlines such as: "He planned three coats to commit a robbery and then couldn't go through with it. Find the reason in 'The Madness of Youth.' John Gilbert's latest Fox production." The title may stand exploitation but it isn't especially pertinent.

CHARACTER OF STORY......Chinese girl saves white man she loves from death at hands of dope peddlers, only to learn he loves another

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION...... About 5,000 feet

At one time there was a run on these Oriental dramas in which pretty young Lotus Blossom, or whatever the Chinese heroine's name happened to be, fell in love with a white hero, with some obstacle eventually causing the dainty Oriental maid much sorrow and blasted romance. There haven't been many pictures of this kind recently so probably "The Purple Dawn" will not prove as conventional as an outline of the story might sound. But, on the whole, there is little in Charles R. Seeling's story that has not been used before.

The picture has been adequately produced and the material used to good advantage in most instances. Seeling has injected plenty of attractive atmosphere and a good deal of realism with his efforts in the latter direction just a trifle too strenuous. It is more than likely that the picture will have to be cut before it secures the approval of the New York censorship board, or if not it will surely be subject to eliminations in certain states where they are rigid. And for the general benefit of the picture as entertainment there are certain scenes that should come out before the offering is released.

The brutal attack of the sea captain upon the hero, where he beats him and then horse-whips him is greatly overdone and far too brutal to please the eye or even to be sincere realism. Later on the sequence in the river shack needs toning down. The stabbing of the Chinaman and the shots showing the captain's Chinese accomplice starting to strangle the hero with a queue are far too gruesome.

The plot is nicely developed and the interest very well sustained. Seeling secures a sympathy for the little Chinese heroine and has used good judgment in not adding another tragedy in the death of the girl when she learns that her white lover belongs to another. Instead of drowning herself, as it appears she will for moment, a title informs you that she will go back to her promised husband and strive to be a faithful wife.

Bessie Love is pleasing as the little Chinese girl and Wm. E. Aldrich suitable as the hero. Edward Peil, always capable of portraying a villainous Chinese character convincingly, is very good as Wong Chong, the tong leader who distributes the dope smuggled in by Bert Sprotte, as "Red" Carson, the sea captain.

Say It Deals With The Love Of A Chinese Girl For A White Man

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There are always a goodly number who can be interested with promises of a story with Oriental atmosphere so you might make a special point of this in your announcements if you show "The Purple Dawn." The title can be played up with catchlines and with suggestions of an Oriental romance in which a little Chinese girl saves the life of the white man she loves only to find that he belongs to a white girl.

Your romance lovers will be satisfied with the picture. You might make sure that some of the gruesome touches have been toned down if you cater to a family trade or those who object to such grim realities as some of those shown. If you think the dope smuggling angle of the story will get it over, you might play up that side of it although this will be essentially for those looking for more sensational pictures. Bessie Love's name can be used. Others in the cast are not as well known.
"When Fighting’s Necessary"—Range Rider—Pathe
Type of production ........................................ 2 reel western
This one of the Range Rider series contains some excellent situations and a nicely handled bit of romance which will no doubt be found satisfying entertainment for audiences which look favorably on this particular kind of short reel. As is the case with the majority of this series, "When Fighting’s Necessary" has been written and directed by Ford Beebe and Leo Maloney, with Pauline Curley playing opposite the featured player. The drama uses a little unnecessary footage getting started, but after that moves at a fast clip until the last fade-out. Maloney and Buck Neville are both in love with the little school teacher from the East. Buck is the head of a gang of rustlers and after warning Maloney's brother, a Ranger, take refuge in a cache. Maloney by a ruse winds them up and heads them toward the town as a posse, headed by the girl comes p.

"The Dude"—Cameo—Educational
Type of production ................................. 1 reel comedy
Where they like "hick" comedies this may get over all right but Jimmy Adams, the featured player, has been seen recently to much better advantage, although this may be due to a great extent to the story. The humor in "The Dude" is chiefly of the slap-stick variety, and quite a few barnyard animals are used to get laughs, the stunt of having a hen drop an egg down a lady's back during a barndance being used again. Jimmie, a country lad, has gone to the city to become a singer but failing returns to marry the farmer's daughter, Virginia Vance. Jimmie turns out to be a better dancer than a singer or farm hand and distinguishes himself at a barndance.

Al St. John in "The Author"—Fox
Type of production ...................................... 2 reel comedy
It's too bad they couldn't keep up the starting pace of this latest Al St. John comedy. directed by St. John, because it certainly gets off at a fine clip with a big thrill in which the comedian, as an author, is sitting on the edge of a cliff waiting for an inspiration for a story, and the cliff gives way with him. This is followed by a wind storm with the gale carrying St. John through the tree tops and in all directions in such amusing fashion that it is a pity there wasn't more of it. The remainder of the two reels consist of a series of knock-outs with St. John cleaning out a whole kingdom to save the fair heroine. The comedy has its laughs but there aren't enough of them.

"Algeria"—Fox Educational
Type of production ................................. 1 reel educational
The current edition of Fox educational contains a series of views of Algeria, an apparently unprogressive place, judging from the pictures included in this offering. The reel shows the making of olive oil, the chief industry of the country. There are a lot of people who may take a sudden dislike to olive oil when they see the way it is made, especially where a native is shown crushing the fruit with her feet. Other scenes show how the Algerian family eats out of the one bowl, how the shops are conducted on the "open market" plan—in the street, as well as others that should prove interesting where they like to know "how the other half of the world lives."

"Easy Terms"—Universal
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel comedy
Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, the two tramp comedians, are seen to fairly good advantage in this one reel. They are a good team and should please the average picture-goer with their stuff.
This time they are captured by two escaped convicts and made to change clothes. Of course the prison guards chase them but by a trick the tramps get the guards' clothes, surrendering however, when they meet the warden's daughter who explains that unless the convicts are caught before the governor arrives, her father will lose his job. Nervy Ned marries the girl and takes his sentence for life.

Type of production ..................................... 1 reel magazine
Exceedingly interesting are the scenes in Pathcolor showing the habitations of the first Americans in New Mexico in this issue of Pathe Review. A new trick subject is introduced under the title of "Picture Scraps" which shows bits of landscape that finally fit together and become a motion picture. The folks will wonder how it's done. A subject that will interest the ladies particularly is the manner in which Japanese women have their hair "built," so that it will stay combed for three or four weeks.

"School Days in Japan"—Fox Educational Type of production ..................................... ½ reel educational
A very definite idea of the progressiveness of the Japanese may be gleaned from this latest Fox Educational picture which includes many interesting views of the people who have come to be known as the "Yankees of the East" because of their industry and commercial prowess. The subject contains numerous scenes showing the educating of the nation's children. Those of the schools showing the youngsters learning to do arithmetic both in their own figures and Arabic at the same time are especially interesting as are those showing the students at work in chemistry laboratories, cooking classes, etc. The number is thoroughly interesting and a worth while educational entertainment.

"The Big Show"—Our Gang Comedies—Pathe
Type of production ..................................... 2 reel comedy
This latest of the Our Gang Comedies is a sure enough delightful kid picture that is going to please them young and old, and then some. The grown-ups will experience a thrill at the recollection of the "cutting up" of the gang this time when Sunshine Sammy and his white pals stage a circus. The biggest laugh in the two reels is the merry-go-round that the kids rig up. They have a cat in a box suspended from one of the seats with a dog tied to the next one in back. The idea is to have Miss Pussy invite Mr. Dog to a chase and thereby provide the motion for the merry-go-round. This stunt got a bigger laugh at the Capitol than the funniest thing in the feature. The menagerie consisting of domestic animals painted up to represent wild ones and with certain ready-made alterations in the case of a pig made to represent a rhinoceros, etc., is another good laugh, but there are a lot of them equally as good. "The Big Show" is one comedy that you want to mark down on your book right way.

EXTERIORS .............................. Few
INTERIORS ............................. Adequate

DETAIL ................................. Far too much

CHARACTER OF STORY....... Ex-service man makes his goal each time in spite of all obstacles

Why, oh why, do directors continue to spoil good stories by making their pictures yards too long? There doesn't seem to be any answer to it and they keep right on doing it. Peter B. Kyne's "The Go-Getter" is a thoroughly amusing and interesting comedy piece that contains first rate situations and enough laughs to satisfy anyone but E. H. Griffith, while he does bring out the humor and satisfactorily registers the laughs, smothers them so completely with a lot of excess footage that their effect is soon lost and forgotten.

In five, or possibly six, reels, "The Go-Getter" could have been made continuously funny, and a pleasing feature but in nearly eight reels—all but a couple of hundred feet—it loses weight right along and the comedy business goes flat for the want of speeding up.
The sequence, for instance, in which hero goes hunting for a blue vase—the ruse of his boss to find out what he is made of—is the chief offender in long distance footage. The spectator gets so tired waiting for something to actually happen that even the corkging fine fight that is finally arrived at, fails to go over the way it should.

There are other equally worth comedy bits that fail to get the laughs they should merely because it has taken too long to get to them. The early reels are not as conspicuously at fault in this direction as the latter and the humorous business in connection with hero's effort to land a job is of the right order, bringing the right, spontaneous sort of comedy stunts. Griffith overcomes his desire for over-footage toward the close and the climax is first rate, with some fair thrills along with laughs, bringing the story to an agreeable conclusion with the inevitable ending.

T. Roy Barnes is very much at home in this kind of fictional role where no obstacle is too great for him to overcome, no boss too stern to be won over and no girl capable of of saying "no" to his "will you?" He has some mighty interesting ways of doing things especially by way of getting himself a job with a certain concern by first having cards printed and presenting one to his anticipated employer with the explanation that he wanted to be ready in case he was hired. The same trick applies to his proposal to the girl. He shows her the wedding announcement and hopes she'll acccept. Seena Owen fills the bill as the girl.

Needs Cutting Badly And Then It Will Stand A Better Chance Of Pleasing

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There are good comedy moments, some first rate laughs and good amusement at times in "The Go-Getter" and your folks will probably enjoy the picture's good bits but they'll also not enjoy the long dull stretches without any laughs. All this could be avoided by a re-editing of the picture and if they wanted to take the trouble to do it, the picture would be improved about a hundred per cent.

Exhibitors who don't think the length of the feature will be any draw-back can easily make promises for it and among the things to talk about are the cast, the comedy, a few thrills and the airplane-train chase in the climax. Use the author's name for the benefit of those familiar with his writings and who will be interested to see a picturization of his "The Go-Getter." The theme and title suggests stunt exploitation that should attract.

Hope For Europe

Both Zukor and Kent Optimistic
Over Foreign Market—See Def-

Adolph Zukor and Sydney R. Kent both agree that there are signs on the European film horizon that the future will be more rosy for everybody concerned.

They feel that the definite, concrete results to be obtained from the European market are inconsequential at the moment, but that a consistent process of building goodwill, the enterprising American film man will eventually reap his harvest in that field. Kent, particularly, feels that more up-to-date theaters are needed in Europe. He said on Saturday that the present rate of exchange in itself worked hardships because no matter what the American valuation of foreign currency is, a French national or a German national considers the franc or the mark as his standard and it is on that basis that he wants to do business.

into the country. The effect of this will be that exhibitors in Ireland will have to pay a largely increased duty on pictures. A deputation waited upon the High Commissioner, and it is hoped that the difficulty will be removed. The unfair part of this tax is that American pictures coming to England will have to pay a duty, and upon going into Ireland another duty. Id. per foot, which practically means that hardly any film will be sent to the Irish Free State.

"Robin Hood" has finished its run at the London Pavilion, where it has achieved success. It will be followed by "The Christian." This opens today. " Peg O'My Heart" is going strong at the Palace and has had a fine reception from the critics.

Tom Terriss is making headway with his picture in Egypt. This is entitled "Fires of Pa'ife" and features Wanda Hawley, Nigel Barrie, and Peter Cordova.

Denison Clift has finished "This Freedom," which will be presented at one of the theaters in the near future.

Walter Wanger has just returned from an extensive tour of the Continent, having visited Paris, Stockholm, Copenhagen and several other big cities. His law suit with Provincial Cinematograph Theatres is expected to be heard in about six weeks.

Feast did it for him. All First National folk. Except the trade press there. All happy. Schwab's wasn't there to see the money being spent. So he had a good time in Philadelphia.

O'Reilly's Fine Party

Then came O'Reilly's induction to office. At the Ritz, Thursday. Big party. Except for the folks who came from the trade papers. Had a punk table position. Up in the gallery.

And walked out on the party. Properly. (If you can't take care of your guests. Don't invite them. If you do. Take care of them. This is Rule 1. Of Etiquette and Courtesy.) However, be that as it may. Many important folk. Charley O'Reilly, of course. First. But, as Harry Reichenbach said. So many kindly words said for Hays. Was a question whether it was Hays' dinner.

Incidentally Harry was the best speaker. As usual. Pulled some great stuff. Said he never expected to live long enough to see anyone named O'Reilly head a New York exhibitor organization.

Charley Pettijohn started things. Said he would like to call by name the people who had "four-flushed" during the past year. And added it was best to forget some things that have happened. (Wonder. If by chance. He had in mind Sydney Cohen?) Then went on to talk of how 115 bills had been presented in various states. All affecting exhibitors. And how the Hays organization had the situation under control. Added the lay had gone by when apologizing for the industry was necessary. Paid big tribute to Hays. Who never smiled a smile.

Jimmy Walker sent a wire saying only the presence of four doctors at his bed prevented him from attending. Hiram Abrams sent a long wire of regrets. For his absence. Nary an applaud. Very awkward moment. Saved by Hays starting his speech. Complimented O'Reilly. And the TOCC. Insisted confidence and co-operation were necessary. All through the industry. And in the end it would come. Suggested sending Walker a wire of sympathy. Everybody cheered. Wire was sent. But bellboy didn't know who was going to pay for it.

Twinkling Stars

Flock of stars then introduced. Martha Mansfield, Nita Naldi, Ann Forrest, Hope Hampton, Allan Dwan. (Granlund wanted to know how Dwan 'broke' into the party). Betty Blythe, Claire Windsor, "Roxy"—just how he was figured as a "star" still is to be explained—even if he is a star at presentation. Greatest showman in this country. Conrad Nagle, Marion Davies, Monty Love, Texas Guinan and cute little Madge Bellamy. Then came the riot. Mary Carr—the mother of the screen. Mary got more applause than any other star. And she had to make a speech. Said she couldn't talk because she didn't have her children with her. Got a great hand. Lew Cody said he thought superlative advertising wasn't so good; thought all would be better off without it.

Marcus as an Arbitrator

Then Granny unexpectedly called on Marcus Loew. Who was all fussed up. And started a big laugh. When he said somebody (meaning Granny) was "going to get hell tomorrow." Praised Hays. Said he hoped he would lead the producers organization forever. Then told of being an arbitrator. Between Laemmle and Selznick. When they had a row over the Broadway Theater. "At the end of five months I had lost the friendship of both of them," he said. "That was my first taste of arbitrating. And my last."

Among Those Present

Besides all the important local exhibitors: Jules Michaels. And the up state crowd. Including Charley Hayman. And the (Continued on Page 6)

Missus. Harry Warner and big brud Abe, Oscar Price, Harry Goetz, Eddie Saunders, of Metro; Jimmy Grainger, Goldwyn; "Buxx" of Famous; Sam Zierler, Isaac E. Chadwick and many other exchange men and salesmen. It was a great party. Particularly when Granlund started his show in the Crystal Room.

MADGE BELLAMY'S PARTY

Was a nice affair at lunch on Friday. The new Tom Ince star is very pretty and stopped here en route on a tour through the country to invite the Governors and Mayors of all the cities and states to visit the Monroe Exposition in Hollywood next July. She made a sweet little speech and was on her way.

Friday night there were two more parties. But these were private. But Joe Schenck and Sol and Irving Lesser attended one and Ben Schulberg and Jack Bachmann the other.

PREPAREDNESS

Is a belief. Of Joe Plunkett's. Who made every usher at the Strand. Carry smelling salts last week. To help revive those nervous individuals. Who gave way under the strain of Harold Lloyd's antics in "Safety Last." That's service.

RIESENFELD'S TRIUMPH

The "Doctor" was a whale of a hit. At the Palace. With his combined Rialto-Rivoli orchestra. Doing his classical jazz. Incidentally made some other Broadway impressarios envious. Anxious to get their orchestras in the Palace. Talking about musicians. Understand Hearst will pay Victor Herbert $75,000 a year for conducting the orchestra at his house—the Park—on the Circle. Beginning in the Fall.

GOLF HUMOR

Entering the coming Spring tournament Cheeroi Garrett sends his check. And answering the request for his "average round" says: "The sky's the limit." Cheeroi hasn't yet discovered the difference between golf and stud.

Watch for Garrett's British golf costume on June 6. At Belleclair. All new. It's a treat. If he goes round in less than 145 blame it on the clothes.

By the way entries could come in faster. What's holding them up? DANNY.

TROUBLE IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

Council Bluffs—Exhibitors here are afraid that operators will start trouble again. Despite the fact that M. W. Paden was convicted last week for throwing a stink bomb, the same thing was repeated at the Liberty. A bill designed to punish such acts has been introduced in the Legislature.

Omaha—A. R. Praver, head of the M. F. T. O. of Nebraska and Iowa, charged that the exhibitor unit was approached by a man who offered to kill the Sunday closing bill for a sum varying between $2,000 and $3,000. Praver, who would not divulge the individual's name, refused to consider the offer.

Jackson M. P. Corp. Gets Bronx Plant From Hearst in August—
Reports Link Shuberts
It is understood that the Jackson M. P. Studio Co. is planning to enter production in the fall upon the expiration of the studio lease held by William Randolph Hearst.
Commission Prods. have occupied the studio for some time, but in August the lease expires. At that time Jackson of which W. H. Weissinger is president, expects to operate the plant and make from six to ten pictures a year. It is reported that the Shuberts and Joseph L. Rabin are interested with Jackson. The studio is at Westchester, Forrest and Jackson Aves. in the Bronx. Parts of "Knighthood," "Enemies of Women," and "Little Old New York" were made in it.

Grey Due Monday
Albert L. Grey of the Griffith organization is due back from Europe on Monday.

Pettjohn on Top
Charles C. Pettjohn of the Hays office left last night for a short trip. Upon his return he plans a longer one to the coast.

Montagne With 1st Nat'l
Los Angeles—Earl J. Hudson has used Edward J. Montagne, scenario writer, to do a series of adaptations of books and plays for First National. The first assignment will be "The Swamp Angel."

Cohen Off on Trip
Sydney S. Cohen and the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. left last night to attend the Western Pennsylvania M. P. T. O. meeting. From there, they will go to Chicago where a meeting will be held on Friday. One of the subjects to be discussed will be the Michigan financing plan.

Graham Here for "Expo"
Garrett Graham, advertising manager of the Standard Film Laboratories of Hollywood, arrived here yesterday in his capacity of special correspondent for the American Historical Revue and M. P. Exposition. He was part of a large delegation from the coast, Ruth Roland was also in the party, bearing invitations to various mayors and governors. She will cover cities not included in Madge Bellamy's itinerary.
In the Courts

Suit has been filed in the Supreme Court by William Matthews against the Whaling Film Corp., for $9,900 alleged to be due for legal services, and application for an attachment was asked because the defendant is a Massachusetts corporation. Matthews said that after the Motion Picture Commission of New York had refused to grant a license to "Down to the Sea in Ships" unless the defendant eliminated some of the scenes he was engaged to ask a rehearing on the ground that the picture had cost $200,000 and an offer of $500,000, had been received for it, and its value would depend on the reception it received in New York. The plaintiff says he induced the commission to reverse its ruling, and because of the importance of that action, he believes the services were worth what he charges.

"Phonofilm" at Rivoli

"Phonofilm," Dr. Lee de Forest's invention which synchronizes music and motion pictures, is at the Rivoli this week. The Times, in commenting on it stated yesterday:

"The first picture was called 'The Gavotte' and showed a man and woman dancing to old-time music. The sound, which synchronized with the movements of the dancers, was somewhat scratchy, and it seemed surprising, that while one could hear the instruments being played for the dancers, one could not hear the slightest sound of a footfall. Hence it seemed as if the dancers were performing in rubber shoes. One could expect to hear the sound of the silver tines of the woman, but all that issued from were the strains of musical instruments.

In another picture, called 'The Serenade,' there were four musicians playing on cymbals, cornet, and string instruments. Dr. de Forest does prove that he can reproduce sound, just as good as that from an old phonograph, and it is impressive because it keeps time with what the musicians are obviously doing in the picture. Possibly the most interesting feature in this respect of the evening was an Egyptian dance, the tones from the phonofilms keeping perfect time with the graceful movements of the dancing girl on the screen."

ppears to try too obviously to impress; a well suited cast on the whole

EXTERIORS ............... Few, but they are attractive
INTERIORS ................. Appropriate

DETAIL ......................... Good

CHARACTER OF STORY...Society girl breaks engagement when she learns fiance is a prizefighter, but he wins her back in spite of herself

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 7,373 feet

In view of the cordial reception “The Leather Pushers” series received, it was a piece of fine judgment for Universal to select Jack London’s novel, “The Abysmal Brute,” as a vehicle for Reginald Denny, who is just the right type for the role of Pat Glendon and entirely capable of the part. The London novel certainly provides first rate screen material and has a far-reaching audience appeal in that it will prove interesting to the men folks from the prize-fight angle and to the women from the standpoint of romance.

And the two ideas have been splendidly blended together by A. P. Younger, who prepared the novel for the screen. But it remained for Hobart Henley to use the scenario to good advantage and he has done so almost without exception. “The Abysmal brute” is completely satisfying to the exclusion of three more or less unimportant faults, two of which may be easily removed. And they are: first, the picture is a little too long and can still be cut to advantage; second, Henley has exaggerated some of his otherwise effective detail, such, for instance, as the sequence in which the mountaineer-fighter appears at the home of the rich girl and amuses her snobbish family by his lack of table manners—here Henley goes a little to the extreme, but this can also be toned down by cutting; third, Mabel Julienne Scott does not seem quite equal to the role of Marion Sangster.

While Miss Scott seems very sincere and is pleasing she is inclined to give the impression that she is working too hard to get the part over. Insufficient poise is what she lacks most. This is no handicap for the picture, however, and to the majority of picture patrons Miss Scott will probably prove thoroughly pleasing and satisfying. Then with the splendid performance of Reginald Denny, as the fighter-lover, there is surely enough for the picture to be enjoyable. The fight scenes are well staged and contain some fine thrills.

Henley sustains the interest very well all the way and intermittent comedy bits are first rate. At the outset there are some laughs that are great. When the young mountaineer’s manager plans a fight with a husky Jewish boy, the latter’s little shrimp of a brother protests (in Yiddish titles) that Jerry mustn’t fight with a “ham and egger.” The comedy strain here is going to get laughs and later on some equally effective pathos may get tears—where the fighter-hero returns home to bury his father.

Fine Audience Appeal and Has Plenty of Exploitation Angles

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

A slight synopsis of “The Abysmal Brute” could hardly do it justice because it is not the mere outline of the theme that makes the picture, it is the wealth of splendid detail injected by Hobart Henley and the excellent performance of Reginald Denny that makes it an A1 entertainment. And it should have a universal appeal because you can make promises for both your men and women patrons.

Be sure to let your men folks know about the several fights staged in the picture and for their benefit play “The Abysmal Brute”.up as a story of the prize ring, naming Jack London as the author. If you played Reginald Denny in “The Leather Pushers” series, your folks will surely want to see him in this. For your women folks promise the romance of a prize fighter and a society girl. You can rest assured your feminine clientele will “love” Denny, whose “fan” mail is likely to show a big increase after they see him in this. Universal exchanges will supply you with a very complete book of exploitation suggestions.

It's all your fault and you've got to help me get out of the quandry I'm in.

You sold me the space I used in your paper on the feature production, THE MYSTERY OF KING TUT-ANKH-AMEN'S EIGHTH WIFE.

Since the introduction of the 'AD' I have been swamped with calls, telephones, telegrams and letters from distributing organizations and state right exchanges.

Both mean quick money. What'll I do?

Big Teaser Campaign at Capitol

Conducted by Howard Dietz and Eddie Bonus, Goldwyn launched an extensive teaser campaign for the "Souls for Sale" showing at the Capitol. The campaign was started by posting the subways and elevated stations with three-sheet teasers two weeks in advance of the opening. The cards read: "Is Your Soul For Sale?" Later one and two sheet placards were substituted giving the name of the theater and the date.

A tie-up with A. L. Burt & Co., publisher who published a special edition of the book, resulted in 22 window displays in book stores and in Liggett drug stores. Arrangements have been made with the publishers to use this tie-up in all the large cities throughout the country.

Kidnaps are being reported to the police, who are handling the case.

Throwaways, etc.

Characters from Story a Hit

Baltimore—Although street stunts, throwaways, posters and photographs were used for the run of "Trifling Women" at the New Theater, the stunt that caused the most comment held up traffic on Lacrosse Ave. for an hour. Zareda, the vampire in the story, and a character representing Ramon Navarro, appeared on the thoroughfare in an automobile, visiting department stores, hotels and the Masonic Circus.

"The Hero" in Yonkers

Yonkers—Proctor's theater put over "The Hero" with the aid of some stunts. Two men dressed in soldiers' uniforms acted as sentries in front of the theater attracting a great deal of attention and causing much comment from passers-by. Special advertising and posters were also used for the engagement. A prelude which featured "My Hero," the song from "The Chocolate Soldier," helped greatly.

Casting "Magic Skin"

Los Angeles—Bessie Love and Carmel Myers will play two of the important roles in "The Magic Skin." Miss Love has just completed work in "The Eternal Three."

William Farnum's new picture is "The Gun Fighters," with Doris May as leading lady.

Bella Donna—F. P.-L. Rivoli

DAILY NEWS—Pola Negri's first American picture is a pronounced vindication of the superiority of American light and camera work, but does not speak as well for the taste of the public in its choice of first vehicles in which the foreign star was to appear in this country. Bella Donna is just "Bella Donna," a rather trashy story.

The picture has been entirely mounted and photographed, but its only significance is the promise it gives of future work in this country.

EVENING WORLD—We can honestly say that this film is a disgrace since the duchess, Miss Negri came into screen view we have actually consumed less of her presence. Of course, we always admired her art honestly, but now particularly regret to see her own talents; she has shown herself to be a characteristic and one that is as good as being a star of the world. Bella Donna is a lamentable production.

GLOBE—At last "Bella Donna" comes to town, and from the looks of the crowds that pressed upon the Rivoli Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, it will be in town and out there for some time to come.

"Bella Donna" is a stock play that can make the role theatrical and artistic. This play appears to be thoroughly

Herald—Miss Negri was scheduled for a distinguished role in the physiological picture, but that is all that amounts to it. She is a star of the world.

Bella Donna is a fine character, and it is a creditable production from the standpoint of the film industry.

The story of the picture is a remarkable proper impression of a world star. Negri's character is a profound one, and the story of the picture is based on the personality of Negri. The picture has been directed skillfully by G. B. H. Roper. It looks as though the picture may be a success, and as we doubt its success, it is a credit to Negri and her work in the industry.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The extra-ordinary talent of Pola Negri is the power to project through the cinema a personality so fascinating that one might have thought it necessary for her to present herself corporeally in order to manifest the full value of her animal magnetism. Pola Negri is not she never ceased. She is all her own, always brilliant, in any situation whatsoever.

MAIL—Many motion picture actors might pride in so small manner if they had heard from Jackie Coogan. Bella Donna is the story of a world star. Negri's character is a profound one, and the story of the picture is based on the personality of Negri. The picture has been directed skillfully by G. B. H. Roper. It looks as though the picture may be a success, and as we doubt its success, it is a credit to Negri and her work in the industry.

Tribune—This picture is one of the finest ever made for Paramount, but even one who has seen the production itself is the acting of Pola Negri.

Times—Pola Negri's most whole-hearted into the part of the conscientious flirt with such art and such animal magnetism as the film and story are entirely swamped by the character of Miss Negri that she creates.

Tribune—For some reason "Bella Donna" seems to have 100 per cent better entertainment than when we saw it in its home studio, for Pola Negri is once more our favorite actress. Negri's character is a profound one, and the story of the picture is based on the personality of Negri. The picture has been directed skillfully by G. B. H. Roper. It looks as though the picture may be a success, and as we doubt its success, it is a credit to Negri and her work in the industry.

World—Pola Negri had everything in her favor when she undertook the role of "Bella Donna." The result is eminently satisfactory. Pola Negri even succeeds in the most distinguished dominoes in cinema, her character of "Bella Donna" is just as she creates. The direction and the photography are excellent.

AMERICAN—There is a period of three minutes in this film into which Jackie Coogan crowds enough action to carry the entire picture into its climax of success. This is one of those films which covers that Old Gallo, the street peddler, who has befriended him, in dramatic performance is a revelation to the fanatics of this year's juvenile film. The skill of his work in his comic bit in the boy in tragedy. There are just three minutes of "Jacky C," and he can be a delightfully unforgettable. Daddy is a delightfully unforgettable picture because he is in it.

EVENING JOURNAL—It seemed as though a cheap, elemental and slightly obvious story had been laid into the hands of Jackie Coogan. After the final exposure of "Daddy," the movie pushed the little story back where it belonged, and hopefully thanked Sol Lesser for having accepted this script in spite of its imperfections. The reason for the gratitude is that "Daddy," just because of its short comings as a story, enables Jackie Coogan to prove beyond a doubt that he is a star.

SEEN—Jackie Coogan will always remain first in our heart as the most appealing little chap in all the films. His own tragedy could be seen in picture in competition with motion pictures will come when we see Miss Negri and see with you like the screen or not as a general rule, for all means see Jackie Coogan in "Daddy," it won't help any one but one.

Globe—Jackie Coogan completely establishes the fact that he is a rare, genuine, and very convincing star, and as the most exacting and expectent theatre-goer could ask. By it a most ordinary story is veritably lifted from mediocrity to something akin to greatness. The picture has been directed skillfully by G. B. H. Roper. It looks as though the picture may be a success, and as we doubt its success, it is a credit to Negri and her work in the industry.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Jackie Coogan is fast developing into a truly remarkable actor. While "Daddy," the feature picture at the Strand Theatre, does not compete with his former vehicles as a story, his work in it is the best that he has done.

SUN—Little Jackie Coogan is a wonderful actor or to use the phrase a director who knows his business thoroughly. It's hard to say which is the case. But he doesn't make any real difference about the result. He is excellent, whoever is responsible. Jackie is really superb in "Daddy," the equally wonderful, the boy's picture is due entirely to the spontaneity of his actions—the fact that he 'd set any as a young one. We shall always remember how this remarkable young actor played in the scene of the death of his parents. The picture has been directed skillfully by G. B. H. Roper. It looks as though the picture may be a success, and as we doubt its success, it is a credit to Negri and her work in the industry.

Tribune—We put off the review of Jackie Coogan's latest picture, "Daddy," at the Strand until we had finished the other because to expect to become exceedingly interested in it that it bored us to death. Daddy is a true picture of children. Jackie is himself remarkable, but he does not impersonate a little boy; he impersonates a man.

World—He is extraordinarily effective. Although the theme of "Daddy" is as threadbare as the knees of Jackie's trousers, he makes much of it. Daddy is a true picture of children. Jackie is himself remarkable, but he does not impersonate a little boy; he impersonates a man.

To Discuss Values

Important Part of First Nat'l Confab to Hinge Around Drawing Power of Pictures—Meeting Starts

By DANNY D.

Atlantic City—A considerable portion of the First National deliberations will hinge around exhibition values as against percentage or with percentage. That topic has not yet been reached because the meeting yesterday was a brief one, lasting from 11 o'clock six.

The delegation from New York arrived at 1:20 and met at three. There was no special business taken up today, yet it is expected the discussions will center around to the important topics.

J. O. Williams is here talking to the First National franchise holders. One of the surprises at lunch yesterday was the fact that Williams spoke of exhibition values and touched on pictures that had less than a $1,000,000 value.

Tuske in Cleveland

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cleveland—Film men are very much interested in the battle raging here between Universal and Metro over their respective animal pictures. "Hunting Big Game in Africa" opened at the Hippodrome on Monday and "Trailing Wild African Animals," the Metro release, at the Stillman the day before. Both pictures are being boosted with considerable display advertising in the Cleveland newspapers.

Normand Renews

New Long-Term Contract with Sennett—Making "The Extra Girl" FIrst.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Mabel Normand has signed a new long-term contract with Mack Sennett. She is now at work on "The Extra Girl," in which Phyllis Haver started.

About five days work had been done when a switch was decided upon because Miss Haver was not found exactly suitable for the part.

F. Richard Jones has been appointed director-general of the Sennett studio. No mention has been made of the site for the new plant.

The first time MARY OF THE MOVIES went to Hollywood she "waited on" Zasu Pitts, Carmel Myers, Marjorie Daw, and Bessie Love. But it wasn't long before she had them and dozens of other BIG STARS "waiting on" her. —Advt.

Compton Signs

Deal Closed by Victor Saville for Graham Count's—Two Pictures Included in Contract

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Betty Compton has signed a contract with Victor Saville to appear in two features to be made in England under direction of Graham Cutts.

The deal was closed following a special trip made by Saville from New York to confer with Neill McCarthey, Miss Compton's attorney. The first picture will be "Woman to Woman."

Miss Compton is scheduled to sail for England on the Olympic on the 28th.

Graham Cutts directed "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing" and "A Woman's Secret," starring Mae Marsh and Allied will distribute them here.

Lowe's (Toronto) Cut Losses
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Toronto—The financial statement of Lowe's Theaters, Ltd., which operate the Yonge Street and Uptown theater, shows that bank loans were reduced nearly $130,000 after providing $23,186 for 1922 and 1923 taxes, paying $18,118 on taxes for 1920 and 1921 and practically wiping out the operating deficit for 1921. Total revenue for 1922 from all sources, after paying operating expenses, amounted to $228,664, as against $187,226 during 1921. The earnings from the Uptown were $53,684. The operating deficit for 1921 has been reduced to $6,193, as against $13,278 in 1921. The balance sheet shows bank loans have been reduced from $206,337 to $73,785. Total assets are placed at $2,308,164, real estate, leaseholds, buildings and equipment, $1,484,686, as compared with $1,546,649 in the previous year. Goodwill and booking rights are valued at $750,000.

Newspaper Opinions

* Predigal Daughters*—E. P. L. Rialto

AMERICAN—"Predigal Daughters" stars Gloria Swanson, should prove one of exceptional interest to every one, especially tokhers and flappers. * * * There is not a dull moment in" Predigal Daughters," and it is timely, dramatic and full of human interest.

GLOBE—It appears to be a compilation of all the so-called "sure-fire" stuff the director and continuity writer could place on the hands on. Some of it is not so sure-fire as it was.

MORNING TELEGRAM—The feature picture, "Predigal Daughters," starring Gloria Swanson, and which was to have been released under the title "Hudy's Fool," is no longer an Harold Lloyd film, because Gloria, being a lady, does not climb a clue screen.

EVENING WORLD—"Predigal Daughters" is a rather hectic story of the flapper variety which gives the four Gloria a chance to do all the smart dressing her heart desires.

TIME'S—* * * the production is drawn out to an absurd extent, and never is there the general state of confusion that has been created for the enthusiasm with which she changes her wardrobe.

TELEGRAPH—Gloria Swanson as a fascinating flapper of the ultra modern type in the production of "Predigal Daughters." * * *

TUMS—* the production is drawn out to an absurd extent, and never is there the general state of confusion that has been created for the enthusiasm with which she changes her wardrobe.

"Business Booming," Says Baum

Louis Baum, vice-president of Equity, has returned from a six weeks' sales trip, in which he covered practically every important film center. He spent considerable time in a survey of conditions, which he declares have greatly improved during the last six months. Baum says:

"Business is booming in almost every state in the Union, especially in the Pennsylvania steel territory, the coal mining sections of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky, and in the farming districts of Minnesota, Kansas and Missouri. Optimism has taken the place of pessimism, with signs of better times coming, and bigger business as the year progresses. Exchange in most every part of the country report a heavy demand for better pictures, and an entire neglect on the part of exhibitors for films of the mediocre class."

Alma Fell has sued the International Film Service for $3,583, alleging that she was engaged Dec. 27 last for eight weeks at $500 a week and after working a week and three days and drawing $410 she was not permitted to continue.

The testimony given by Sir A. Conan Doyle in the suit of William Gillette, Charles Frohman, Inc., and the Aelet Enterprises to restrain the Stoll Film Co. and Educational Exchanges from producing and distributing "Sherlock Holmes" films in this country, has been filed in the Supreme Court. He admitted that Gillette got permission from him to revamp his play, "Sherlock Holmes," for the films, but said he did not give Gillette the exclusive right to produce films of the Doyle fictional characters.

Doyle said that Gillette wired him for permission to make changes in the original theme in order to "work in a romance," and that Gillette cabled, "May I marry Sherlock Holmes?"

Doyle replied, "Marry him, murder him, or do anything you like with him."

The author said he saw the film version in which John Barrymore appeared, and stated that there was an entire act which was not authorized nor in accordance with his plots. "That was the act in which Sherlock Holmes goes to college," said Doyle.

The witness also stated that when he gave Stoll the right to make film versions of his stories he warned him not to use the name "Sherlock Holmes" because he was under the impression that the right to use that belonged to Gillette.

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellows know how you cleaned up.

Portraits of Norma Used
Los Angeles—When the Kinema played "The Voice from the Minaret," 11 x 14 hand painted portraits of Norma Talmadge were placed in 100 local windows. The effect of the stunt was so good that the management now budgets $150 each week for portraits.

Kahn Runs an Essay Contest
New Haven, Conn.— When "Poor Men's Wives" played the Bijou, Phil Kahn exploiter for the Lichtman exchange, sold the editor of the Times-Leader the idea of an essay contest.

Five days before the opening, the paper announced $25 in gold as prizes for the best thoughts on the questions: "Should Poor Men's Wives Be Pirated? Can They be Happy?" The limit placed on the answers was eight days from the date of the announcement covering the entire run of the picture. For six days the paper carried reports on the progress of the contest, and the suggestion that contestants get their angles on the questions by attending "Poor Men's Wives" emphasized throughout.

Fake Wire Makes Front Page
Erie, Pa.—The Columbia solved problem of buying space for "Glimpses of the Moon" on the front page of the local daily at the cost of $10. Eric is trying to raise a fund for a stadium and the theather thought it better patriotism to contribute $10. With the aid of A-Mike Vogel, exploiter, liberaly was turned into publicity.

Vogel framed it with a correspondent in the South to have a wire sent from Miami, Fla., where Miss Daniels is known to be, making the contribution and working the title and the theater into the telegraph. The paper fell and brought a 2-column cut of the star with a story on the front page.

Robin Hood" in a Small Town
San Jose, Calif.—Herbert Hersken, manager of the Liberty, now the following campaign for "Robin Hood" when the production was booked for the house:

Teasers on 21 street cars reading: "Warning: Robin Hood is Coming!
Posts later were placed on the cars announcing the theater and opening date. Four street cars on main lines were painted on both sides "Robin Hood." Seven Robin Hood "Chap- alry" boys on street corners in miniature castle towers distributing Robin Hood leaflets. Six window displays "Robin Hood" body formation contest in public schools. This contest was announced in advance in every school in every school. The children dressed at their homes and then went to their respective schools where they took part in a contest for spelling out the words "Robin Hood" in body formation. An extensive campaign concluded.

Cinderella Stunt for Adam's Rib
Franklin, Ind.—The Cinderella stunt applied to "Adam's Rib" out did the film for the Opera House. Manager Donnarce tied up with a shoe store which offered pairs of 2-a-shippers to persons who could write them. The display consisted of the Curtiss art stills and photos, which tied up with the pre-historic foot- wear seen in the picture.

Telegrams from Pola Negri
Worcester, Mass.—"Buddy" Stuart and Manager Curtis of the Plaza put over "Mad Love" by using 500 fake telegrams signed Pola Negri, telling a Los Angeles date open. The telegram read: "I trust that you will be able to see my newest picture, "Mad Love," coming to Worcester next week." (Signed) Pola Negri. Banners were used in the lobby in advance of the showing, as well as a cut-out of Pola Negri with drapes on each side, giving a very attractive effect.

“Ashes of Vengeance,” the new Norma Talmadge picture, is scheduled for a pre-release run in a number of eastern theaters throughout the country at a top price of $2.50. In New York, the premiere will take place in September. It will be re-released that the Talmadges, with Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Harry Chaplin, Pola Negri and others formed what they referred to as the Protective association to safeguard their production investments in larger theaters through more adequate returns or form of rentals. That plan prevailed, if necessary, the construction of leasing of theaters aside from studio houses.

Goldwyn is doing Big Things

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over.

Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Robin Hood" in London

London—When "Robin Hood" was being exhibited it's first showing was at the Castlereagh. Charles Cochrane covered the theater with billboards and posters. Sign 100 feet in length covered the facade. The letters were from 10 to 20 feet high.

Iron Shriners Help Akron, O.—The Shriners recently conducted an indoor circus at the Annie. The use of their parade in putting over the picture. A banner carrying the title of "The Christian" with the writer and date of showing was used on each side of the elephants during the parade. Twenty busses were decorated with "Christian" banners. These busses later operated the main streets of the city.

Jungle Contest on Cane Novels

Calgary, Alberta.—The management of the Palace conceived the idea of puzzle contest for the showing of "The Christian." The co-operation of the Daily Herald was secured which ran the contest during the run of the picture. Passes to the Palace were the prizes.

To win the prize, the readers of the herald were to turn the number of fixed letters in each announcement of the newspaper and from these form the title of one of Sir Hall's novels.

Fast Bakery Helps

San Diego, Cal.—The Franco Superior Bakery, tied up with the Pickwick theater for the showing of "The Rangers' Banquet." The bakery company put out colored window cards with the use in stores sending their Superior Queen Bread. In the cards were reproduced in color a still from the picture, while the advertising matter read: "A free ticket to Marshall Neilan's "The Rangers' Banquet" this week in every lucky loaf of Queen Bread." A free ticket was placed by the theater every 25th loaf.

Balloon Stunt

Faribault, Minn.—The following stunt was used for the Grand theater when "Glimpses of the Moon" was played for the house. Manager N. Gaiser and Jack Heilman, the local Paramount exploiter, tied up with the Buick dealer and the local contractor for an announcement of a stunt similar to the one with which the picture was played. The stunt was to send up a balloon with the Buick suspended. Of course, the balloon came off to a successful ending and they withdrew. The paper then announced at the "balloon stunt can be watched with safety on the screen of the Grand."

Test Runs for "Ashes"

The plan for "Ashes of Vengeance" is understood to be not a move in the picture, but merely a test of the drawing power of the picture. The production will cost about $65,000. The Schenck interests feel that before exhibitors can be expected to pay the high rentals necessary for the producer to see a profit, a definite demonstration should be given of the drawing power of the picture. That is the reason why the legitimate showings are planned. The regular first-runs will follow.

Dyget Joins Rowland & Clark

$18,785 in 11 Shows

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Sid Grauman states that "The Covered Wagon" grossed $18,785 at the Egyptian theater in the first 11 performances starting with the premiere on 7 o'clock and closing on Saturday night. Grauman expects the picture to run eight more houses.

Exhibitor Interests Incorporate

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Frankfort, Ky.—The Rainbow Gardens Co., Inc., of Louisville, has been incorporated with a capital of $30,000 by Joe Steinle, A. Reulinger and I. and W. Davidson, all connected with the Walnut Amusement Co., operating the Walnut. They also control the Fourth Avenue theater and the Broadway Amusement Enterprises.

Keith To Produce

"The combination of motion picture and vaudeville has been found to be an ideal one. Needless to say, a theater showing six acts of vaudeville and a motion picture will have a trifle the better of it when it comes to competing with another showing only pictures.

"The old-line film firms are in for a period of stiff opposition. As it has always been claimed in this department, this will prove beneficial to the public. Better pictures at lower prices is the result.

"The Shubert interests are also planning a ring at the films and they are most assuredly to be reckoned with, as they control theaters in every important city throughout the country."

Mark Luecher at the Keith offices did not enter a flat denial of the report when asked concerning it, but merely replied that there was nothing to say at this time.

French Exhibitors Pay 25%

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The Department of Commerce recently received a report from the American attaché at Paris, in which he states that the French theatrical industry on the high taxes paid by theatrical owners. The average tax on motion picture exhibitors is 25% of the total receipts.

"The Bright Shallows" will be the feature at the Strand next week.
A Woman in the Wilderness

Throughout the hazardous expedition which trudged and hacked its way through a thousand miles of hitherto untrod African jungle country, Mrs. Martin Johnson was there.

You see her, on the screen, within twenty yards of a charging rhinoceros as he thunders, horns down and murder in his little eyes, upon her.

You see her cranking the camera as the giant African elephants crash in their stampede toward her, trampling down saplings as a dog tramples grass.

You see her in the open, facing a herd of lions, finally bringing one down when he had charged to within a few score steps of her.

A 110-pound woman defying elephants that couldn't squeeze inside a box-car, rhinoceri that attack like a forty-miles-an-hour steam roller!

No wonder that Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's Trailing African Wild Animals is the thriller of all jungle thrillers!

INSURANCE

"What has he done?"—Napoleon
"By your deeds are ye known."—The Bible

If every director in this industry realized with what importance the Director’s issue—out June 6th—was read by important executives—the men who say “yes” and “no”; if every director would understand what it means in dollar insurance to tell what he is doing; what he has done, what he plans to do, the Director’s issue would be overcrowded with advertising.

The great misfortune is that many directors think the world knows all about them, and will never forget. In reality it is just the reverse. This is a swift moving period. And people forget only too quickly.

This is the director’s opportunity. He can tell his own story; in his own way, knowing that the men he should have contact with will read everything printed in this issue. And this particular issue will be filed away—for reference purposes—make no mistake about that.

Warner Bros. Reach Amicable Adjustment with Balaban and Katz on Mid-West Distribution

The litigation pending between Warner Bros. and Second National of Illinois, which is controlled by Balaban and Katz of Chicago, has been amicably adjusted out of court. As a result, Second National will control the distribution of Warner Classics in Illinois as heretofore.

The trouble originally arose over the slighting of "The Beautiful and Damned," according to Warner Bros., who state the picture did not secure what they considered an adequate first run in Chicago. Suit was then filed in the U.S. District Court for damages and the cancellation of the contract. Earlier in the week Harry M. Warner went to Chicago, ostensibly in this connection.

day. Mrs. Deneker will accompany me as far as Exzema, where we are having trouble with the Plutes who insist on staying in the theater from Tuesday until the next night we are open, which is Sat-

day. Just think, forty years ago, the first original scenario was written where my train will be at two o'clock Friday. And to think it is all being used by most of the writers at Los Angeles. I can well imagine the thrill the Pioneers got when the pulled into Exzema with the long trail of covered wagons. Don't forget to hold the seat for me at the Naked Truth dinner. That's all I'm coming for.

To Sue Cohen
Twenty Infringements of Music Copyright Alleged—Cohn Talks of "Oppression"

According to J. C. Rosenthal, general manager of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, twenty separate actions for alleged infringements of the copyright law as it affects the rendition of musical compositions employed in films will be filed against Sydney H. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. A.

Cohen has been advised of the alleged infringements in several letters from Rosenthal, who states that the violation he observed was at the following theaters owned by Cohen: the Bronx Strand, Westchester Ave., and First Avenue Empire, 1212 St. and Westchester Ave. Fay's, Boston Road and 169th St., Tremont, Westchester Ave. and 178th St. and the Northland Av. and 104th St., on April 14, 15, 16, 17.

Under date of April 12, Cohen wrote the society terminating his agreement with its membership. Cohen stated that when he made the arrangement, on a license basis, it was "under duress" and "compelled by your threats of oppression." He added that "the monopolistic control of which you now boast as the justification for the extension of your society's footprint and carried the intimidation of all fair thinking people but will soon reap its just reward in suitable legislation which will prevent in the future any repetition of your methods of oppression, supplemented by your system of espionage."

Under date of the 16th, Rosenthal replied to Cohen denying the charges of "duress" and "oppression," and pointing out that when Cohen accepted a license he knew just what obligations were involved. He pointed out that Cohen had paid the society's fees for years "voluntarily and of his own free will and have made an answer to your attack upon us through the Federal Trade Commission and Attorney General's office, we have conceded paid the checks tendered us in payment of your license fees, you did not tell the exhibitors who you were leading, and I have spoken to you before, that you were paying license fees."

It was following this interchange of letters and the notice served on Cohen that his theaters could be subjected to the society inspection for violations, that, according to Rosenthal, the twenty infringements which form the basis of the proposed actions were discovered.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Edmonton, Can.—Local theater managers and operators are battling to reach an agreement over the new law recently passed by the operators, that no operator shall be eligible for employment unless he has resided in the province one year.

Every Director
Every producer; every cameraman. And all others concerned in production will be tremendously interested in the forthcoming which will be replete with interesting articles of definite value and importance to this branch of the industry.

DIRECTOR'S ISSUE

Among the special articles will be:

"Harmony and the Creative Mind," by June Mathis (whose collaborative work with famous directors is historical).

"Pictures Appeal to Dream Mind," by Allan Dwan.

Biographies of important directors; and many other interesting articles.

Every photoplay editor of importance in this country will receive a copy of this issue, which should prove an unusually worth while "buy" to the director. Every important executive will read this issue with interest.

Percentage

How long will it be coming? How long before it is here? Really in earnest? And how many cuss words; how many sour expressions will be heard before then?

Playing pictures on percentage means a "break" for all concerned in its production, distribution and exhibition. It is the only legitimate method of handling this business. It is the only definite, certain way by which this business shall cleanse itself of the distrust and lack of understanding which keeps it from the high level to which it honestly belongs. And the only question, therefore, is: when is percentage coming?

THEN AND NOW

There was a time a few years ago when nearly everyone agreed that playing pictures on percentage was the only sane answer to the increased cost of production. Then the stories began to be quoted about that the distributing and producing companies wanted to buy theaters and drive the little exhibitors out of business. When distributors' representatives wanted to see the books of exhibitors, to determine on what basis the picture could be played, rarely an exhibitor could be found who would agree to such a proposition. And at that time he was right. Editors, writers, in the trade press warned exhibitors against showing their books. And they were right. Was in the band wagon myself.

But that time has gone. And with its passing has developed the fuller and broader understanding of the percentage plan of showing pictures. Which is as it should be. Talking with some of the most important first run exhibitors of this country. Down at Atlantic City. With the First National meeting. Practically all agree. That percentage booking is the only answer to the problem.

WHERE THE DOCTORS DISAGREE

Is on the question of just what basis the percentage booking should be played. The rub is there and will be. Until the real solution is found. But that will come. Just as certain as all problems have been worked out. Pictures must be graded; stars graded, and the basis of the rating once set the rest will be easy. Then all this poker playing between buyer and seller will have passed. Then all the gypping will be ended—in this branch of the business, anyway. And the figures show this is in sight. There are more pictures playing percentage today than ever in history. There will be more of them next season. Each succeeding season will find more—and after awhile the percentage idea will have worked out satisfactorily.

SOME THINGS NEEDED

These include a central bureau. Which, in effect, will be a realy a credit bureau. In one sense of the word. To this central bureau will come information regarding production, as well as exhibition. There will be no guess work. There will be no advance necessary on the part of the exhibitor. His house will be rated by past performance. In turn the star or director, or

Clem Ready

Film Daily, New York.

Tomorrow is a big day for me. I hit the trail east on the U. P. special. Am bringing a society film with me, made at Malady, Nevada, during a big charity drive. Can hardly wait till I get there for the Naked Truth dinner at the Biltmore, Saturday night. Find out for me if we have to pay for our own food, if so, tell the A. M. P. A. not to order for me till I tell them what I like to eat. Is Will Hays going to be there at the dinner room? I am at the spot now where the first Western was made. The landlady is still kicking that the east went to bed with their spurs on, tearing the only sheets in the place. Bon Voyage to me on my long trek east.

Diggins to Enter Production

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hoboken, N. J.—Harry P. Diggins, former publicity director of the State Theater Corp., will become the production manager of a concern said to be backed by a number of Jersey City business men.

There will be two corporations, according to Diggins. One for the studio unit and one for three producing units. He says an office will probably be located in the Knickerbocker Theater building in New York, and another office in Jersey City. The studio will be located at the northern end of the county. Production starts in the summer.

If it isn’t H. A. SNOW’S PICTURE — it isn’t the HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA With Gun and Camera

If it isn’t H. A. SNOW’S PICTURE— it isn’t the HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA With Gun and Camera

—which was given the remarkable publicity in scores of America’s leading national publications—publicity that money could not buy, and which was seen and read by millions! Publicity which will fill theatres all over the country with audiences eager to see these amazing African adventure pictures.

Booked By 250 Theatres in Last Two Weeks!

If a picture can pack a 3500-seat house twice a day for a solid week—IT’S SOME PICTURE!

And that’s just what this remarkable attraction did at the beautiful Branford Theatre, Newark. Its tremendous drawing power at that theatre caused the Fabian Circuit to book it for a second week at their other Newark theatre, the Goodwin! This is just a sample of the enormous business this wonderful picture is doing! Get after it NOW—don’t wait—bill it like a circus, there’s nothing like it on earth!

UNIVERSAL PICTURES
Presented by CARL LAEMMLE
Producer, will be rated accordingly. And the system must be sufficiently elastic to provide for the newcomers. For instance—is there an exhibitor in this broad land who expects to ever buy another Jimmy Cruze production at the former scale of Cruze values? After making "The Covered Wagon"? There's just one answer to this guess. And you know what that answer is.

And that is only good business for Famous. Or whoever has Cruze productions. He has earned it. Just as Ingram did. As all the others did.

STOP PAYING FOR UNCERTAINTIES

And paying "through the nose." Why the guarantee demanded today for certain pictures is more than the distributor expects to get. In many instances. And if there is anything coming over and beyond the guarantee it is often a surprise. There is no reason in the world why you, as an exhibitor, producer or distributor, should take the gamble all the way through. Let everyone gamble. And let's start where the start should be made. Right in the studios. They'll tell you it can't be done. All right. Then refer them to the method under which Louis Gasnier and Tom Forman are making pictures with Benny Schulberg for Preferred. They are drawing a decent amount weekly to live on. As against their share of the profits. And if they make the kind of pictures that earn big profits they are riding sweet and pretty. And if by chance they don't—well, that's their funeral. Goldwyn working the same idea with many of their directors. Each of them is to share in the profits.

There are a lot of birds walking around Hollywood. With their noses stuck high in the air. Saying there won't be any profits. And other such expressions. Ask Gasnier. He'll give the answer. He never made as much money in life. As today. That's how it should be.

And so when it comes to playing the picture. Why should any exhibitor pay for a "name"? And then find himself with a flop. Just because that "name" usually meant something. Important stars and directors earn fabulous sums. On the theory that they are worth it. But they are not infallible. And if they happen to turn out something which proves a hit. When they anticipated a sugar plum. They should help pay for the mistake. And the exhibitor should not be asked to carry the load any more than the producer.

DISTRIBUTING THE LOAD

As the railroads say. In other words: dividing the burden. That's what honest percentage making and playing will mean. The quicker it comes the better. For the whole business.

WHAT THE WILD WAVES HEARD

Down at Atlantic City: that First National will probably have no more than 35 pictures on franchise for next season. that producing many of their own pictures promises to make FN happier than ever. Joe Schenck has developed into one of the best speech makers in the business. that brother Nick—who rarely appears in the foreground—is a serious thinker. and keeps a watchful eye on brother Joe. that Sam Katz of Chicago missed his vacation. Should have been an actor and played "stick-em-up" parts. that Abe Blank can wield a nasty water bottle. If he is compelled to. And, that some people are lucky. that Sam Katz will present his recipe for losing weight to anyone interested. that Sam Goldwyn is a prince when it comes to entertaining. Had Hays and Lieber. and all the franchise holders at separate affairs. And wanted to give others a breakfast. But no one was up in time for such food. that Hiram Abrams was all set to do some business. And did. that Jaydee Williams made considerable progress.

Expression of a famous impresario. Who loves to play nootch. And thus refers to the suit blank. In the bidder's end.

TOO MUCH CAKE
That's the way Joe Brandt talks of conditions. Says exhibitors have had so much cake. That it's time for them to get own to bread and butter. And be able to enjoy it. Thinks they are in for indigestion otherwise.
And Joey is a sane boy. Been around a long time and knows that he's talking about.

The Committee on Public Relations is an offshoot of that. It has been functioning since Sept. 1 and in that time has reviewed 128 pictures for the purpose of listing them for the beneﬁt of its members. Col. Jow has personally conferred with representatives of various organizations many times in order to develop a channel of communication between the public and the industry, submit comments, criticisms and suggestions to the industry and at the same time tell the public of the developments in the industry and about better pictures.

The committee members represent 60,000,000 of the American public. At the time of the annual meeting of the Hays organization, Lee F.HAMNER, the chairman, in a letter to Hays said that the public as represented by the committee is disposed to give its support and encouragement to every earnest effort made by the industry in the direction of better motion pictures.

One aid to the industry has been the criticism made of subliterale and certain scenes in productions which, to the committee, appear to carry a thought which might prove objectionable. In many cases, such shots and titles can be eliminated without injury to the production. Producers have in many cases followed the suggestions of the committee members because they realize that all criticism is made honestly and without ulterior motive; except for the elevation of the general film standard.

In the Courts

A jury in the City Court gave a verdict for $2,036 against E. T. Peter in a suit of Amiel Alperstein and Joseph A. Golden on two notes $120 and $260. The defendant transferred the notes to the Triumph Film Corp., which transferred it to the plaintiff. The defendant contended that the notes were given in a contract for "The Libertine," which was cancelled.

William Isensee has sued the Long Island Motion Picture Co., in the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining it from issuing any stock until it has delivered to him stock which he alleges he has paid for. Isensee asserted that he paid $25,000 for stock, but had to sue to compel the corporation to issue it. He got a judgment for it, but alleges that the corporation has increased its capital from $75,000 to $150,000, and only wants to give him his original 250 shares, whereas he contends he should have a quarter of the new issue.

Federal Trade Commission Opens Case Against Famous Players

W. W. Hodkinson First Witness, Describes Early Days of Industry When He Was President of Paramount—Also Analyzes Key Cities and First Run Situation

The long heralded and much delayed hearing of the Federal Trade Commission action against Famous Players, and others, started yesterday before E. C. Allord in the Engineer's Club building.

The complaint charges that the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. and its associates, "in acquiring or controlling and in attempting to acquire or control, motion picture theaters, the respondent newspapers have coerced and intimidated * motion picture theater owners or exhibitors by divers methods."

Judging from the time consumed yesterday in getting into the case it would not prove surprising if the hearing dragged along for several months.

Schulberg and Lichtman Plan Increased Output—Franchise Holders Hold Meeting

B. P. Schulberg and Al Lichtman are planning to release 17 pictures under a franchise for next season. A few days ago various franchise holders were in New York to become familiar with some of the details.

This means a 100% increase in production for the new season with Gasnier, Tom Forman and Victor Schertzinger supplying the pictures. While it is possible there may be some changes in the territorial lines, the franchise holders, in the main, will probably be the same as they are now.

Loew Due This Week

Arthur Loew is returning to America on the Aquitania, due in the end of the week.

The Morning Session

W. W. Hodkinson was the first witness called. He went into the question of the formation of the Paramount company back in 1913, and under the guidance of W. H. Fuller, chief counsel for the Commission, told how he had promoted the plan of distributing pictures by taking in as partners the men who had developed the state rights business up to that time. These included Hiram Abrams, who was then operating an exchange in Boston; A. D. Flint of Missouri, who operated under a sub-franchise from Steele of Pittsburgh; Raymond Pawley, who handled Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia; S. A. Lynch in Atlanta for the South, and John Kunsy of Detroit. After operating six months, the original five year franchise plan was changed to a franchise which was to operate 25 years. And he followed this by telling how Adolph Zukor, who was then operating Famous Players, was to get an advance of $100,000 from Paramount, which was to distribute a picture made abroad. Trial Opens question, however, as to the operation, because the race ran at a greater length than that which the franchise called for, and Hodkinson and his associates had planned to organize the Select Film Booking Agency to distribute this and other pictures. As a result of the discussion, however, Paramount failed to organize this company, but Zukor in turn took up the organization, formed Select, and finally Paramount had a 50 per cent interest in the concern.

It was in the spring of 1915, so Hodkinson said, that he heard the first idea of uniting the producing and distributing branches of the business. Also under Fuller's questioning, Hodkinson said that about this time the first discussion developed as to including exhibition as well as the operations. Hodkinson admitted that he was agreeable to "any progressive steps," at this time. He subsequently said, however, that while he was president of Paramount the company owned no theaters.

On June 13, 1916, he testified that he resigned, "I was put out," he said. This happened at the annual directors meeting when Messrs. Sherry, Steele and Abrams voted for Hodkinson and Mr. Pawley voted for Hodkinson.

Hodkinson went into a lengthy discussion of his efforts to unite Famous Players, Frank Garbutt and other producers and an organization so that the distribution of their pictures could be handled by Paramount, but said that Zukor refused to listen, because he felt that Garbutt had nothing to offer. At that time, Hodkinson said he informed Zukor that his (Zukor's) policy was not conducive to successfully offset the policy of the General Film Co., in operation.

First Run Showings
At this point Mr. Fuller sidetracked from the subject matter in hand and asked Hodkinson to define what a first class, first run house was. Hodkinson said that first run houses were maintained to influence subsequent runs on the part of exhibitors in the territory within range of the first run houses and that this was the policy. After that question, Fuller asked Hodkinson to question Hodkinson a vast detail as to what constituted a key city, a first run, etc. Finally, Hodkinson said that in New York, Famous Players operated three theaters, but that New York was so large that Brooklyn and other cities had their individual first run houses.

Fuller wanted to know from Hodkinson what portion of the returns from a picture came from first run houses. This was objected to and never answered. Hodkinson said that there was a big difference of opinion as to what a key city was, and that he heard from various sources that from fifty to one hundred cities were included in this description, but that his opinion was that any city had generally speaking, a key city in which the leading companies operated exchanges. He said that the term "key city" was a term of a trade which really meant that these cities were the markets of these various communities. In response to a question, he said that because of the desire to have these first runs affect the business generally, that advertising and exploitation were conducted on a much larger scale for the presentation in these communities.

He was then asked as to the first run theaters owned by Famous Players, and in response to another question, said that there was practically no possibility to dispose of Hodkinson pictures in any of New York first run theaters owned by Famous Players, excepting now and then a short subject.

In the afternoon session, Mr. Hodkinson presented two charts, one showing the franchise basis under which Paramount worked until 1916 and another, showing Paramount's producing affiliations. This included the old Morose company and others.

Famous Players scored what appeared to be the first important point when the Commissioner decided that no one will be allowed to present an opinion relative to Famous unless that opinion had direct bearing upon the company at the time the person rendering the opinion was connected with it. This arose when Hodkinson was asked to render his opinion concerning Famous Players subsequent to his leaving. Counsel for Famous Players objected to this with the result that the Commissioner handed down the ruling mentioned above.

Notes
Just what Canon Chase, the famous "blue law" advocate, learned from hearing the witness, was interesting to those film folk who recognized him. Chase made voluminous notes.

A large number of reporters from the general newspaper press were in attendance, and Jules Mastbaum to comment "What's all the shootin' about?"

Mastbaum incidentally was the only defendant named who was actually present in person. The others were represented by counsel.

And what a lot of lawyers there were. For the Commission, besides Fuller mentioned above, were Gaylord R. Hawkins and Marvin Farrington, while representing Famous Players of Paul Cravath's firm were MacDonald, Robert T. Swan, and C. Frank Reavis, Jr. Alfred F. Barnard of Atlanta represented S. A. Lynch, and the South Pacific Enterprises. Morris Wolf of Philadelphia, George F. Mastbaum and the Stanley Co., and E. V. Richards, Jr., and the Saenger Amusement Co., were also represented by counsel.

Open Convention
Planned by M. P. T. O. in Chicago—Three New Candidates in Field for President

The M. P. T. O. convention in Chicago, May 19-26 will be an open one. Sydney S. Cohen, upon his return from the Middle West yesterday confirmed this.

In issuing a statement covering the pre-convention meeting of the officers and board of directors in Chicago, the M. P. T. O. stated that "an invitation has been extended to every independent theater owner in the United States to attend the convention and participate in the constructive program arranged by President Cohen and other National officers. Any of the T. O. C. C. members are invited to submit a report on what we are trying to do that organization's attitude toward the national convention because they want to attend the meeting. The decision to make the convention an open one today, however, has the effect of listing a decision on the part of the T. O. C. C. which has no present connection with the Cohen organization.

Harry Davis, F. R. Woodhull and J. J. Comerford were appointed a committee to handle the Motion Picture Palace of Progress situation in New York. Plans for this are being developed along ambitious lines, according to the Cohen office.

At Chicago, three new candidates for the presidency were named. Wisconsin nominated F. J. Ritter, Michigan, J. C. Ritter and Eastern Missouri, Joe Mogler. Mike Comerford, who is being boosted by the eastern Pennsylvania unit has formed national headquarters that he may run in the field.

Hodkinson Discusses Importance of First Run Showings to Independents

Large Companies Making Mass Production Have Not Necessity of Making Quality Pictures, He Maintains—Letter from Rothapel to Hodkinson Proves Interesting—Famous Players' Minutes Show Details of Early Absorption of Lasky and Zukor Concerns

Some interesting evidence developed yesterday in the second day of the Federal Trade Commission proceedings against Famous Players and others. W. W. Hodkinson after analyzing the first run situation so far as it affected independent producers, completed his testimony and Elek J. Ludvig, general counsel for Famous produced the minute books of that corporation, and most excerpts from the minutes went into the record.

After about a month of evidence taking here the Commission will move on to Philadelphia, Boston, Atlanta, New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco. In all over a year is expected to be necessary to complete the investigation.

Moeller Leaves for "Expo"
A. J. Moeller, general manager of the M. P. T. O. leaves for Chicago today to whip the M. P. Picture of Palace exposition into shape. He will remain there until after the convention.

Hodkinson Still on Stand
W. W. Hodkinson, president of the corporation bearing his name, was still on the stand when the second day's hearing opened. He continued along the line set late Monday afternoon, relative to producer-distributor held by the trade, and that said that a producer or a producer-distributor operated a theater, it was almost impossible for the independent producer to compete because "the open market is partially closed to other producers. He started to say that the "independent producer, in whom all improvement is expected, is shut out of the market," but there was vigorous objection to this on the part of Robert F. Swaine, counsel for Famous Players, and objection was sustained.

Hodkinson continued by saying that the history of the business as a whole, has shown that the best picture "are made by individuals rather than by companies making mass productions."

There was objection to this, but it was overruled, and Hodkinson continued, declaring that there was not the same necessity of making quality pictures by large organizations to meet competitive conditions.

Where producer-distributors operated theaters, Hodkinson declared that competition came only for such open time as they had left from their own productions and this condition rendered it impossible for independent producers to remain in business.

Golf Prizes

There is promised to be a flock of prizes for the forthcoming Spring Golf Tournament. Of course, there will be the usual cups. Pathé Exchange, Abe Warner of Warner Bros., the Motion Picture News, the Academy of the Stanley Co. of America, Reuben Saunders, J. V. Ritchey of the Ritchey Lithographing Co., and the Exhibitors Herald, through John S. Spargo, New York Editor, will present 20 especially made "Bobby Irons" to the 20 players making the lowest scores, or as the committee may decide.

There will surely be more prizes in the form of cups, etc., together with the usual large number of special souv-enir prizes, which have hitherto made the golf tournaments so successful.

If you haven't sent in your entry, phone, wire or write to any of the committee.

Don't forget the time and place, Tuesday, June 5th, at the Belleclaire Golf Club, Bayside, L. I.

In the Courts

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Adolph Ramish, of West Coast Theaters, Inc., against photographs and negatives obtained in Los Angeles for a sum in excess of $3,000, has filed an appeal in the State Supreme Court.

The case is said to represent 300 unpaid remainder in a transfer of 50% of stock in the Hippodrome of Los Angeles and San Diego, from Loew to Ramish.

The deal is said to have been nego-tiated in 1921, at San Francisco, when Low agreed to pay Loew $105,000 for the stock in both theaters. At the close of the transaction Loew charged Ramish to be in his debt $3,150. Subsequently Loew was given judgment for this amount plus interest from October, 1921.

Newspaper Opinions

““You Can’t Fool Your Wife” E. P. L. Ralito

AMERICAN—The mature, wholesome beauty of Lestrice Joy, as the heroine, has turned out pleasantly in the artificial atmosphere of the New York, demonstrating Nita Naldi as the other woman. The settings of the entire picture were good.

But it was difficult to connect the titles with the picture.

EVENING WORLD—It is a weird story of a yarn that could only happen on the screen, and the whole thing is far from movie-like. It is entertaining.

GLOBE—A slender story box seldom has been told in the movies, but with such capable scenes by Stone, Lestrice Joy, and Nita Naldi in the principal roles it has moments of being convincing. At any rate it is cuddly to look upon.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—George Mel-ford has given the story by Wadsworth Young the most gorgeous production.

Even the casual reader will recognize a story like this at a glance. It is simply the regular motion picture stuff, but George Melford has produced it so well that it sounds at the time that the whole thing is all familiar hack.

POST—It has luxurious settings—good photography, and in this case an especially good cast—all of which will make the picture fairly interesting entertainment for the majority who see it. The story is the usual triangle affair, with a great deal of scheming and trimming.

TIMES—Because of the good acting and the expenditure lavished on this film it stands up as moderate entertainment for the lazy.

TRIVIUM—The title is the best thing about the picture. As we said in the first paragraph, you wouldn’t want to see the picture could be so bad. The director and the actors worked with a determination worthy of a better cause.

The production is just one of the motion pictures that are produced for exploitation, as the phrase goes. Lestrice Joy looks charming without any difficulty, and Lewis Stone is in as good form as ever.

WORLD—The plot is the tale of the triangle real, but yet such a capable cast has been assembled that the Camera and business can be disregarded. Lestrice Joy, Lewis Stone and Nita Naldi are placed at the angles of the triangle. The charm of Miss Joy in particular makes her man, and the rest of the picture doesn’t seem to matter much.

Classical Jazz

Probably the best hit at the Rialto this week is the Classical Jazz number presented by Doctor Riezenfeld. The orchestra is new, the lighting and unusual arrangement of the Wooden Soldiers dance from Chauve Souris, one of the stunts of which is that the spotlight plays from time to time on different members of the orchestra, and again other musicians stand up and down in their seats. To cap the climax a half dozen pickanninies dressed in ushers uniforms start marching to the melody and stop from time to time to go through the motions of shooting craps. So far it has proven a riot at every performance. Worth doing in any house.

When objection came to this statement, Mr. Fuller, chief counsel for the Commission, argued at length as to what the Commission anticipated proving in the case against Famous Players, maintaining that through ownership of theaters at various points, plus the selling policy of supplying pictures in bulk, and that this would be developed by various witnesses. He said that in Philadelphia, New Orleans, and on the Gulf, he had tied up the situation in both ways.

This brought Swaine energetically to his feet, who declared that Fuller's statement was propaganda for newspaper purposes. Full r r presented the insinuation as to what his motives were, and then turned over Hodkinson's and Swaine's cross-examination which developed along the line of what, in Hodkinson's belief constituted a first-run theater. He was finally able to prove that not the list office was not the ultimate test of quality pictures, and admitted that it was.

In analyzing the New York situation, Mr. Fuller declared that legitimate theaters were often used by producer-distributors for the purpose of booking pictures for their pictures throughout the country. He said that a producer, unable to get a showing in legitimate first-run houses had to resort to "all sorts of measures" to have his picture shown. This statement was also objected to.

On further examination, Hodkinson told of his release of "Down to the Sea in Ships," running in its third month at the Cameo theater, and referred to it as one of the best features in New York, which led Swaine to comment: "A twelve weeks' run of Broadway is somewhat of a compliment, is it not?" And Hodkinson smilingly replied that it was. He said that the Capitol theater had refused showing of "In Ship's Company." He declared that very frequently, the big first-run Broadway exhibitors would not even take the time to look at an independent picture. When Swaine asked him regarding the showing of "Robin Hood" at the Lyric, Hodkinson said: "Yes, 'Robin Hood' is a very good picture. It's an independently made picture."

Then Swaine read a long list of houses located along 8th and 9th Ave., and asked Hodkinson if he knew of these houses. Hodkinson smiled but answered that he never visited 8th or 9th Ave., to see a picture. He also commented that the houses along 8th and 9th Ave. were not the proper sort of clients. Just before Hodkinson left the stand, he was asked regarding a list of pictures received by him from Samuel L. Rothapfel, manager of the Capitol Theater. He produced the list and the order which went into the records. The letter dated January 22, 1921, and addressed to Mr. Hodkinson read:

'I have your letter of January 21, and have carefully noted the contents.

"You know that this is a subsidized Goldwyn theater, and therefore we can not enter into your negotiations however meritorious they might be. Nevertheless, I thank you for bringing this matter to my attention.

Yours very truly,

Samuel L. Rothapfel"

Ludvig Takes Stand

Eck John Ludvig, general counsel and secretary-treasurer of Famous Players, was then called to the stand, and produced the minute book of the corporation. From this was read into the record some interesting points relative to the early history of Famous Players, one of which indicated that for the 4482 shares of stock of the Lasky Pictures, valued at $1,200,000, 50,000 shares of Famous Players stock was issued, and for the Famous Players Film Co.—the old Zukor organization, stockholders received two shares for one, and $250,000 notes.

The minutes also showed a record in August, 1916, of securing an option on the Pallas and Morocco Film Co. stock, and just before release, a survey of the motion picture industry of special reference to the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., was presented. This survey was made by the American International Corp. for Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in 1919, in connection with the purchase of $1,000,000 worth of preferred stock by a member house.

During the afternoon, further records from the minutes of the organization were read into the record of the case.

Late Monday Hodkinson presented a list of pictures which he maintained were as good as the average shown in the first run Broadway houses, but which were blocked out because of existing conditions.

The list include the following:

Hodkinson releases:

Goldwyn Announces Plan to Reduce Outstanding Shares and Exchange Them on a 1 for 4 Basis

The board of directors of Goldwyn Pictures Corp. has approved a new stock plan for the company. A circular letter was sent to all holders of voting trust certificates asking their authorization to go ahead with it.

The plan is to increase the authorized capital stock from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 and then follow it by a reduction of the authorized number of shares to 375,000 through the exchange of one new share of stock for four shares now held. When the revision is complete the issued stock will be reduced to 181,800,54 shares. This will leave 193,153,419 unissued shares in the treasury. Voting rights will be vested in the common stock, which will be called "new series." The new plan is designed to become effective at the close of business on April 30.

Ind'pts Forced to Fight for First Runs, Testifies Lichtman

Describes Atlanta Conditions As "Terrible"—Says in Two Years He Placed Only Four Pictures on Broadway—Tells of Meeting in Zukor's Home in 1916 That Led to Ousting of W. W. Hodkinson

Experiences of independent producers in getting bookings in Key cities was the feature of the testimony yesterday of Al Lichtman, third witness in the hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges against Famous Players-Lasky and the other respondents.

W. H. Fuller, for the Government, took up the situation in detail, city by city. In some cities, Lichtman testified he got fair terms, in others he was virtually shut out unable to book his pictures on a favorable basis.

The conditions in the territory controlled by Southern Enterprises were going into account. The situation in Atlanta Lichtman described as "terrible." In New Orleans, his contract with Saenger was "satisfactory." He claimed in some of his dealings with Southern Enterprises, the latter, after booking the pictures, refused to carry out the contract unless the price was reduced.

In two years, he said he had been able to place only four pictures in New York. In one case, he rented the Criterion at a total cost of $20,000 for two weeks, with receipts of only $8,000. This week he declared he had been invited by the Rivoli to arrange for bookings but upon such terms that he was compelled to decline.

In Denver and San Francisco the situation he described as good. In St. Louis, Lichtman said he had had great difficulty in obtaining bookings. Other cities taken up were Cleveland, Boston, Minneapolis, Seattle, Detroit, Cincinnati and Baltimore.

J. R. McDonald, counsel for the respondents, entered several objections to what he termed "conclusions" drawn by the witness, and it was finally decided to limit his answers to specific theaters and pictures as far as possible.

In an interview in the Los Angeles Times, Douglas Fairbanks said:

"Have you seen GLORIA SWANSON in 'PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS'? Don't miss it. It is not only the best piece of acting Miss Swanson has ever done, but it is, I think, one of the most faithful film portrayals of contemporary social and family life that has been screened. It should be preserved under seal for showing fifty years from now to let our descendants know just what this Jazz Age really is.

"Mary and I run off films every night at home. Of late we have been seeing old news reels made about fifteen years ago. They are more interesting than plays.

"Gloria Swanson's new play, I firmly believe, will have a similar value fifteen or fifty years from now."

In his circular letter, President Godsol points out that "while in the last nine months of 1922 a small operating profit was made, the large deetit for the year, shown on the balance sheet was due to certain expenses and losses because of commitments incurred prior to the change of administration in March, 1922; when Godsol became president. He adds that in his opinion "a successful distributing organization should release approximately one picture per week in all but the summer months to maintain a low distributing cost and to assure exhibitors of a continuatious volume of product, and adds, "Goldsyn will be in a position, beginning Sept. 1, to do so."

"It is my firm opinion," Godsol says, "that beginning Nov. 1 next, Goldsyn should be operating at a profit of $100,000 monthly."

Lichtman also told of the connection of H. D. H. Connick with Hodkinson-Lasky. Connick, he said, represented a group of bankers who underwrote $10,000,000 of preferred stock for Famous Players-Lasky.

Asked whether all this capital was used for acquiring theaters, he said he could not say what part of it was used, but that he knew the issue was designed for that purpose.

Lichtman was on the stand all day. The morning session was occupied with his testimony about the onset of W. W. Hodkinson and the various mergers that led up to the formation of Famous Players-Lasky.

Lichtman, while sales manager of the Famous Players Film Co. (the Zukor unit), told of a meeting held at Zukor headquarters, at which he, Zukor, Abrams and Walter Greene participated. Zukor has just returned from California, where he had been attending Triangle officials, because of his dissatisfaction with Paramount policy under the Hodkinson-Lasky regime.

At this meeting, Lichtman testified, it was decided that Abrams and Greene would try to get the votes of enough other dentists to bring about Hodkinson's removal. Zukor contended, said Lichtman, that he (Zukor) could not hold Mary Pickford and other important stars in line unless some more drastic distribution policy were brought about.

"The stars are complaining," Lichtman quoted Zukor as saying. "It is impossible to work with Hodkinson."

There was also a discussion that "the whole thing be made into one unit."

"Zukor said that Lasky was suffering from the same shortcomings of Paramount as himself," Lichtman added.

The first report that Lichtman had, as a result of the meeting, he was told that Hodkinson had been ousting president of Paramount, and that Abrams had been selected president, with James Steele as treasurer in place of Raymond Pawley.

He said Paramount had an exclusive distributing contract with the Zukor unit. Lasky and Bosworth and that these three were merged into the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. very soon after Hodkinson's removal.

A strenuous protest was made at this point by Prather McDonald, of counsel for the respondents, who declared that the records showed the merger occurred in December, 1917. For the Government, Gaylord Hawkins pointed out that the acquisition of stock occurred first, and then there was a technical argument on what constituted a merger.

"To all intents and purposes Famous Players-Lasky Corp. was operating in 1916," said Lichtman. "To strike this from the record, but the motion was denied and an exception noted."

The formation of Artcraft in August, 1916, with Lichtman as general manager, was taken up. He said the Pickford films were turned over to Artcraft very soon after Hodkinson's removal, the purpose being to separate these and other quality pictures from the general output of product. Paramount was practically controlled by Famous Players-Lasky Corp., when Paramount and Artcraft were merged, and the formal merger was all completed about a year after the meeting at Zukor's house. At that time, said Lichtman, Famous Players-Lasky was making and distributing 20 to 25% of all pictures.

"Did you learn whether Zukor or Famous Players-Lasky had any interest in the Loew theaters?" asked W. H. Fuller, who was conducting the Government case.

"This was objected to as hearsay and a lawyers' wrangle occurred, but Examiner Alford overruled the objection. Lichtman then told him he owned stock in the Loew enterprises."

"Did Famous Players-Lasky own any?" Fuller asked.

McDonald again objected and was again overruled.

"I don't know," Lichtman answered.

He then said that the amount of Famous Players-Lasky output taken by Loew varied. Some seasons it was about 50% of the output for the Loew New York house, but it varied in other cities. This referred to feature pictures. He finally summed up:

"They were a large customer," adding that only a few short subjects went to Loew, however.

"How about the Stillman theater in Cleveland?" Lichtman was asked.

He said he learned that Famous Players-Lasky had an interest in it, and also had an operating contract with Loew for the New York theatre, Famous Players-Lasky owning the films and Loew operating the theater.

Considerable time was then spent in questions concerning Arctraft and the manner of shipping picture prints from studios to laboratories and then to exchanges. In reply to questions, Lichtman stated that pictures produced in California were sent to laboratories in New York, and instructions for the shipment of the prints to exchanges, etc., were packed in detail.

"To all intents and purposes Famous Players-Lasky Corp. was operating in 1916," said Lichtman. "To strike this from the record, but the motion was denied and an exception noted."

In reply to questions, Lichtman stated that pictures produced in California were sent to laboratories in New York, and instructions for the shipment of the prints to exchanges, etc., were packed in detail.

At this point Fuller introduced in evidence as Exhibit 8 a booklet entitled "The Story of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp." Lichtman testified that this was prepared to impress exhibitors with the quality of Famous Players pictures. It was sent out by the public relations and advertising departments which were part of the distribution department of which he was general manager.

"Early in his testimony Lichtman told of the formation of Paramount. This was preceded by negotiations in the Spring of 1914, when the terri-

To Arrange F. P. L.-- 1st. Nat'l Deal

Says He Proposed Plan Which Both Zukor and First National Would Agreeable--Failure of Paramount's Finance Committee to Guarantee Half of the Amount in Writing Balked Scheme

That a plan for a working agreement between Famous Players-Lasky and First National in 1921 fell through after considerations, it had been done when it was revealed yesterday in the testimony of Al Lichtman at the fourth day's hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges.

Lichtman testified that he proposed the idea to Adolph Zukor two weeks before the former resigned as the Famous Players distribution manager. Zukor told him to proceed, whereupon Lichtman went to Chicago where a First National meeting was held and talked the matter over with several finance holders.

They were in a receptive mood, he declared.

Shortly afterwards, Lichtman came back to New York, according to his testimony, and informed Zukor that the consummation of the plan would take six months. Lichtman asked $250,000 for putting it over.

Zukor was willing to make an arrangement by which Famous Players would pay Lichtman half of this amount if it First National would pay the other half, said Lichtman, but Zukor declared he would have to take the matter up with H. D. H. Connick and the other members of the Famous Players finance committee.

The committee, according to the witness, wanted Lichtman to go ahead, but when he asked to have the matter put in writing, the committee demurred. The whole plan was then dropped.

The Government's examination of Lichtman was concluded at 3 o'clock, and the defense sprang a surprise by waiving cross-examination.

Another high light of Lichtman's testimony was his description of what he considered the position of the independent producer in competition with the producer-distributor-exhibitor, controlling a large number of first-run theaters.

Nevertheless, with all the percentage against him, he players $1,000, only to be told that there are several gunmen around. So he only gets a hundred.

Continuing his line of questioning begun Wednesday, W. H. Fuller, for the Government, took up the key city situation in Dallas, Detroit, the North-west, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Lichtman testified, concerning the "difficulty between Famous Players and E. H. Hulsey" that Hulsey, who was a First National Securities holder, assumed a very antagonistic attitude toward Famous Players and became active in behalf of First National. Previously, he was very much interested in distributing Paramount pictures, but he gradually cut the number down, said Lichtman, and at the same time accused the Zukor Corporation of being a "trust."

According to the witness Hulsey started a campaign of propaganda against Famous Players and organized the Texas exhibitors in opposition to the corporation. As a result, S. A. Lynch came to New York and recommended to Zukor that theaters would have to be built in the Hulsey territory. Lynch was told to work out the best possible arrangement Lichtman declared.

Block booking was also brought to the fore when Lichtman was asked whether the change in Paramount policy made in 1920, when "it was decided to sell on merit instead of quantity," was a result of complaints made by exhibitors. The witness created considerable amusement when he declared that "complaints are more or less prevalent from exhibitors at all times."

A letter, which the witness said he had written in August, 1920, to the Paramount branch manager in Dallas, was introduced. It concerned the change of policy on bookings. Similar letters, he declared, were sent to all district and branch managers.

Replying to questions on statistics, Lichtman said there were about 14,000 picture theaters in the United States, with a seating capacity of approximately 8,000,000 and a daily attendance under certain conditions of some 10,000,000,000.

The testimony of W. H. Fuller, for the Government, before the Anti-Trust Division of the United States Supreme Court, relating to the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission against Famous Players-Lasky, ended Wednesday. Mr. Justice McReynolds, the presiding judge, adjourned the hearing for the day without a decision.

Mr. Justice McReynolds, who has been conducting the hearings in the presence of the attorneys for the parties to the suit, said the present session would be continued next week.

ANKOS COMPANY

Binghamton, New York
Summer Slump

What are you going to do about it? You, brother Exhibitor. And you, Mister Producer. Plus you, Mister Distributor. Serious question which of you, is to blame the most. For not doing away with it. Of course summer isn’t the best time to show pictures. Everybody knows that. But—if the houses are to be kept open—and it looks as if they are—then everybody should do the very best possible to make them pay.

Joe Schenck pointed out the real reason for the “slump.” Too many poor pictures drive the regular “fans” away. They respond when a good picture comes along. But there are enough good pictures to keep things humming. So the exhibitor who shows a cheap picture deserves what’s coming to him.

Get the strongest lineup you can. For the summer months. Keep the program light. Have a lot of fine short subjects. Get behind your mailing list. Get on the job. Keep things humming. And, once again, don’t book a flock of weak sisters just because you can buy ‘em cheap. Pay for your stuff. Run the big ones. Arrange a few pre-release showings if possible. Keep the boys working.

NO SLUMP IN SIGHT

Fortunately, according to some of the best posted men in the business—a slump, such as is usually the lot of picture folk in summer—isn’t in sight yet. Business is generally good. All over. Except in some agricultural districts. Like Kansas and Nebraska. But in the manufacturing sections business holds up very well. Even in the South business is splendid. So a lot of people will wander into the summery period feeling a lot better than last year. Which will help a lot. Because it’s the yellow streak of many exhibitors that makes the summery season poorer than it actually is. Don’t let’s forget that.

THAT FAMOUS FAMOUS HEARING

Federal Trade Commission developing much interesting matter. Letting a lot of outsiders in on what a lot of insiders knew. Long time ago. But makes darn good reading. Only trouble is that it promises to run six months or a year. And it takes a lot of interesting stuff to maintain interest that long.

Incidentally a theatrical paper. In its report of the proceedings. Said that in the film trade. That gossip had intimated that that “thing had been taken out of the trial” and pointed out that Holland Hudson, one of the investigators of the Commission was not attending the hearing.

Those who know how ill Holland Hudson is—he is in the Adirondacks fighting tuberculosis and may not recover—and who know that a fine type of man Hudson is—resent this sort of intimation severely. And have not hesitated to express their sentiments over this sort of journalistic sensationalism.

Existing F. I. L. M. Boards to Be Basis of Arbitration System Under Uniform Contract

One purpose of the present trip of Charles C. Pettijohn and Lloyd D. Willis of the Hays organization is to explain to existing F. I. L. M. Clubs and Boards of Trade the operations of the uniform contract and the arbitration system which has been developed and will be developed in that connection.

Part of the plan is to nationalize all exchanges organizations using the present personnel to carry out the new arbitration scheme on a country-wide basis. All decisions will be made by the various local bodies on which both exhibitors and exchange men will have equal representation. When the local bodies cannot decide, a court of appeal which will sit in New York will pass the final ruling. There has been talk for some time of the formation of a world-wide board of appeals which will be appointed to handle the detail of the entire plan, particularly the flow of correspondence between the clubs in the field and the New York office.

Gentlemen, I’m dumb glad to be here, and when I begin telling you the way things are going on out in Hollywood I hope you all won’t be squeaky.

How I come to go to Hollywood, is this: My wife she gets into a taxi run by a Frisco paper, which giving away ten round trips to Los Angeles for the ten persons who gets the most subscriptions for the paper. So my wife, Mrs. Deneker, is out, and as there isn’t been a paper in Pneumonia, why she gets home by buying it, and wins and in 1 argues her into my going account of maybe I can buy pictures direct from the studio and cut the exchange profit, that’s how I started.

Well I gets there all 0. K.

called Betsy Donna. Now it ain't my business, but it strikes me any picture with the word belly in it, is going to be censored out. I met Mr. Lasky and told him my thoughts and he didn't have an answer so I guess he knew I was right. Anyhow, they won't make a nickle on it. "What's dancing pictures don't go good out any way.

"Then I get into the Metro studio and they is making a picture called "The End of the Pavement." Well, I thought maybe it was some kind of an advertisement for a soap company and told them I didn't run any indusitrails. Then I heard it meant the gutter and then some one said it was a complete history of the company during the last year.

"That kind of stuff is over my head. I don't understand any of it.

"So I went out to Universal City with a fellow named Abe Stern in his car. All the way out he was telling me how much it would have cost me if I had went out in a taxi cab and kinda spoiled the trip. However, I did see stuff out there that wasn't on my head.

"I spent the whole day at Universal City and met Carl Laemmle and Julius Stern. They was working on a football picture. After I got there, told them I'd hold it till next fall when football was being played. Then all making covered wagon stories too. They was working on one about forty mile long box car soap and it was advertised all over town.

"Well, boys, I met some mighty pretty girls out there too. But I can't say as how any of them are ory or wicked. I did some little experimentin' too. I guess this here Will Hays is got Hollywood all stirred up.

"Now about perduction on the coast. I ain't no judge of what's what. I ain't settlin' myself up as no smart aleck in this here business but it's been a year since I turned my flour and feed shop into a movie temple of motion pictures and since then I grabbed six other theaters. Counting my six houses, I can give five consecutive Saturdays and one Wednesday and I control eight towns, countin' two towns near Elks which ain't got no theaters and the people from which comes into Exxena when I have a good picture, which is about every year or so.

"As I was saying about perduction, everyone out there is making a picture called covered wagon now, but which is to have other names when they come out. I wouldn't be surprised next year to see every picture made, have a string of wagons in it some place. I don't know why this is, for judging from the rotten business I did with The Four Horseman, which along the same lines, I don't figure any picture with that and a couple a wagons for stars, can git over. But it's none of my business.

"I went over to Doug Fairbanks lot and watched them make'n a picture but couldn't find out the name of it.

AL'S HERE

Steffes. All decked up and pretty. Carrying a chip on his shoulder. And wanting the great and glorious honor. Of being the head of the MPTO of A. Al openly admits he is after the job. Stopped in the big burg en route through the South and broadcast. After delegates. And doesn't care who knows it. Those who attended Washington last year know that if the Cohen-Walker scrap had not developed Al would have been a candidate for the presidency then. So his open campaign is no surprise.

Meantime Michigan offers Jim Ritter for the job. If sufficient finances can be depended upon. And there are a flock of other native sons of various states who may be in the running. Wisconsin is talking about McWilliams of Madison; Missouri as Joe Mogler in the limelight. True is being talked of as a possible dark horse. And of course there is talk of Cohen again being compelled to go to the post, because his friends want him. Regardless of his declarations. That he wasn't and isn't a candidate.

Let the good game roll on. The more the merrier.

FAME

SILLY STUFF

M. P. T. O. of Kansas. Out with a statement. Against "million dollar pictures." "Doc" Cook. Of that organization. Says no, very few pictures cost more than $100,000. And the million dollar stuff is the bunk.

"Doc" might be better posted. For his organization's sake. Before these wise cracks leak out.

THAT DINNER

Saturday night. Of the Advertisers. Naked Truth and all. One affair. Great party. Lots of fun. Expose of Clem Deneker included. And the appearance of "IT" the rumor foundry. Also the sketches.

Great credit due to Harry Reichenbach. Lots of it. Well timed. What a whip of a tongue. That bird has!

PRODUCERS AND EXCHANGES

Had much to do. With the manner in which First National decided. That beginning with next year their exchanges would handle no outside product. Which was occasioned by several things. One of which was that producers releasing through FN objected to these less important pictures being handled.

But there is another reason back of this as well. Producers aren't easy to satisfy with exchange operations. There are any kicks coming constantly regarding prices, etc., and records. And that is one of the reasons why Famous doesn't take in outside product. Too much bickering. Too much discussion.

But this is certain: with this product barred from FN exchanges it must go somewhere. Which means additional product for new exchanges or existing distributing companies.

QUICK BOOKING

The Warners are excited. Over the Los Angeles premiere of "Main Street." At the Mission which Mack Sennett owns.

A coast celebrities there. And special electrical display hauled over from the studio. Have you heard how Sennett booked it? Happened some months ago. When Eph Asher, while at lunch with Abe Warner. At the Astor. Heard that "Main Street" had been bought. Right then and there. Said Asher "I want it for the Mission." Booked before the crank turned. Brave man!

DANNY,
Names 12 Cities
Property was bought in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, according to Connick, but no building was done because of "hard times." The English Hotel site in Indianapolis was obtained under long lease; and attempts made to acquire houses in Portland, Ore., Chicago, and other cities, he testified.

On cross-examination, Connick was asked by Robert T. Swaine, for the defense, if it wasn't true that the producer had to get his pictures before the people, to which the witness assented. Then Swaine asked if the theater wasn't a factory just a laboratory or projection machine and had to be high-class if all the links in the chain from studio to screen were to be complete. Connick agreed, but said the obtaining of a site for a theater differed from the same operation in the case of a shoe-store.

He explained this by saying that there were only a few desirable theater sites in the large cities and if you got the best one you blocked off almost anybody else, thereby controlling the first-run situation in those towns.

Zukor Planned Theater Conquest in Foreign Countries, Trial Shows

The Indian Project Was The First Step Along Those Lines Testifies Tarkington Baker—Walter E. Greene Second Witness Tells of Formation of Artcraft and Select

That Famous Players-Lasky attempted to extend its theater acquisition policy abroad, with the Indian project as a beginning, was testified yesterday at the hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges by Tarkington Baker, formerly employed by F. P.—L.

According to Baker, Adolph Zukor wanted to make his corporation the “leading company” in Europe, following the same policy as was being pursued in America.

Baker also discussed the “difficulties” encountered by independents in getting distribution and was subjected to rigid cross-examination on these points by the defense counsel.

Interesting details concerning the formation of Select, Artcraft and Related were testified to by Walter E. Greene.

Select, he said, was organized in 1917 with Famous Players owning one half interest and L. J. Selznick the other half. Subsequently, Selznick bought the F. P. —L. interest.

Greene, whose testimony occupied much of the day, told of the “friction” which arose between the Zukor and Lasky units and the Hodkinson-Paramount regime. He covered much of the ground previously taken up in the evidence given by Al Lichtman.

He described a meeting which he said occurred at the Hotel Astor with Zukor, Elek Ludvigh, Arthur S. Friend, William A. Sherry, Hiram Abrams, James Steele and himself present, at which an agreement was drawn up and signed. It was introduced in evidence and concerned getting 50% interest in Paramount for Zukor and Lasky.

Subsequently, he testified two other agreements were signed bearing on the same matter. The removal of

Monopoly Charge

...ulate that only Eastman stock must be used. This pact is cited by the Federal Trade Commission as monopolistic.

In March of this year George Eastman forwarded a letter to Tom Evans of the Eastman Kodak Company, which Eastman withdrew his objection to the use of any but American-made stock by the members of the association.

The Federal Trade Commission reason assigned for this, but the report was that rumblings of an impending Government investigation had prompted this action. This was not confirmed by any of those Federal departments in Washington which might have something to do with such a probe.

Thirty days are granted the respondents to make a reply. The charges have been lodged against the following:

Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.; George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Co.; Jules E. Brulatour, president of the Allied Laboratories Association, Inc., New York, and the following members of that association: The Barton-Holmes Lectures, Inc., Chicago; the Geva Film Laboratory, Inc., New York; the Kineto Co. of America, Inc., New York; the Kahlman Laboratories, Inc., New York; Palisades Film Laboratories, Inc., New York; Illumination Laboratories, Inc., New York; the Eastman Kodak Co., New York; Evans Film Manufacturing Co., Inc., New York; the Republic Laboratories, Inc., New York; the Palisades Film Laboratories, Inc., New York; the Farina Film Laboratories, Inc., New York; James S. Havens, general counsel of Eastman Kodak in Rochester, to whom a wire was sent, asking for a statement. At the time of going to press, no answer had been received.

The complaint states that the Eastman Kodak Company is the largest manufacturer of raw stock in the world, and up to March, 1920, manufactured and sold approximately 24% of the total sold in the United States, and manufactured and sold approximately 96% of all the raw stock produced in the United States.

Between March, 1920, and September, 1921, due to competition by American importers of raw stock manufacturers of Eastman, the sales by the Eastman Company decreased to approximately 81% of the total sales of raw stock in the United States.

Jules E. Brulatour, the respondent, is engaged in New York City, in purchasing the stock from the Eastman Company and reselling it through the United States. This respondent about March, 1920, purchased approximately 81% of all the raw stock sold by Eastman in the United States.

Allied Laboratories Association, Inc., is described as a non-trading corporation, organized in New York and restricted to persons, firms or corporations engaged in manufacturing and selling prints, the Trade Commission statement being as follows:

"Cinematograph film manufactured by the Eastman Company and sold by Brulatour is known as 'Eastman-Brulatour stock' and 'positive stock.' The negative stock is sold in the same manner as the positive stock. The positive stock is that to which the prints by Brulatour are limited. The negative stock is sold to manufacturers of foreign-made film."

It is understood, the complaint recites, that the Eastman Company would keep its three manufacturing laboratories in operating order and would reopen and operate such laboratories in competition with the Associations members. Should any of the members again purchase or use in their films cinematograph film manufactured by the Eastman Company and have exploited the fact that no other film is used in their laboratories.

"A further charge is made that various members of the association have falsely announced to the trade from time to time that cinematograph film produced by competitors of the Eastman Company could not be used to advantage. The further statement is made in the complaint that members of the association have consistently sought to coerce out manufacturing laboratories to become members of the association and to agree to purchase cinematograph film from the Eastman Company and to refuse to purchase from the Eastman Company's competitors.

Had Foreign Plans

W. W. Hodkinson as president of Paramount followed.

Baker's sale in 1916 was formed, in 1916, to distribute the Mary Pickford pictures originally; other star productions were added. He testified that it was sought to create the impression that Arreat was a separate company.

Asked whether he, as president of Wanger, held a meeting with Zukor, he replied that he discussed Arreat policy frequently with the latter.

"The finances were furnished by Famous Players-Lasky," said Greene.

Zukor, he explained, also arranged the Fairbanks, Cohen and Griffith contracts in his presence. The Ester Ferguson contract handled by Lasky, Greene was then asked about "the difficulty in selling the Pickford pictures to the Stanley Company. Stanley, of Arreat, he said, contended that Arreat was a subsidiary of F. P.-L. and the Paramount stock should divide the pictures. On cross-examination, Greene said that the Fairbanks, Cohen and Griffith pictures were handled by a subsidiary, Lasky, and that all Paramount stock had been held by Lasky in the latter part of 1916."

After the consolidation of the Paramount-Arreat exchanges in 1919, Greene said he became the managing director of the company.

The first board of theater acquisitions, he said, were in the early part of 1917, when E. Mandelbaum, who had designed the Griffiths in Colorado, had gotten into "financial difficulties" and was given assistance by Famous.

Acquisition of first-run theaters was discussed at a board meeting in Chicago in 1917-18, after a franchise plan had been abandoned. The deal for the Rialto and Rivoli was arranged through Felix Kain, brother of Otto H. Kain, said Greene.

Just before he left Famous, Lynch and Zukor discussed the Southern Enterprises, the witness went on. Lynch was willing to put up $500,000, if F. P.-L. would put up an equal amount. Zukor took it to the board directors "as part of a" (excutive committee with the result that the corporation was formed, and Lynch also wanted to go into the Kansas City and St. Louis territory, he added.

The part played by Zukor in the formation of Select Pictures Corp. was then revealed, according to the testimony. Greene said F. P.-L. formed the company jointly with L. J. Heinzke in 1917 as a national half interest. "Famous Players-Lasky had considerable to say about the Select policies," the witness said.

"He was on the Board of Directors, objected to this line of policies, declaring there was nothing about Select in the complaint. Marvin Feldman, for the Government, argued that the general allegations were sufficient to cover the point, and he was sustained."

"Later one year later, said Greene, Selznick bought the half interest owned by F. P.-L. and the formation of Realart immediately followed. Realart had independent offices, and Arthur S. Kane, Morris Kohn and Jack Woody, who had previously been employed by Select, went to Realart."

On cross-examination, Greene agreed with McDonald that Mary Pickford left her pictures were of such excellence that they deserved separate exploitation and "being a woman had her way." McDonald also brought out that Fairbanks' Griffith and Cohen had the same idea. "In other words, you had to meet the terms of these stars and directors or do without their pictures," McDonald asked Greene.

"Cross-examined on Mambo's objection to booking Pickford through Artcraft instead of Paramount, Greene quoted Mambo as saying: 'It's a shame Arreat is handling the pictures; they ought to be handled by Paramount.'"

Concerning American Releasing he said the company had six releases ready for its second year and was producing in all the product of 30 producers.

"Baker was the other witness of the day. He told in detail of being cut out by F. P.-L. to produce in India and F. P.-L. pictures there, but also to acquire theaters in the principal cities."

"He quoted Walter Wanger, then F. P.-L. president, repeatedly to the effect that the Indian concern would follow the same theater policy as F. P.-L. in America — and control the theatrical situations. He also made to purchase circuits in India, said the witness, but the whole plan was finally killed when he received a cable from Zukor to come home, in March 1921."

"Zukor had previously described the Indian enterprise to him as part of a large plan by which he wanted to make F. P.-L. 'the leading company' abroad as well as in America. From March to June, 1921, Baker testified he had made an investigation of the 'pedagogic picture' situation for Wanger. He talked with Beith, then manager of the Famous Players department, and he favored the idea, but Zukor, Comick and Lasky opposed it."

"Baker then said a plan for 'amalgamation between F. P.-L. and Metro' came up at a luncheon attended by himself, Wanger, Arthur S. Kane, and Emil Shauer, Robert T. Swan, for the defense, objected to this as a "toxic" witness and he was sustained."

"Asked what would be the effect if F. P.-L. went into his field — meaning educational films— Baker said it would put him out of business. This answer was objected to, but the objection was overruled."

When he was asked why he didn't make features, Baker explained that he wanted to make only the best, and "with the three great companies as it is and the three of them, he had his board of directors against it. Independents with one picture, he said, were up against a stone-wall. On cross-examination, Baker was given a severegrill ing by the Famous Players' lawyers."

He had offered through an intermediary, to produce a picture based on an original story by Booth Tarkington, he said. This proposition was made to First National, he said. He also "spoke" to R. H. Cochran, Universal, the witness declared, but made no attempts to market the idea to Fox, Famous Players or Metro. "You say a producer with only one or two pictures a year can't have any chance at Fairbanks makes only a few a year and he is successful, isn't he? asked McDonald. Baker admitted that it was, "If a picture is excellent it will be shown, won't it?" persisted McDonald, but Baker said that was not entirely the case."

"As we suggest about releasing through Vitagraph and American Releasing, the witness declared that those companies were not able to command such successful first-run business to make it worth the producer's while."

On re-direct examination, Baker maintained that the one-picture proposition had a difficult time in finding a distributor, whose other product is of similar high standard.

Tells Federal Trade Commission He Will Produce Contract—E. J. Ludwig Says He Never Heard Of It—Goldwyn, Rothafel, Plunkett and Atkinson Also on the Stand Yesterday

Testimony by Samuel Goldwyn, who told how he was "forced to resign" from Famous Players-Lasky; and by Richard A. Rowland, First National general manager, who said he understood First National and Southern Enterprises had gone into a working agreement in 1922, featured yesterday's hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges against E. P.-L., and the other respondents.

Six witnesses were heard in all. Besides Goldwyn and Rowland, Samuel Rothafel, Joseph L. Plunkett, Frederick Gage, sales manager of American Releasing and W. E. Atkinson, of Metro, gave testimony.

Rowland agreed to produce the contract he said he had been made between First National and the E. P.-L. subsidiary in the South. He declared he had not participated directly in the matter.

Reference to this so-called deal, made during the cross-examination of Goldwyn, provoked a bitter wrangle between opposing counsel. Goldwyn was asked by Marvin Farrington, for the Government, what the effect would be on the other producers in view of the "agreement" between the Lynch circuit and First National.

"Very simple," answered Goldwyn. "The theaters would naturally play First National pictures first, and others if any open time was left.

Robert T. Swaine, declared the defense would not admit any such contract existed: if it did, it might merely be such a booking contract as was made with Southern ENTER.

prises by other companies. Elek J. Lasky said he never heard of such an agreement.

The testimony given by both Rowland and Goldwyn bristled with interesting details. The former was asked if he was still a stockholder in F. P.-L. "Not exactly," he said, "I believe I have 100 shares. I'm practically out of it.

The standing of various companies as to quality pictures during the past several years was taken up, with the Famous Players' counsel stressing heavily the excellence of F. P.-L. product as the reason for the corporation's lead.

Rowland finally named five companies which in his opinion stood out above the rest of the field; F. P.-L., First National, Goldwyn, United Artists, and Metro.

There were 3500 franchise and sub-franchise holders in First National in 1919, he estimated, less than 5% of whom owned first-run theaters. Today he said there were 2200, with the same percentage of first-runs.

Regarding the cancellation of franchises by the exhibitor he said "it could be done on six months notice, if all the pictures had been played or paid for and all bills settled in full." He reviewed in detail the history of Metro (of which he was a director) until he left the company in 1922.

One of the highlights of Goldwyn's testimony was his story of an attempted merger of Famous Players Film Co. and the Lasky Feature Play Co. with Triangle. This was initiated at the time the producers in Paramount were having trouble with W. W. Hodkinson, and the plan contemplated also the merging of Paramount Pictures Corp., with Triangle, he declared. An understanding was reached at conferences on the coast and in New York, according to Goldwyn, but the deal was not consummated. He said his effect, however, said the witness, of forcing the issue in the fight between the producers and Hodkinson.

Goldwyn told also of his resignation from F. P.-L. He had gone to the coast, he narrated, to bring about the acquisition of the Bosworth Company, which was done. On his return he said Jesse L. Lasky told him that Zukor had written a letter to the F. P.-L. board of directors declaring that he (Zukor) would resign as president unless Goldwyn left the company.

"I asked Lasky how he expected to vote when the matter came up before the board," Goldwyn went on, "and he told me he was going to vote to have Zukor remain. I didn't think that was a nice thing for Lasky to do."

After he formed Goldwyn Pictures Corp., through W. W. Abramson, then president of Paramount, he called to him and made an offer to the effect that F. P.-L. would take over all his contracts and buy him out. "He must have talked the matter over with Zukor," said Goldwyn. The offer was declined.

Asked when he left the Goldwyn corporation, the witness explained that he left it "twice," the first time in 1921 and the last in 1922. "But I am a larger stockholder in Goldwyn now than when I got out," he added.

On the acquisition of theaters by the Goldwyn Feature Producers, he said in 1921 the company acquired 50% interest in 30 houses throughout the country.

"Famous Players began to get hold of the theater situation in 1919-1920," he declared. "And with the number of First National franchise holders growing, we found it very difficult for Goldwyn to get the same price for cities. The capitalization of the Goldwyn company was increased in order to acquire theaters.

On cross-examination, the witness said he considered key city situations indispensable for the success of high-grade pictures. "The importance of Broadway in the first-run situation is not as great now as it was a year ago," he thought.

Swaine brought out that one of the causes of "Famous Players' success was the consistent high quality of pictures," and asked the witness if Goldwyn's purchase of a controlling interest in the Capitol, New York, wasn't for the purpose of getting "a display-window" for Goldwyn product. The witness said that was true, but he held to his point that it was insufficient for a producer to get into key cities unless he controlled a first-run theater. On the subject of block booking of films, Goldwyn admitted that it was the practice of every company at the time F. P.-L. was following this policy.

Near the end of his cross-examination, the witness made a strong declaration on producer ownership of theaters. This came in answer to a question from Swaine as to whether he didn't consider it good business for a producer to acquire theaters in order to give his pictures proper representation and exploitation value.

"I don't consider it good business for a producer to own theaters," the witness replied. "The motion picture industry is young, and I don't think it advisable for any producer to dominate the theater situation. If the producer can get his pictures played without owning theaters, it is better to do so. It is more advisable to have the two things separate and apart. The only reason Goldwyn acquired interest in theaters was because it couldn't otherwise get into the key cities.

"As a producer, I would rather sell an exhibitor 30 pictures a year and not own a theater in his town, than sell him 40 or 50 and own it," said Goldwyn.

Rothafel, the first witness, was given a brief examination by Gaylord Hawkins. The Government claimed that the Capitol was owned by the Mordell Realty Co., with Goldwyn holding an interest in the theater, but how large he didn't know.

A lengthy cross-examination of the witness was then begun by Robert P. Swaine for the respondents. Rothafel traced his career in the business, from his beginnings in Forest City.

“Backbone”—Goldwyn Capitol

FEIING WORLD: "Backbone," the story is most certainly not up to the standard Goldwyn set in “South for Sale.” It is certainly not the original idea.

GLOVE—Obvious indication on the part of the director and scenario writer detracts from the entertainment value of "Backbone." The story is good acting by William H. Mac and Alfred Lunt, making his debut as a movie hero, was what the tony critics call adequate.

HERALD—The French scenes are well costumed and pictorially pleasant, and the modern portion of the story is delivered with some snappy Canadian melodrama, but these qualities are lost in the plot and complicated manner by which the plot meanders.

In other words, the trouble with "Backbone" is that it makes no sense.

MAIL—Lunt’s part in "Backbone" is trival and so few possibilities as a screen actor. We feel that it made better entertainment as it appeared in print. It is laden with incident less situations for a screen story.

' MORNING TELEGRAPH— A robust, wholesome melodrama of which has been beautifully worked out by many careful hands. Besides being an all together charming picture, it serves as a vehicle to bring Alfred Lunt to the screen. SUN—Those who viewed "Backbone" were surprised to find their minds beguiled by a phenomenon so rare in this day of mass entertainment. The story was well worth recording. They saw the sudden rise of a young player who may some day fill the

At the hour of going to press, the members of the Allied Laboratories Ass'n, Inc., were meeting at Delmonico's to discuss the charges filed against them by the Federal Trade Commission.

Exporters to Meet

In all likelihood, exporters interested in a possible refund from the Government which collected a good deal of money under Section 906 of the Revenue Act of 1918 as tax on the sale of foreign films will hold a meeting shortly to decide on a course of action.

W. L. Sherry, once the largest stockholder in Paramount, and a former vice-president of that corporation, told yesterday on the stand in the Federal Trade Commission hearing his story of how "he lost his stock, never got the exchange contract promised him by Adolph Zukor and others, and now owes F. P. L. $15,000."

The value of Sherry's stock at one time approximated $800,000, he said. Together with the other territorial buyers, Sherry explained that he participated in selling the exchange interests to Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky. In return, Sherry testified he was to receive $1,000 a week and 2% of the gross as district manager for the New York territory. The contract was never executed, he declared, though some of the other original owners of Paramount received theirs.

He made repeated appeals to Zukor, according to his testimony, but the contract never materialized. After some time had elapsed, Sherry said it was arranged he would draw $250 a week as a temporary arrangement.

Subsequently Sherry said he bought the New York rights to "Joan of the Woman" from Zukor for $25,000, paying $10,000 which he borrowed at the bank with his F. P. L. stock as collateral, and giving an unsecured note for $25,000.

While he was the New York district manager, Sherry testified that regular price lists of pictures were furnished by Paramount. High rentals were to be obtained from exhibitors, he said, but if the latter were "overauded" adjustments were to be made. Paramount-Artcraft pictures were then being sold in series. Sherry cited one instance, (Continued on Page 6)

"Everybody expects Mr. Meighan to please, and he always does. The picture has been treated intelligently and humanly as well as amusingly. Let the good work go on!"

The New York Call says, "'The Ne'er Do Well' is the perfect American movie. An excellent picturization of the stirring American novel. Thomas Meighan is cast perfectly. Lila Lee makes the role of Chiquita a charming one."

No wonder the picture is doing capacity business at the Rivoli and is due for a second week at the Rialto.

"I cannot find that the courts of this state have heretofore been called upon to decide whether it is actionable to sue a man, not of themselves, unlawful to prevent invitations from ripening into a contract. In England such a question has been answered in the affirmative. If, however, such conduct is ever to held actionable, I think the present is a proper case for taking of that important first step. The conduct on the part of those who were actively concerned in the matter appears to me to have reached the utmost limit of what the law will tolerate in the way of permitting harm to be done to another by one who seeks merely to advance his selfish interests, and who is not actuated by what Mr. Justice Holmes has called 'disinterested malevolence.' I am not able to discern, and I do not think it is contended that the defendants were motivated by any desire to injure the plaintiff. Although it has long been supposed to be the law that conspiracy itself is not actionable, there is a strong modern tendency to ascribe to combination or concert of action the quality of giving actionable to acts otherwise lawful. After giving to the matter the fullest consideration, I have concluded that while I have a strong personal inclination to grant the motion I feel that there is altogether too much room for doubt whether the law, as it stands today, is in accord with the plaintiff to make it appear to order a preliminary injunction."

Concord, N. H.—The House of Representatives has passed a bill prohibiting daylight saving in this state by a vote of 210 to 81.

Say Films Ruin Morals
An Associated Press dispatch from Pekin quotes the Pekin Daily News as saying that American motion pictures are debauching Chinese morals. Cases of robbery and murder along the lines made more or less familiar in American pictures are reported from port cities. Some sort of Government restrictions may result.

Those Long Features
This comes from Hay & Nicholas, the Strand, Fairmont, Minn.

"At the Minneapolis convention attention was called to Marcus Loew's statement in THE FILM DAILY to the effect that the exhibitor wouldn't pay a fair price for pictures if they weren't of extra length.

"Please tell Marcus from us that he is 'all wet' on this proposition. It ain't so. If he will take the trouble to sound out the intelligent exhibitor—the man who has a big investment to protect, and who is using his brains to try to present programs that are really want, he will find an overwhelming sentiment in favor of a diversified program. And Marcus and his co-workers are deliberately preventing that sort of program.

"One of Marc's salesmen told us this week that it was impossible to tell these stories in less reels, to which we replied that Dave Griffith used to tell them in two reels, and sold them with a damned sight better than most of them are told today. After mature reflection we don't care to qualify that statement."

"Dillon of Cortlandt," who, he said, was anxious to have his contract renewed, had been promised a rate that he said he had been accustomed to paying.

When Sherry insisted that some adjustment be made with Dillon, he could not get a hearing. Dillon had been called by Sherry to prove that he would "ditto cancel" the $25,000 note purchased by Sherry when he bought the New York rights to "Joan."

The defense counsel did not cross-examine Sherry.

John M. Quinn, general manager of Vitagraph, and Santi Morris, general manager of Warner Brothers, were the only other witnesses of the day. The former furnished a list of pictures produced by Vitagraph since 1918, and marked those which he considered entitled to first runs.

On cross-examination Robert T. Jennings, for the respondents, brought out that Vitagraph had a lease on and operated what was now the Criterion theater, New York, from February, 1914 to January, 1916. Quinn said Vitagraph gave up the theater two years before he joined the company.

Repeal Defeated

Senator James J. Walker's measure failed late yesterday by a vote of 71 to 74, after it had been repeatedly renewed yesterday by a few hours by Maine legislators who adjourned. 71 voted for and 1 vote against the measure. Although the Republicans opposed the repeal, and Delmonico, Innmann, and Jesse, of New York, and Griffith of Rochester, the Democrats, Livingstone, and Miller, of all up-state counties, in opposition.

All indications pointed yesterday to a killing of Walker's bill. As a result of a meeting of the Republican leaders, the bill was reported to the Committee. This was due to the fact that Speaker Mac Hold, a public leader felt he could muster enough votes in the Assembly to have the bill defeated to hold off and at the same time permit each member to express his opinion of it.

F.P.-L. Officials Deny "41" and "39" Series Tie-Up First-Run Theaters

Both Ludvig and Kent State Only a Few First-Runs Booked Groups Solid—Add That They Couldn't Force Riesenberg to Show Paramount Pictures if He Didn't Think They Were Good—Long Wrangle Over Block Bookings

Only a few first-run theaters throughout the country booked solid and played Paramount's "41" and "39" blocks of pictures, according to evidence brought out at the hearing yesterday on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the F.-P.-L. group.

"It's a popular fallacy that you can force first-run theaters to take pictures in whole blocks," declared Elek J. Ludvig of Famous Players. "We couldn't even make Dr. Riesenberg take all our pictures unless he thought they were good."

Argument over-block-bookings occupied a large part of the hearing. S. R. Kent, who took the stand in the afternoon was asked to produce later all the so-called "41" and "39" contracts so that it could be determined how many pictures less than the complete blocks certain first-run theaters had played.

Government counsel brought out that first-run exhibitors might have booked only a few pictures less than the complete blocks.

Kent explained that the form of contract used for the "41" and "39" groups contained the names of pictures printed on the form, and in cases where exhibitors did not book all of them the names were erased.

Questioned about the method of booking Paramount pictures in the F.-P.-L. owned houses in New York, Kent said that a blanket arrangement was made by the distribution department with Riesenberg, and the latter divided the films among the three F.-P.-L. theaters.

In Buffalo, he said no exhibitor bought all the "41" for first run, but the group went to three different theaters, separately owned. There was a blanket arrangement for the F.-P.-L. owned houses in the South, he said, the records of which were kept in Atlanta.

“Norma Talmadge and her able cast, including the director, have done the finest jobs of the season.”
—New York World.

“The picture amplifies the details of the play vividly. A vigorous, credible drama that does not let go the interest of the spectator a minute. Especially worth while. Norma Talmadge is particularly good and acts with distinction and dignity and in whom the fires of emotion burn intensely.”
—New York American.

“Good melodrama with not an inch of dulness. Norma has sheer ability.”
—New York Globe.

“TO ACTORS AND AC-TRUSSES”

Chicago is a second class town compared to New York. Every New Yorker admits that. Yesterday a Chicago visitor dropped into our office with quite a long line of conversation, which we finally asked him to put in writing. This is the result: To Mesdames Cowl, Barrymore, Ulric, Eagles and others—Ladies: I had to spend today (Sunday) in New York. I wanted to spend part of it in the company of one of you and was willing to pay $4.40, $7.70 or whatever it is the speculators ask, but your Sunday law compelled me to spend my time and 85 cents in breathless admiration of your greatest rival.

Who is she? Norma Talmadge, and you ought to know it. With a splendid company she gave a superb performance of “Within the Law,” a fine play originally and it has now become as good a photoplay. At least as good. Believe me, ladies, if you are worth $4.40 or $7.70, Norma Talmadge is worth 85 cents. At least.

Now you made me discover this today, and you compel thousands of others to make the same discovery every Sunday. Is that good for your business?

But—I am saving up my best argument for the end: Do as the motormen, coppers, reporters, locomotive drivers, etc., rather than as the barbers. Take a day off a week for the sake of health and temperament. Only don’t make it Sunday. Stagger your days off the way we do in our business. Let one show—yours, Miss Barrymore—be dark on Mondays. Yours, Miss Eagles, on Tuesday. And so on.

Then when I and other Sunday visitors in your town go back home we can spread the glad tidings of your radiance instead of this: “Say, when Norma Talmadge’s latest release, ‘Within the Law,’ gets here, for Pete’s sake don’t miss it.”

A First National Picture
Not In Control
William L. Sherry's testimony on Wednesday was characterized by Robert T. Sherry, the respondent, as the airing of a personal grievance. The defense introduced a letter written from Sherry in March, 1918 to Arthur S. Friend, the treasurer of F. P. L., in which Sherry expressed gratitude for the cancellation of the $25,000 note he had given the corporation in the "Joan the Woman" matter. The letter was signed "Yours very gratefully."
"Dear Sir:"
"I am in receipt of yours of the 8th inst., advising me of the action of the Executive Board in cancelling the Twenty-five thousand dollar ($25,000) note held by the Cardinal Film Corp. against me as balance due on the purchase price of the production of "Joan the Woman," and wish to extend to the members of the board my sincere appreciation of the same. My only regret is that the production did not meet with the success we had all hoped for, and that instead of having to release me of this burden, that I could not have turned in an additional sum to the company from the receipts of same. But never mind, better luck next time."
"Yours very gratefully,
"W. M. L. SHERRY (signed)" Elek J. Ludvig took the stand again and identified a number of documents called for on subpoenas. These included Price, Waterhouse audits for 1915-1922 inclusive. W. H. Fuller, Jr., for the Government, then read extracts from an F. P. L. advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, identified by the witness, which told, among other things, about "Paramount Week" and stated that "sixty-seven cents of every dollar spent for pictures" was paid to see "Paramounts. Also that "every twentieth person you meet in the street will see a Paramount picture today!"
A publicity booklet, issued in 1922, by F. P. L. and containing the form of bookings, was used that was next taken up. A general discussion of contract forms ensued, and Ludvig pointed out that the new uniform contract recently negotiated by the Hays organization with various exhibitor associations, differed from the old contracts chiefly in its arbitration provisions.
The agreement between Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and F. P. L., which the lawyers after an argument agreed to call "An Agreement for Secure" and not a letter of credit," was identified by the witness and ordered put into the record.
Ludvig agreed to produce a contract between Kuhn, Loeb and Famous and the result of disposition of the ten million dollar pledge issue.
Cross-examination by Swaine on the Post advertisement "to ret the context of the extracts read by Fuller straight" then followed. The keynotes of the portions read by Swaine dealt with "dealers and organization as the basis of Paramount supremacy.

SERVICE

There are over 5,000 readers of THE FILM DAILY. Not plain, ordinary subscribers—but readers. And they wait for the little old paper every day—and wouldn't be without it.

Many of them read no other publication relating to film folk or pictures. They have been led to believe—by five years' honest effort—that "Service" is the middle name of this publication. And part of the "Service" is that they shall have an edition published right where the national exhibitor body meets

Chicago, week of May 21, in the Coliseum

Just as a hundred exhibitors—or less, who attended the St. Louis convention five years ago, had the little old paper printed for them in St. Louis, so all who attend M. P. T. O. of A. annual conventions will always find ready for them. Printed right on hand; in the convention city.

If there ever was a better "buy" for anyone who has anything to sell an exhibitor than this special edition for the convention week, won't someone please stand up and shout it aloud?
Not In Control

Replying to questions about "Paramount Week," Ludvig said all the producers had increased their booking aside certain weeks or months the year for sales drives, so much that "Paramount Week" was al-discarded entirely.

The defense then scored a decided point on the subject of block-sales, here was considerable argument exactly what a subpoena addressed for the district. Ludvig, giving his interpretation of that was wanted, said that "The One" had been sold in block to first run theaters in Salt Lake and Portland, Ore.; and "The Hirty-Nine" had gone in block only first run theaters in Des Moines and Salt Lake.

Reviewing past seasons, he said that there had been no comte first run block sales in 1919-

20. In 1920-21, Block 1 (covering release of September, October and November) was sold almost only to Saenger in New Orleans,

the New Garrick,专卖店, and the Capitol. Oklahoma City

Empress-Queen in Salt Lake;

c Walnut, Family and Strand

in Cincinnati, and a theater in Seattle.

Block 2 of that season (releases in the next three months) went comte to the same first run theaters, muting the New Garrick, according Ludvig. And Block 3 (releases of the remainder of the season) went only in its entirety to theater in Des Moines, and one in Oklahoma City, Salt Lake castle, and the Cincinnati group.

In the case of Block 1, the New arrick had not even played the hole block, said Ludvig. Three pictures were cancelled, the block which went to Saenger were divided among five theaters, he added, and the Cincinnati theater group was used three times out of their booking plan, he said.

Gaylord Hawkins, for the Government, insisted that the information

anted would cover all the bookings of the theater, exhibitors, first run, and it was finally decided to call S. R. Kent at this point.

The defense scored again when defense declared it "a popular thing that you can force first run takers to take pictures in block.

didn't even make Dr. Riesennever did take all our pictures, unless they were good.

Charles Goetz, New York exchange manager for Warner Brothers, said he had never attempted to sell any pictures to the smaller

Broadway, nonsensical Players house, because he

which have looked Warner product, were better for exclusive engagements, he thought, however, he could secure bookings at the Rialto or Rivoli, but never done so. He considered the arrangement with the and Capitol satisfactory. Goetz was not given cross-examination.

The last witness of the morning,

George H. Balsdon, Vitagraph New York exchange manager, underwent a severe grilling by defense counsel.

Had he endeavored to book pictures into the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion with a certain instance except that he had been told by Joe LaRose, assistant to Dr. Riesenfeld, that there was no "open time.

Swaine took up a list of Vitagraph reissues which had been booked to Rialto and Rivoli and when it was released after "The Sheik" (Vitagraph) was released after "The Sheik" (Vitagraph), was being

BOOKED. The witness said he had "believed" it was, and added that he had offered it to La Rose.

"How do you expect to put "The Sheik's Wife" into the Rialto and Rivoli when it was released after "The Sheik"?" Swaine demanded.

Balsdon denied the similarity of advertising at first, and Swaine produced ads. Both pictures from the same papers and the witness looked at them, finally admitting that in certain respects they were very similar.

Swaine then showed the witness an ad. "The Sheik" sent out by F.

F. L. to its exchanges as contrasted with an ad of the Vitagraph picture in the New York World, and Balsdon admitted that the form of lettering and other details were "the same or very similar.

In red ink, Hawkins, took up the list of releases and asked the witness picture by picture

whether these had been offered to Famous Players houses in Broadway. In some cases, the witness said he was not sure and would have to look it up himself. Several of the pictures had been submitted,

he said.

Cross-examined again, Swaine brought out that "A Rogue's Ro-tative," which was released after

Rudolph Valentino had gained his popularity. He showed Balsdon a page ad. From a trade issue which advertised the picture as

"Rudolph Valentino in a Rogue's

Romance." A Vitagraph October

Release. This was in October last, year, after "Blood and Sand"

had been released. The witness admitted that the Vitagraph picture had originally been released some years before.

"In other words, you did not advertise it as a reissue," Swaine said.

The witness said he did not have direct charge of advertising and publicity at the Vitagraph New York exchange.

"How did you tell the exhibitors

it was a reissue?" Swaine persisted.

Balsdon answered that the exhibitors were told the truth about the picture when they inquired.

At the afternoon session, several exchange managers were asked about their releases of first-runs on Broadway. W. C. Hermann, of the Universal, New York exchange, said

he had submitted four or five pictures to the Criterion. "The Rit" had been played to the Rialto, and "Driven" went into the Criterion. On cross-examination, Hermann said Universal had sold numerous short pictures to the Rialto and Rivoli.

An Indication That Spring Golf Tournament on June 5th Will Eclipse All Previous Affairs

everything is shaping up fine for Spring Golf Tournament to be held Tuesday, June 5 at Belclare Club, Bayside, L. I. There is no indication that there are any new compliances and many more to come. To banish point to over 125 being sent, and it need not be surprising if number reached 150 or more when Motion Picture papers, Warner brothers, Pathe Exchange, Reuben J. Jahn, and Rachel Schaefer, have promised 2 pictures; Jules Steinhaus has ordered a trophy, and is on hand to pay for it, and there will be the opportunity to play in the big FILM DAILY. There will be 20 "Bobby Ins" from John M. Spargo, New York editor of the Exhibitors' Herald. And John says any golfer who uses a "Bobby Iron" will never without one. Of course there will be the special prizes, all wrapped up, and, as usual, the real fun of the dinner will come when they opened.

Daniel Carson Goodman Plans More Production—Will Build Own Studio

Daniel Carson Goodman, who is making profit moves for Equity, plans to increase his output materially for next year. He is figuring on 10 pictures all told.

The Brunswick contemplates erecting a studio of his own and is at present considering two sites, one in Westchester and another on Long Island. The next picture for Equity is now in production at the old Talbotage plant on 48th St. Kenneth Webb is directing.

Godsol Due Today

F. J. Godsol is due in today from the coast.

Stern Leaves for East

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Julius Stern of Century Comedies has left for New York.

Merit Plans Housewarming

TheMerit Exchange will hold a housewarming for all exhibitors in its quarters at the Godfrey Bldg. next Wednesday.

Sign Aubrey for Five Years

Chadwick Pictures have signed for the distribution of the Jimmy Aubrey comedies for the next five years. The will be one release a month.

"Potash" Soon in Production

Clarence G. Badger will start work Monday a week at Fort Lee, in the Universal studio, making "Potash and Permutter." On May 27, George Fitzmaurice, Ouida Bergere and members of the company sail for Rome to make "The Eternal City." Herman H. Brummer and his group will be production manager working with Fitzmaurice.

Not the Stage Play

John W. Rumsey, president of the American Play Co., Inc. states that "East of Suez" has not been purchased by Allen Holubar, despite coast reports. Col. Jasper E. Brady, scenario editor for Metro in the East, stated yesterday that the "East of Suez" purchased for Holubar, is an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon, secured long before W. Somerset Maugham wrote his play. Brady stated that the title of the Sheldon story will probably be changed before release.

Equal Billing

For Old Titles and New Titles in Reissued Subjects Ordered by Trade Commission

Washington—The Federal Trade Commission has decided that reissue films under new titles must have the old and new titles displayed in a much larger type so that there can be no doubt as to whether the films are reissues or not. This decision was made in the case of the Government versus the American Film Co. of Chicago.

It was found that advertising materi- prepared for films sold by American displayed the new titles in much larger type than the originals and that this tended to mislead both exhibitors and the public at large. American has been ordered to conform with the new ruling.

Lasky Returns

Jesse L. Lasky returned from the coast yesterday. He said that 17 companies are either at work or will start in the next week.

McDermott Leaves Selznick

J. E. McDermott, treasurer of Select and Selznick Pictures and more recently comptroller of Selznick Dist. Corp. has resigned.

Hans Bartsch Sails

Hans Bartsch, play broker, is now on his way to Europe. Will be gone about six weeks.

Lunch to Fitzmaurice and Badger

George Fitzmaurice, who will direct and produce "The Eternal City" with Samuel Goldwyn, and Clarence G. Badger, who will direct "Potash & Permutter," were guests of honor at a luncheon tendered by Asso. First Nat'l Pictures to the trade press and representatives of the film and daily publications, yesterday at the Ritz. Samuel Goldwyn occupied the place of honor between his directors, Harry Reichenbach, who will handle publicity for the Goldwyn productions served as toastmaster and, as usual, was very witty.

Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr, who will appear in "Potash," spoke, as did both directors. Richard A. Rowland told of how Reichenbach had "sold" the Goldwyn product to the boards of directors to tell him what he could not do. The editor of THE FILM DAILY also spoke.

Discuss First Runs

Many Executives Called by Trade Commission To Explain Situation on Broadway

The Broadway first-run situation was given elaborate attention yesterday, when a number of Executives, including some of the best known names in the industry, appeared as witnesses at the hearings before the Federal Trade Commission against the Famous Players-Lasky group.

Al Lichtman, Elmer Pearson, of Pathe; Paul N. Lazarus, of United Artists; Winfield R. Sheehan, of Fox; Louis Rosenberg, New York exchange manager for Fox, John S. Woody, and Robert H. Cochran, of Universal, took the stand.

With exception of Woody, each executive produced a list of his pictures which he considered entitled to first class first-runs, and was questioned in detail about pictures and play dates.

Each also asked about pictures he believed to possess the best quality over a period of seasons, or at present, and, practically with exception each included Paramount in the leading group.

Sheehan testified that the Fox theaters now numbered between thirty-five and forty, owned by separate corporations, with William Fox at their head. Of these twelve or thirteen played vaudeville. The Fox Film Corp. itself, he said, was now building a theater in Oakland, Calif., and one in Philadelphia. He named a large number of productions which had been shown on Broadway, most of them in legitimate theaters leased by Fox.

Rosenthal was asked specifically whether he had had any difficulty in selling films to the Rialto and Rivoli. He testified that it was the Fox policy to sell the entire product, and that he had learned early in his experience that this would not fit the Rialto-Rivoli plan. No individual Fox specials had been offered to Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, he added, I knew we couldn't get in, so I didn't offer any," he explained.

Cochrane said Universal was a producing and distributing company, which occasionally bought independent films, and that Universal had 10 or 12 theaters. He produced a list of Jewels, dating from Sept. 1, 1918, all of which had been shown first-run throughout the country, and all but a few of which had played Broadway—at the Capitol, the Central, Strand, or other houses. Two—"The First" and "Driven"—were shown in F. P.L. theaters.

Cochrane gave Famous Players credit for the best general average for quality films over the past five years, excluding his own company about which he was not asked to prevent embarrassment. Others in the quality group, according to the witness, are Goldwyn, Fox, Metro, United Artists and First National.

"A number of independent producers make good pictures, don't they?" asked Gaylord Hawkins, for the Government. Cochrane said the number of which came under that classification was increasing.

Robert T. Swaine, of respondents' counsel, inquired of the witness whether there had been a certain glamour about the industry which attracted independents who made one or two pictures and then dropped out.

Cochrane said: "Yes, there has been more publicity on the returns than on the losses," adding that the failure of the producers to whom Swaine referred might be assigned to the fact that they didn't have capital, poor pictures, inability to get distribution and extravagance.

Hawkins rejoined with: "Yes, but the legal profession expecting to make a big success and they prove a failure, too."

The afternoon session was over at 3 o'clock and Examiner E. C. Alvord announced a recess until Monday morning at 10:30.

Al Lichtenberg, recalled to furnish a list of Associated Producers and Lichtenberg pictures which he considered entitled to first class first runs, told about his experiences in attempting to hook the Broadway houses.

Out of 33 films on the two lists he said 10 got Broadway showings. "Shadows" was offered to all the Broadway first runs, he said, but finally played the Loew Circuit. In the case of "The Girl Who Came Back," he declared the terms offered by Dr. Riesenfeld were "not satisfactory." Riesenfeld wanted a guarantee of $18,000 a week from Lichtenberg, the latter said, and the picture was to be played if at all in the latter part of May or early in June. The witness said he would have had to spend about $3,000 additional in advertising and he considered the "risk too great" at that time of year.

He denied that it was lack of "sufficient confidence" in the picture on his part that kept him from making the deal.

Elmer Pearson, the next witness, said Pathe had released 10 features in 1921 and four in 1922, all of which got first runs through the country. He named the Capitol, Strand, Rialto and Criterion as the Broadway first-run houses. Leece's State he did not consider first class first-run, because of its vaudeville policy which prevented the house from paying a high price for film.

Asked by Swaine what distinguished a first-run house, the witness enumerated location, size and the quality of entertainment.

"If any Broadway theater ran poor pictures for two months in succession, wouldn't you say that would seriously affect its reputation?" Swaine queried. Pearson agreed that was true.

"On the quality of pictures made by various companies, Pearson said he considered Famous Players "above the rest" on a general average.

In looking the Pathé features referred to above into First National houses, Pearson said he had never seen them. This line of questioning was objected to by Gaylord Hawkins, of Government counsel. Pearson said a number of features on the list had played in First National houses. The former franchise holders naturally gave preference to the First National product, all of which he understood they either to play or pay for.

A list of all the United Artists and Allied pictures which he believed entitled to first class first runs was furnished by Paul N. Lazarus, the former a list was taken up picture by picture and Swaine brought out on cross-examination that some 36 had been given Broadway showings.

On redirect examination, Lazarus stated he believed Griffith, Fairbanks, Chaplin and Pickford represented the maximum box-office drawing power in the business, but he would not say, without access to theater records, that no other stars or directors equaled them.

"In other words, it's the superior quality that gets the pictures of the Big Four into the best theaters, isn't it?" Swaine asked on cross-examination, to which the witness replied "Yes."

When "The Sheik of Araby" was referred to on the list, Lazarus pointed out that it was a burlesque on the "Sheik" story, and in no sense an imitation of Paramount's "Sheik." Elek Ludlom immediately explained he had recently leased the company and therefore was not in position to supply a list of Selznick pictures entitled to first-runs. He said he did not know who of the Select personnel would be able to furnish the list, unless it was L. Selnick, former president.

The morning session with Leigh again on the stand identified various documents for the record.

Three years ago competition for stage plays drove prices terrifically high. Some process is on today. Jack Bachmann signs check for 100,000 for "The First Year." Hearst has been offered $75,000 for "The Temptress" by other producers—but may make it himself. "The Hamming Bird" re-written after flop on the stage, is held at $25,000 for pictures. Otis Skinner wants a lot for "Mister Antonio." Where will it end? And how?

HARRY WORRIES

Harry Carr, Los Angeles Times, Worries himself about Pola's past work. And her present. As demonstrated in "Bell Donna." Says in Germany she worked for Lubitsch and told orders "like a Prussian cavalry recruit." And here she boss-est the studio. Which may be right. But why worry about it Lasky has been worrying enough about this problem. To take away nearly all that's left. Of his once curvy looks.

RATTLING THE SKELETON

The Federal Trade Commission investigation. Now on. Recalls to many older men in the business. Some of the early trials and tribulations. Lots of good stories. Of the olden days are being revived. Here's one of the best: Goldwyn, Lasky, Cecil De Mille, Harry Cohen and one more were getting together to form the Lasky producing corporation. There was a lot of palaver.
As to capital. So Goldwyn proudly said "I'll give you $3,000." That was the cue for all the others. Who chipped in the same amount.
Except De Mille. Who didn't have it. And was given his stock.
Later, after the Lasky company was absorbed by Zukor in Fa-ous that stock was worth a lot—for instance Sam Goldwyn's was worth a million.

And the funny part of it is this: that Jaycee Williams was almost in that deal. And Hodkinson would never have put over the early deal with Lasky if Goldwyn had had his idea carried out.
Sam always opposed the Hodkinson idea.

AN IDEA

insiders knew a long time ago."

SHOWMANSHIP

Even in a cafeteria. At least when Eugene Roth finishes with the restaurant in Universal City it promises to show some. Going

Led to Calvin Brown verifying the wire; Ince almost being proved, but finally in Tommy returning to his beloved native soil.

“LAB” MEN “CALLED”

By Federal Trade Commission, together with Eastman, charge monopoly leading to much discussion. As to what’s what. And what to do. Of course there’s an “out.” Eastman’s letter of a few months back leaves the “lab” men open. Regardless of past agreements. As to the use of American raw stock.

But there’s a smile at just one spot. Because of the action, Little Cosman. Of Agfa. How he is grinning.

SAM’S MONTH

Zierler, of Commonwealth. All his boys working. To put it over. And they did. Sam is all smiles today. The party ends May 12. Has had a lot of exhibitor co-operation.

By the way—hear Sam has been offered $35,000 to relinquish certain product. Which he is now distributing. For New York, another exchange deal can be put under way. What a lot of money that is—in one dollar bills!

PEEKSKILL

Lots of talk. Lots of arguments. But Justice Mullan, New York Supreme Court, sustained action of Loew officials. In the action. And the Peekskill crowd lost. Though the Justice said, in conclusion: that though he was inclined to grant the injunction, he felt the law as it stood, left too much room for doubt.

NEW YORK CENSORS

Will continue on the job. Smith, Hays, George Eastman and all to the contrary notwithstanding. Just couldn’t swing enough votes in the Assembly. Though the Senate passed it. All of which means. That there’ll be a lot of jobs. For another year or so. And expense, and unnecessary annoyance. To the entire industry. For no good reason whatsoever.

THAT TOURNAMENT

Looms up bigger and better every day. The only people who will miss it will be those who have to be out of town. Otherwise there will be a great party. And a fine crowd. Don’t forget the time—and place—Tuesday June 3, at Belleclaire Golf Club, Bayside.

Talking of golf. To show what a costly game it can be Hal Roach has been sued for $6,000. Because he “drove” through a windshield and damaged the left cheek of the lady driver.

Boy; page Artie Stebbins.

MAKE ‘EM SHORTER

All you producers. This is the ‘teenth call. Even Joe Plunkett is kicking now. Claims he hasn’t been able to use a two reel comedy at the Strand in months. Because the features run too long.

First National people seem set to cut. Tourneur and Borzage in line. Let’s make it unanimous.

FORGETTING COMPETITION

That’s what John Flinn did. At the A. M. P. A. lunch last week. When he boosted “The Old Nest” and urged a speaker for Mother’s Day. To tie up with the picture as propaganda. Good stuff. John. This business of recognizing worth in pictures. Regardless of the producer. Rupert Hughes who wrote “The Old Nest” was there. And he liked it.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Roto gravure Insert
The latest exploitation accessory to be issued by C. B. C. is a four-page rotogravure insert, "Temptation." The insert is newspaper size with a space at the top for imprinting. They can also be used for lobby display and posters as well as an insert.

An Up To Date Method
Topeka—When E. D. Keimann "listened in" on his radio caught "The Flint," being sung by Frank Watkins on the K. C. Star broadcasting program, a week ahead of his showing the picture at his Grand, he secured big Malmstrom, a popular singer and arranged a discussion prologue with station "K1," tying up with the picture.

Old Age Discussion Helps
Caro, III.—A controversy as to what age people get tired of films, broke out recently between two captains of the city, one of whom is involved in the discussion. Harwell went into eustacies over "To Have and To Hold" and maintained that everybody young or old would enjoy it. The city editor said that people over 60 years do not attend the theaters. "Here's 25 tickets that say they will," McFarling broke out. "You keep them, and announce that you will give away anybody over 60 years of age calling at the office of your paper." The editor thought it a great idea and the tickets were taken up in no time.

Real Exploitation
Omaha—Various methods of exploitation formed the basis for the campaign conducted by Manager Johnson on "Mighty Lak' a Rose" at the Kinloch. An attractive but mysterious young girl made the rounds of the hospitals for several days, giving roses to the patients. She also visited the Orphans' Home and the Child Savings' Institute. The first day she refused to answer any questions or to give her name. On the second day she admitted that she had seen "Mighty Lak' a Rose" and that her impression had been so profound that she had decided to give part of her time to doing good work. The story was played up.

By the time the film in front of the regular screen, Johnson was able to put up a simple prologue that was nevertheless effective. Two young ladies rendered a violin, vocal duet of "Mighty Lak' a Rose." Standing between the regular screen and the screen that made up the prologue, the two young ladies gave the effect that they were standing on a bed of roses. Old time melodies were played.

Aid From the Phonograph
Cincinnati, O.—When the Strand played "Mighty Lak' a Rose," the publicity department took the trouble to look up the phonograph records of the song that were available. They discovered, for example, that the Victor library had five records of it. A Farrar solo, an Alida selection, a Harpo solo, an orchestra record and a quintet. On the back of a herald it was all listed all five. The extra trouble meant a tie up with the phonograph dealers and additional exploitation at no additional expense.

Chevrolet People Help "To Have and To Hold"—During the run of "Poor Men's Wives," at the Central, a tie-up was made by J. H. Beaver of the Lichtman exchange with the Chevrolet Motor Co., in which approximately 30 cars were used. In the back windows and across the windshield cards were placed stating that the Chevrolet car was used by rich as well as "Poor Men's Wives;" "Prove it at the Central Theater," week of April 13. These cards were carried in the cars used by the entire Chevrolet sales force and used the whole week. In addition, the Chevrolet people arranged a parade of its cars in cooperation with the exploiter, in which all the sales force took part.

Realtors Tie-up With "Backbone"
With the name of the picture as the backbone of the idea a real estate campaign in three New York newspapers was obtained by Distinctive Sunday, April 29, to exploit "Backbone," which was opened that day at the Capitol. A cooperation of the Evening Journal enabled Distinctive to put across the idea.

Over the top of the ad was a banner reading: "Home Owners are the Backbone of This Great Nation." A standardized slogan of "Backbone" was used and repeated again in the distinct ad and the ad of the Land Improvement and Building Corp., beneath. Down the center of the page was an editorial on the meaning of the word "backbone"—and grit, courage, determination, tying this idea up with those who had backbone enough to buy their own homes. The editorial also featured the picture at the Capitol as a typification of the wonderful qualities of backbone. This editorial was signed by Willy Brothers, Inc., which took the entire lower half of the page with an advertisement which was also a play on the picture. The tie-up appealed to the real estate operators and they agreed to put the page in the morning American and in the World, which gave a total circulation of 2,000,000 copies for the Backbone ad.

"Ponjola" will be started June 1.
James Young will direct.

Famous Expected to Materially Cut Production Schedule Next Season

Probabilities Are That Not More Than 60 Pictures Will Be Made For Next Season and Possibly Only 52—Fewer and Better Productions To Be Carried Out—Day of “Program Picture” About Over

Famous Players is expected to announce its production schedule for the coming season in Chicago on May 16, during the semi-annual sales convention.

While no authoritative statement is obtainable at the moment, it is understood that plans now under consideration for the production schedule call for not more than 60 and perhaps but 52 pictures for the coming season.

The idea of “fewer and better” pictures will be definitely carried out. Much of this change of policy is undoubtedly due to the success of “The Covered Wagon” and the type of picture it represents.

Those in close touch with conditions in the country realize the value of the “big” picture. Many well posted film men insist the day of the so-called “program picture” has about passed; and while there will always be a market for this type of picture because the real money making pictures must be of a larger and stronger drawing power type, this is said, has had much influence on the determination of Famous to cut its schedule.

For this season Famous will release approximately 76 pictures. During the season of 1921-22 Famous released about 93 pictures and for the preceding season, 100.

Convention Opens Today

The Eastern sales convention of Famous Players opens at the Pennsylvania this morning.

William R. Hoggan, general sales manager, Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of Australia is here for the various conventions. He sails for home on May 29 from “Frisco.”

Suggested Plans
Pickford and other high-salaried star pictures should have a separate sales organization. Prior to this talk with Zukor, Irwin testified, had lunch with Zukor at which the formation of the Exhibitors' Circuit, now known as First National, was the principal topic of conversation. Irwin typified the so-called Exhibitors' Circuit as "an alleged exhibitors organization."
Later, the witness stated, Zukor invited him to lunch and told him that First National was openly after Mary Pickford, whose contract with Famous Players was then about to expire, that he had been warned by First National that they would withhold him for Miss Pickford as soon as her contract expired, no matter what she was offered by Famous.
Zukor told Irwin during this luncheon conference that Miss Pickford and her mother had both been told the same thing by First National representatives, who, Zukor told Irwin, were openly boasting that they would not only sign the next contract with Miss Pickford, but that they would also secure Fairbanks and Hart, such directors of the Famous organization as they needed, and would "break up Famous Players."
Zukor, according to the witness, declared that he would fight First National to the limit, asserting that he would never allow what he regarded as the greatest achievement of his life to be wrecked.
Irwin stated that he advised Zukor to tell the industry the facts through advertisements in the trade press, in affidavits, by making the facts just as the latter had told them to Irwin, to state in an affidavit that Miss Pickford and her mother had both been told by First National representatives that they would pay her more money, no matter how unfavorable might be the terms of the next contract offered her by Famous, and to further point out that such action by First National would inevitably increase the cost of pictures to the exhibitors in that the boosting of salaries to the Famous Players luminaries whom First National was endeavoring to secure would cause a general upward salary trend which would find its reaction in a higher picture cost range to the exhibitor. Irwin testified that he further advised Zukor to point out to exhibitors of the country that the exhibitors' circuit, or First National, was not the friend of the exhibitor but his commercial enemy, because First National was signing up sub-franchisees upon representations that it was going to break up the trust, meaning Famous Players, and that exhibitors were hurting themselves, because they supported this policy Famous would be compelled as a matter of self-protection to withhold its pictures from them.
Irwin pointed out in his testimony that at this time the franchise and sub-franchisee holders had built up the good will of their business on Famous pictures. Inasmuch as there were 26 prominent exhibitors in the First National at that time, he stated, "and going with lightning speed

"Vanity Fair"—Goldwyn

Capitol

AMERICAN—There was atmosphere, there was characterization, there was charm, and for the students of the immoral look a few surprises, a few disheartening clichés and a few unnecessary, irate sketches. "Vanity Fair," may, on the whole, he amended. Take * * * a great deal of license with you and perhaps the film will not prove so irritating.

DAILY—It is directed with a fine eye for detail, mounted as only Mr. Goldwyn can mount it, a cast of personable and capable actors who have been famous authors. What of the one of the dullest and most boring pictures that has ever been our misfortune to sit through? There are no high spots dramatically. There are two or three that stand out, but dramatic significance is lacking.

EVENING JOURNAL—It has its lights, for all that Mr. Balbin has evolved a style that holds the attention and wins the sympathy, and gives it its necessity good lighting and photography and with some striking effects.

EVENING WORLD—The picture, a hit by the screen, struck us as but a series of cliches with about as much relation to the picture as painting in an art gallery.

The estimate "Vanity Fair" isn't going.

GLOBE—The result may be pleasing to those who are devoted to theatricals. I shall not meet with the approval of the vast majority who are seeking something more. It is deserving of little credit for the cheaply produced, mediocrity, and ought on the production. The detail is anything short of marvellous, and the film is certainly not going to find friends for long. [Above text is not legible, likely a continuation of a quote or review.]

HERALD—The feature picture "Vanity Fair" is an unhappy attempt to resolve the theme. "Vanity Fair" is actually the dullest picture that we have seen since we sat through "The Merry Widow." * * * Some of Mr. Balvin's individual items in "Vanity Fair" are beautiful in their manner.

MAIL—* * * is an artistic playboy definitely required. * * * Thackeray's most striking novel is skillfully portrayed and none of the stock move incidents make it. The faithfulness with which the period is stuck and the work is a gold cast lend the film the dignity it justly deserves.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Mr. Ballin's film as an artist has resulted in many active settings, which give the film a special value and which is this rather than any dramatic score that the piece gives for its interest. A creditable performance on the part of Mr. Ballin.

SUN—"Vanity Fair" is as dull as the period in which it is set. Hugh Walpole's production * * * suffers from taking the film so seriously and when its aspiring do appear to get wound up it works without any perceptible sin.

TELEGRAM—The production is an excellent example of the classics of the period, and the producer is to be congratulated on the fidelity with which he has adhered to the premises of the original story.

TIMES—* * * director has made the mistake of putting on the screen the Thackeray novel, with the result continuity of interest and suspense are almost entirely absent. The production, which is an attempt to do it, is in such a bad taste as to make the original ideas in photography and sets. * * * In spite of all the deficiencies this production is infinitely more entertaining and better done than most of the other films now showing. If it can be regarded as a picture book of fashion a century ago it can be an excellent evening's entertainment. [Above text is not legible, likely a continuation of a quote or review.]

be felt that such action on the part of Zukor would throw a scare into the entire camp which was then depending principally upon Famous pictures.
Irwin testified that he, one of the shareholders, was one of the objects of the dissatisfaction in the ranks of the exhibitors was the non-cancellation of the contract then employed by Famous. In an effort to have the company compelled to sign a new contract offering Famous, the exhibitors asserted, had corralled practically all the good stars and di-tectors, and they simply couldn't afford to let a competitor get hold of a Famous picture. Famous, he stated, was then selling on the star series system, by which an exhibitor could book a series of one star without taking the entire program. Exhibitors were permitted, he stated, because they were compelled to book the star series by "arbitrary" exchange mangers.

Zukor, according to the witness, didn't follow his advice, but appeared before the executive committee of the old National Association and solicited their support in helping him combat the battle which First National was waging against him. In December 1918 Irwin again conferred with Zukor, who told him of the destructive warfare and "intolerable methods" of First National, and again Irwin advised him to adopt aggressive methods, supplementing his earlier advice with the suggestion that he should fight the enemy's camp by going into the 26 First National cities and building, or at least looking into the feasibility of building the largest and finest theaters in those cities, on the theory that fire should be met with fire. Irwin pointed out that Zukor had practiced all the First National tactics, financially over-extended, and that the bank of these exhibitors would, upon hearing of the building plans of Famous Players, have refused to advance loan funds, on the assumption that the exhibitors would be unable to obtain Famous Players pictures, immediately begin calling loans.

Shortly after this Irwin met Zukor and the executive committee of Faamous Players at Zukor's home, and outlined the plan of attack that he had previously urged Zukor to adopt. He told the committee, according to his testimony, that this policy would throw conviction into the exhibitors' ranks and create disquiet that would render harmless First National's warfare against Famous Players. Shortly after this Irwin became Vice-President of Famous, on Jan. 1, 1919, his first duties being the acquisition of property as a site for a theater in St. Louis, and the flotation of a loan for building this theater. He then proceeded to Indianapolis and purchased the land for another theater that time, on the witness stated, Faamous acquired various theaters and interests in theatrical chains that made it possible to show Famous pictures in first run houses in key cities with very little difficulty. Most of the new acquiring theaters was accomplished after the floating of the $10,000,000 loan through Kuhn, Loeb and Co., Irwin said.

W. J. Lloyd, general counsel for Famous Players, was again placed on the stand to identify documents and contracts between Famous and such Enterprises and the Stanley Co. of America, controlled by the Mastbaum interests, which were incorporated in the words of the witness, "It is understood that Lloyd stated that the contract between Famous Players and the Stanley Co. was presumably satisfied by Vatican Zukor, but explained that neither Famous Players or Zukor personally participated in the organization of the Stanley Company, which he understood, was entirely local in its inception.

Questioned by Government counsel as to whether the Stanley Co. of America or the Stanley Booking Co. was the principal organization of the Mastbaum interests, Lloyd stated that so far as he knew the Stanley Co. of America was the real Co.
pany, and that the Stanley Booking Co. as such lasted only for a short period, its present title being merely descriptive of that particular unit of Mastbaum's activities. Lloyd testified that although changes in the Famous Players-Stanley contract had been contemplated, including the provisions relative to mutual options, nothing had ever been concluded in the way of changes and that the contract had been carried out in all its stipulations. Zukor, he stated, is on the directorate of the Stanley Company but more in an ex officio capacity.

Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission elicited the information from Ludvigh that Famous Players was formerly part owner of the Black New England Theaters, Inc., but that this chain of houses is now controlled by the former organization.

Ludvigh had previously been subjected by the Government to produce all documents relative to loans made by Famous and by Zukor to lessees of theaters.
Aided if he was prepared to submit the information. Ludvigh asked and was granted permission to make an oral statement rather than a written statement, declaring that as far as he had been able to ascertain the only loan made by Famous Players from September, 1919 to May, 1923, was $12,500 to Philip Blohm, of Detroit.

During the Fall of 1921, Ludvigh stated, Loew's Ohio Theaters, of Cleveland, was behind $21,000 on film rentals and that by Spring, 1922, this organization's film rental arrears aggregated $67,000. The defense companies proceeded to get out a second mortgage bond bearing 7% interest on the bond, which falls due in 1922. Famous subscribed $100,000 of this issue, Ludvigh stated, allowing Loew's Ohio Theaters to make out that the $35,000 difference existing between the amount of film rent-arrears and the amount of the issue subscribed, as against future film rentals. This issue was all later transcended.

Zukor, the witness testified, had made no loans that have later been transferred to Famous-Players.

Swaine asked Ludvigh if under the terms of the Famous-Stanley agreement of August, 1919, Famous paid cash instead of bonds for the Stanley stock required by F. P. L., receiving an affirmative reply.

Harold B. Franklin, in charge of the Famous Players theater department, placed on the stand by the Government, testified that he negotiated the agreement under the terms of which Win. P. Gray was made general manager of most of the Black New England theaters.
About twelve of the houses comprising the Black circuit are not included in this agreement, he stated. The agreement putting Gray in charge of these New England houses was s. k'd by the executive Committee.

Williams Relates Some Historical Data Regarding First National

At One Time Feared Zukor Would Break It Up—Considered Joining Zukor—Some Pertinent Comment Regarding "Stars" Develops at Yesterday's Session

There was some uncloseting of 'skeletons' during the examination of J. D. Williams, president of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc., and former general manager of Associated First Nat'l, yesterday in the course of the Federal Trade Commission's proceedings against Famous Players and subsidiary companies alleged to constitute a monopoly in the moving picture business.

Williams emphatically declared that at no time during his connection with First National did he tell Adolph Zukor that he would outbid Famous for the services of Mary Pickford and other Famous stars and directors as soon as their contract had expired, nor did he authorize anyone to make any such statement. Williams testified that in the summer of 1918 Zukor told him that he held a 50% interest in Select Pictures Corp. with L. J. Selznick, and urged him to sever his connection with First National and work for Select, that prior to leaving First National he would be advanced several weeks salary with a note as security, said note to be cancelled if Williams joined Select and paid if he turned down the offer. Williams testified that Zukor told him if he did not leave First National he would buy up most of the franchises of that company which would be unavailable to function. Zukor's plan, according to Williams, was for the latter to break away from First National, which organization would soon disintegrate after Williams had joined forces with Selznick and Zukor in Select, and that the joint product of Famous Players and Zukor would (Continued on Page 2)

Paramount Exchanges See Return of Prosperity—Sales Meeting Ends Tonight

Reports from 46 Paramount branches in this country and in Canada were cited yesterday by S. R. Kent as indications that in many sections the exhibiting business had returned to the prosperous conditions that prevailed immediately following the war. Several other sections, however, had not yet emerged from the slump, he said.

Bara in Films Again?

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Times ran a long interview with Theda Bara, in which the latter states she intends returning to pictures. She may make "Monna Vanna."

The Selznick company holds a contract with Miss Bara for "The Easiest Way. "Monna Vanna" was made abroad with Lee Parry and will be one of the Fox specials for the Fall.

Deal for Five

Continental Prod., Inc., of Miami, has a contract yesterday with Roy Barfi, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, for the showing of a feature starring J. W. Goldwyn and Helen Hodkinson, in which McGowan will be a semi-western. Williams has been considered as Selnick manager in the past with Jack Woody, whose firm is linked with a new producing plan.

present plans are carried out, name of the Goldwyn Distributing Corp. will be changed to the Cosmopolitan Distributing Corp. This would indicate that recent active stages at the first deal with Goldwyn have been made in fact, and that Coster may have purchased an interest in the Goldwyn distributing organization.

Censors Upheld

Appeal Court Sustains Right to Pass News Reels—Pathe Brought Unsuccessful Action (By Long Distance Phone)

Albany—The Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the constitutionality of the State Motion Picture Commission and its right to censor news reels. This sustains a previous decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

The action was brought by Pathe Exchange, Inc., because of certain deletions made in issues of Pathe. The feature, "Frederick the Conundert," of Coudert Bros. represented Pathe in the action, his stand being that the Liberty of the press had been violated inasmuch as motion pictures of actual news events as they occurred constituted news matter in exactly the same manner as the printed word.

The Court of Appeals has ordered Pathe to pay the cost of the action.

Films to Fight Radicals

In the Manufacturer's Record, William H. Barr, president of the National Founders' Assn., advocates the subsidizing of the Church M. P. Corp., a producer of non-theatrical films, in order to fight the propaganda of radicals and promote industrial prosperity. John F. Edgerton, president of the Nat'l Assn. of Manufacturers, is a party to the Barr idea which would provide for a $3,000,000 corporation with 8% preferred stock available to the general public for subscriptions. Barr announces himself as president and Edgerton as vice-president of the proposed company.

be booked in the houses which had been operating at First National franchises. According to this plan, the former First National exchanges would merely become distributing points for the new First National films, whose activities were to be supervised by the new First National district manager. Williams testified that the offer tempted him, because he feared that Zukor would make good his threat to open First Na tional franchises, that he was beginning to feel that the task of holding the various exhibitor-franchise hers harmoniously together, and that self interest prompted him to seriously consider Zukor's proposal, because it was looking as if First National could smooth out its difficulties between the time of the acceptance of the money and the time Williams had to sign over to Zukor to join Select, meet the note which protected the salary advance and turn down the offer. He stated that he also advised these associates "whom we could trust" of the negotiations on between himself and Zukor and Selznick. Before the trial, Williams had become stronger and franchise holders were feeling more confident, so at the end of 60 days he paid the note and declined to sever his connection with First National. He told Zukor that he might make a deal with him in the future.

Williams, in reply to questions of Government counsel Hawkins, stated that after paying the $3,000 note he proceeded to go to Los Angeles, talked to directors and pictures for First National, the first new star obtained being Norma Talmadge. Williams told how in 1919 when E. H. Hulscey, franchise holder for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, sold out his interest to Stephen A. Lynch, he and other First National officials realized that Zukor was making good on his threat to purchase the First National franchise units. He said Hulscey had been advised by his bankers to sell out to Lynch as the wisest step to take, after they had become frightened at the threats of Lynch and his representatives. Williams referred to Lynch's activities as "bullying," by threatening the exhibitors. Williams said that he knew that Famous Players controlled Southern Enterprises, Inc., of which Lynch was the head. When Williams had conferred with Dahaben who owned 60% of the New York First National franchise and held the franchise for the San Francisco territory, and that Dahaben advised him that he would "get out from under" by selling out to Zukor if First National didn't set it's house in order.

Zukor was also conferring with other First National franchise holders, Williams said. These activities on the part of Famous, Williams said, resulted in the drawing up of a new agreement and he visited the various First National cities, securing the signatures of the various members. Just after the executive committee had o.k.'d a plan to give the Lynch houses in the south the first National pictures at a rental return of 20% from houses in larger cities and 25% in smaller cities, and which plan Williams had strongly opposed. He stated that he could see no reason for making such a concession to Lynch, but that the executive committee adopted the plan despite his objec tions. The new agreement was signed and the resultant re-organization brought into being a new corporation, Associated First National, the stock of which was placed in the hands of Famous.

During Williams' cross-examination by Robert T. Swaine, the witness asserted that in 1916 Mary Pick ford, Marguerite Clark, Jesse Lasky and Cecil B. De Mille, all then in the employ of Famous, were more im portant and their pictures more sought than the output of all players and directors working for other companies combined. Swaine succeeded in forcing the witness to admit that the demand for Famous pictures by exhibitors at that time was due to the fact that they were Paramount in quality, much to the amusement of all present at the hear ing.

To a question propounded by Swaine as to whether James Cruze was with Famous in 1916, Williams stated that at that time he had never heard of him. "You've heard of him now, haven't you?" Swaine asked. The witness admitted that he had.

Swaine was trying to force Wil liams to admit that at the time under consideration there were numerous stars and directors who were then popular but who were not under the Famous banner. At the mention of each name, Williams, would state that they were not particularly popular or prominent at that time. When Swaine mentioned House Peters, he said, "Oh, I forget. Peters was working for Famous at that time."

"Yes, he was undoubtedly one of the most popular players then," Williams replied, smiling broadly.

When the government counsel tried to check this Swaine declared that the purpose of

The famous critic of the Chicago Tribune joins with all other critics in America in giving unqualified praise to "Enemies of Women."

"Enemies of Women" has broken all records at the Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago. In its first week it did $26,189. It is still doing record business at Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles. In New York it broke all records for the Central Theatre, at Two Dollar top, and will open for an engagement at the Rivoli, starting next Sunday, May 13th. In all of these cities "Enemies of Women" has been playing against the strongest opposition picture in the field today! It is established as the year's box office sensation!

New theater is going up in Sydney, and six smaller houses are being constructed in the suburban district. Melbourne also has reported six suburban houses under construction. Adelaide recently completed the Prince of Wares theater with a seating capacity of 2,500."

Anyfilm Company,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Have you ever considered how important it is for every man on your staff to be posted every day on what's going on in this business?

Have you ever considered what it is worth in dollars and cents to have every one of your roadmen thoroughly acquainted every day with what is happening, and thus giving them a talking point and easing the contact with your prospective customer?

Have you ever considered how valuable this would really be?

Many, almost all of the leading distributing companies subscribe for every one of their offices; and some for every salesman. They have found it 'good business.'

If it has so proven to them, what would it do for you?

First Nat'l History
A inquiry was to show that the "Passer is doesn't what he's talkabout".
Williams declared that "Lillian no meant nothing with Griffith." He admitted that the purpose of the formation of First National, was for the opportunity of purchasing pictures in bulk, or having a better buying. Their strategy was to produce.
He said that within a year, the sub-licence stock was sold to First National over 3400 subscribers. He declared that the Chaplin contract for over a million dollars, was "largest" and "cheapest" contract the history of the business.
Williams then went into considerable length detailing the advances and contracts entered into between First National and some of the important stars, details of which will appear in tomorrow's issue, at length. Additional testimony be-told by Williams will also appear.
Williams, in response to questions typed by Gaylord R. Hawkins, of Government counsel, told of his earlier connections with the industory, from 1902, when throughout country he was exhibiting pictures of McKinley's funeral cere-morial, to when he was an exhibitor in Vancouver, B. C. and Spokane, his job to Australia, which he thought to be a virgin field for picture disbrition, to being on the exhibition team of the moving picture system in Vogue there, and his affiliation with Hodkinson in 1915; an alliance formed for the purpose of distributing multiple reel pictures, and the pioneer efforts of which formed the root of the plant which Paramount Pictures later became.
He left Hodkinson just before the organization of Paramount Pictures, Williams going on field over in England, studied advertisements in the United States, and joined Selznick then operating World Wide Film, and later on visited the United States, and worked on the East Coast, and visited New York and Chicago, and then went on a second trip to Australia to advice the States and had all plans organized for erection of a theatre in Los Angeles, but the deal fell through, he said, when the bankers were going to finance his building fund changed their minds when they learned of the distribution methods of Famous Players, which impelled exhibitors to buy the complete program, 20% of which, he said, as money for exhibitors, Williams told the bankers that he would not handle Famous pictures in his eter.
Williams testified that the principal actors and directors in 1916, were "dissatisfied" at the "factory mechism" of making pictures which continued to make pictures according to pre-arranged schedules.
At this point Swaine interposed remonstrance of objection on the grounds of Government objection and was, during its views," that the line of hesitantly by Hawkins was not under and totally irrelevant. Examiner Alford repeated Swaine's questions, but frequently during the amination of Williams, Swaine was on his feet declaring heatedly that the state of satisfaction or dissatisfaction of stars and directors had no bearing on the case being considered.
Examiner Alford finally ruled that Hawkins could not continue his questioning as to the facts, pictures and exhibitors were dissatisfied with Famous tactics as a means of proving that this discontent was contributing to the organization of the exhibitors in a co-operative movement to offset what they felt to be the disadvantages of Famous' methods.
Williams testified that the failure of his theatre plans in Los Angeles brought home to him the necessity of organizing exhibitors, and the creation of a market for the production of stars and directors who felt that they could make better pictures independently than they could under the "Players' market." According to Williams, he confided with T. L. Talley as to ways and means of effecting a co-operative organization to accomplish this purpose and Talley became the first subscriber to what was tentatively called the Exhibitor's Circuit. Talley accompanied Williams to Seattle, Portland, Ore., San Francisco, Butte, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago, where they succeeded in scoring the sympathetic support and cooperation of prominent exhibitors. Williams testified that he then visited the principal key cities and secured 26 out of 27 exhibitors interviewed as incorporators of the Exhibitors' Circuit.
In March, 1917, Williams said, the various exhibitors who had already signed up met at the Astor and officially organized the Exhibitors' Circuit, or First National, there being 26 original members. The United States and Canada, he testi-yed in outlining the plan of campaign adopted by First National, was divided into 26 zones, each zone allocating a certain percentage of distribution. Williams stated that exhibitors were enthusiastic in joining the new organization because Famous had just organized Artrait pictures and had withdrawn Mary Pickford and other popular stars from their regular program and distributing their pictures through Artrait at much higher rentals, but at the same time compelling exhibitors to take the surplus pictures of the series. Williams was general manger of First National, remaining with the organization, he stated, until 1922.
Williams testified that while he was general manager of First National, he was approached upon numrous occasions by Adolph Zukor with offers that he join Famous, the or Zimmer taking out that Zukor would never be able to hold the exhibitors together and that he could make more money with Zukor.
Alford asked if Famous ever made any offers to Williams, but Williams said no, he always proounced any objection to his talks about it. He repeated that he would never be able to hold the exhibitors for any Zukor offer because, he thought, Zukor was not as able to hold the exhibitors together as Williams could. He added that the amount of the independent output and depend upon Famous for its source of supply, thus organizing a formidable and air-tight booking combine which would eliminate competitors from the field and hold-down

Newspaper Opinions

"Scars of Jealousy" — 1st Nat'l Strand

AMERICAN — Everybody worked hard, and the action was continuous. Frank Keenan looked like what one expects a Southern colonel to look like, Lloyd Hughes and Edward Burns a good fight. * * * The moonshiners were picturesque, the scenery was atmospheric and the fire thrilling.

DAILY NEWS — So highly improbable is "Scars of Jealousy" that it manages to be quite entertaining. * * * Anything which manages to entertain rather obviates criticism no matter how bad it is.

EVENING JOURNAL — Story of the handicapped French Exodus taking place many years before the main story, "Scars of Jealousy." * * * would be one of the most thrilling melodramas seen on Broadway in a considerable period.

EVENING WORLD — Any picture with Frank Keenan as its featured player, is enjoyable to us, and "Scars of Jealousy" is a real story of the South, handled as Thomas H. Ince knew so well how to handle such a story. * * * Lambert Hillyer * * * to be complimented on his restraint and for his knowing when and how hard to deliver the many punches in the story.

GLOBE — * * * there is no marked degree of originality in this. * * * This is a rather haphazard mixture, and the situations the prevailing ones in pictures of primitive lore.

MORNITNG TELEGRAPH — The picture is somewhat unusual and the dramatic story is told by clever actresses and photographers. A real forest fire is a feature of the film and the final rescue of the Captain is a fast action and tense moment. The two boys, played by Lloyd Hughes and Edward Burns, are excellent. Frank Keenan is the proud old Southern aristocrat and is splendid.

TELEGRAM — The acting honors, of course, go to * * * Edward Burns * * * Lloyd Hughes.

TIMES — Frank Keenan is capable as Colonel Davis, and there is no mean acting by Hughes, and Edward Burns, who plays the part of Jeff Newland, an energetic and natural. * * * The story seems to be tied in a knot and nobody has been able to undo it.

TRIBUNE — We think "Scars of Jealousy" is filled with hokum and therefore extremely amusing.

WORLD — Fairly good sized audiences of men and women of the voting age yesterday seemed caught in the spell of which Lloyd Hillyer had injected into this "drama of the old and new South," and enjoyed it, so far as we could determine, thoroughly.

"The Rustle of Silk" — E. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN — Of course, "The Rustle of Silk" is quite impossible, but that doesn't make it any the less entertaining. It's sheer romance. * * *

EVENING WORLD — We have seen much better pictures than "The Rustle of Silk" and we have seen much worse. And that, as far as we can see, is the best way to describe it if you want entertainment — it's just about middling.

GLOBE — * * * one of the most entertaining of the new releases. The picture has been seen in some States, as well as one of the most Godliah.

MUSIAL — * * * heavy bore, heavy movie. If this picture was made for the so-called movie audience it is a huge success.

J. C. Boss, Okla. Exhibitor Called Against Famous; Williams On Stand

Gov't Counsel Contends Southern Showman Was "Forced Out of Business" by Methods of Southern Enterprises—Williams Declares First National Tried to Beat Zukor in Dominating Production and Distribution

Joseph C. Boss, former exhibitor of McAllister, Okla., produced yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission in its action against Famous Players, is the first witness through whom the Government expects to show methods used by Famous and its allied organizations in an effort to monopoly and trustify the industry.

Boss hardly started as a witness because of the frequent objections to his evidence, and the vast number of documents, contracts, and letters which had to be numbered and placed on the records before he could proceed. He will however, be the first witness this morning.

Chicago Convention Concurrency with Exhibitor Confab—Ready to Revise Tax System

Nathan Burkman, general counsel and J. C. Rosenthal, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, intend holding a convention of their 28 field representatives in Chicago concurrently with the M. P. T. O. convention at the Coliseum. Both Burkman and Rosenthal will attend.

According to the latter, the Society stands ready to discuss a change in its tax system which has been attacked and maligned by a large number of exhibitors throughout the country, and has been fought viciously by the M. P. T. O. Rosenthal said yesterday he is willing to concede

Decision Orders Much of Rodolph Valentine's Defense Out of His Answer

Many of the charges made by Rodolph Valentine in an amended answer filed in the litigation pending between him and Famous Players have been ordered stricken out, by a decision handed down by Justice O'Malley in Part 4, Special Term of the Supreme Court. The decision affirms a motion made by Famous Players to have this defense eliminated.

The significance of the action is in the fact that when the trial opens, the William de Mille is expected to direct Alice Brady in "Zaide the Great." As noted, Donald Crisp will direct Elsie Ferguson in "Declassee." At least one Emerson Hough, AY, "North of 63," is on the production schedule.

Others on next year's list are expected to be "Hi's Children's Children," which Sam Wood will make in the East; "To the Ladies," with Mary Astor and Robert Agnew; Pola Negri in "The Spanish Dancer"; Rita Coventry; "Peter the Great," a German picture; and "The Mountebank.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" with Swanson and "Hollywood." will not be released generally until the fall although both will have pre-releases on Broadway. "The Covered Wagon" will all likelihood, will not be available until the fall of 1924.

The Eastern sales convention closed last night with a dinner at the Pennsylvania. Tonight the home office will leave for Chicago where the Western convention will be held at the Drake Hotel on Friday and Saturday.

that there is something to the argument that the owner of a small theater should not pay the same tax as the operator of a first-run in a large city. The Society is apparently anxious to get a hearing before the exhibitor body so that the tax which has been declared lawful by the U. S. Supreme Court can be explained.

Actions Against Cohen Pending
The actions for violation of the music tax filed against Sydney S. Cohen will probably remain dormant until after the Chicago convention. At that time, arguments will probably be heard.
Ten Reasons Why I Show Paramount Pictures

An absolutely unsolicited testimonial from a successful, livewire exhibitor who has been showing Paramount Pictures for eight years

UNIQUE THEATRE
Bricelyn, Minn.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

Gentlemen:

Why do I play PARAMOUNT PICTURES?

1. Because I think they make the best pictures.

2. The name PARAMOUNT on a picture means more than any other name connected with the business.

3. Their national system of advertising places their product before my people, even though I live in a TANK town.

4. They treat me as near right as any film company, as I guess it is as near perfection as showmen are entitled to receive.

5. On account of their having a large output of pictures, by the time I can afford to run their stuff, they have been tried "on the dog" and I can get pictures which have pleased many, many audiences, while if I buy from a small concern, state rights, etc., I would have to play what they have, regardless of merit.

6. During eight years as an exhibitor, PARAMOUNT film has been sent to me in better physical condition than the others generally furnish theirs. Also it is sent in ample time so I need have no worries about the film being on hand.

7. Their traveling representative has always done his best to help me with problems, and assisted me in picking out features which have pleased throughout the territory, and should do the same with my people.

8. Their prices are the same, or less than some of the other top liners in the business.

9. When I sign up for a bunch of features from PARAMOUNT, I receive from the office, PRESS, on the whole lot at once. This gives me ample time to look them over and plan my advertising. I have had no other company do this for me. Many times with others I have requested PRESS along with my advertising order, and failed to receive it.

10. Guess I will have to fill my ten commandments with the following PARAMOUNT—GOOD AS ANY AND BETTER THAN MOST.

Yours truly,

UNIQUE THEATRE
(Signed) A. E. WILCOX.

I started this organization. To do it one must have the picture, the that this will work out most satisfactory to all concerned. Certainly it will prove what I have always con-

Broadway first run is not needed."

charges of fraud made by Valentino, as well as the defense itself.
Valentino alleged that Famous had perpetrated fraud in compelling him to sign the contract. The court ruled this out, saying that the statement was improper. Valentino also asserted that Famous knew he was worth $5,000 a week when he signed it for less but the court called this defense "frivolous" on the ground that Valentino, as a motion picture actor of much experience should know what his services were worth. Another defense of Valentino's was that the contract should not be enforced for it was not the same as Thomas Migican's contract. He further claimed that Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and other officers of Famous Players conspired to hold him( Valentino) by threatening and intimi-dating Valentino and his wife but the court disagreed with Valentino's ideas.

The Federal Trade action against Famous was brought into the answer when the claim was made that Famous, as a means to further its hold in the industry, had forced Valentino to sign the contract. The court held that there was nothing in the contract that would serve to make Famous Players a "trust" and added that the workings of the Federal Trade act could not be brought into a state court as part of any defense.
Valentino claimed that Famous had bribed his agent into persuading him to sign the contract by keeping him (Valentino) in ignorance of the knowledge that he could secure more money elsewhere. This will be one of the points settled at the trial.

Arthur Butler Graham, Valentino's attorney said yesterday that the decision does not hold that the claims are bad but that they will have to be counted in different language. He said he had not determined whether he would amend the language or appel the decision.

their product through First National exchanges, and stated without any reservation that it was his intention to make First National the dominant factor in the industry, as a defensive move against the encroachment of Famous Players.
Mildred Williams had told the press early on Tuesday that he had ever tried to blackmail any Paramount agents to sign with First National; and that he had never tried to influence Mame, or anyone who had, to sign with Famous. Yesterday, he indicated that he had enough other pictures to sign with Famous should he so desire.
Williams said that he talked with Cecil B. De Mille relative to the latter's pictures last September. The contract was for First National rights as soon as his contract expired, told De Mille that he was not interested in the pictures, but would have been working for himself. The encounter said that Williams had no objection to De Mille signing with Famous. Williams added that such an arrangement would make their pictures more valuable to Famous than to De Mille's own company.
"Did De Mille leave Paramount and join First National?" Williams admitted that he was discussing with the Paramount representatives the possibility of making a deal with First National.
"Then Mr. De Mille apparently did not force his art above money," Swaine retorted.
Secondly, he said that he had tried Duce Thomas Meighan and Wallace Reid, but had not been able to make a deal. Swaine congratulated Bromley Reid, First National's "young star," for his performance in the feature picture.
Bromley would have been signed to Paramount, if the pictures were to be released there.
For the first time, Williams said that on the 1st, but agreed with Swaine that the company's most important at that time, was the William Meighan, Junior. Swain's picture, with three others, was signed and released to the public. First National was to receive 70% of gross, with an $80,000 guarantee. When he left First National in Oct., 1922, Williams said, the pictures were paid for in cash, and he was more frugal. Eight pictures were released, the price of one was $70,000, and a percentage, or better, was paid to Williams.
In Nov., a contract was signed for three pictures with Mary Pickford and Lon Chaney, with a total payment of $525,000 each. Twelve Charles Ray, an unknown actor, was signed for four pictures in 1923. With the exception of the $90,000 advance and percentage on six more at $100, advances and percentage. In Nov., a contract was signed for three pictures with Mary Pickford and Lon Chaney, with a total payment of $525,000 each. Twelve Charles Ray, an unknown actor, was signed for four pictures in 1923. With the exception of the rate of eight pictures in 1919, and in the same year six were booked with Constance with $115,000 cash advance on each, and option for six more at $100,000 each. Mildred Hig-Rowe Chapman was paid $75,000 for each of four pictures in 1919, and Whi-mess Henry was paid $75,000 for each of three pictures in 1920, with option of percentage for four pictures. Twelve pictures were released, the advance and percentage on each were signed for in second picture contract, with Constance's agreement called for the same number with a $300,000 advance and percentage on each.
Made De Mille An Offer
Asked when he first began negotiations with Miss Swaine, Williams first discussed the matter with her about six months ago, and then told her that he would need pictures for five or four pictures a year, and could make a deal with Famous. Williams had put his famous "factory" system of pictures to the fact that the "factory" method of making pictures was not sufficient, especially since it added to overhead, and causing "loafing on the job." He explained that because the pictures have not been as successful as he had always been, and is now opposed to this system, the independent production of stars and directors along lines of the new studio, the successful type that he put into their work, to watch expenses because Later, under cross-examination of some of the contracts in effect between First National and stars and directors, he said that Herbert Brenon was to get $100,000 for the first picture he did directly for First National, and three additional. Marshall Neilan got $80, 100,000 and percentages, and had to be advanced more. Carter De Haven got $100,000 and percentage, with each of the remaining $250, Kate MacDonald got $100,000 for each of the last two pictures, +125,000 and percentage, and Sidney Franklin was guar-tanteed the negative cost up to $100,000 for each of the four pictures, and James Oliver Curwood and David S. Harrold were guaranteed negative costs up to $100,000 and percentage for two pictures, and addition of the last two pictures, and in the last two pictures, she was guaranteed $250,000 and percentage for all costs possible over $100,000. He said that advances usually made were necessary to maintain production in mass.

Allen Sale Off

Offers for Entire Chain Received—Trustees to Continue Their Operation

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—G. T. Clarkson, trustee the Allen theaters has decided to put the operation of the chain 36 houses indefinitely because no offers for the purchase of the entire chain have been received recently full details of the houses are published herewith in the states order to secure bids. Where the sale came for the examination of the houses, it was discovered that, although they were made for individual theaters in Toronto and in other cities, some of the houses covered the entire state. The creditors and others invested felt that it was not the best way to divide the assets by interested parties.

In the meantime, the Allen theaters in various cities of the Dominion have been doing a fairly good business, an impression in current circles being that the Allen theaters will continue to do business.

A Wait

Dear Danny: Your "Summer Bizz" pep talk reads well—but how about when a body is doing all the things you enumerate—big adds—mailing list—exploitation at summit and the biggest of big pictures and then—blop—the old cash box drops 40 cents from one week to the next and you have several hundred a day when you are making a few tens.

It’s alright to sit at your desk and preach, but when you write it in red you must say again “talk’s cheap” but it takes money to buy good—and films.

Boss Says He Lost His Theater Through Unfair Tactics of Lynch

“Repeaters” Given Him for McAllister House, Instead of Contracted First-Runs, Is Charge—Claims All Efforts to Make Southern Enterprises Observe Agreement Failed

For the first time yesterday the Federal TradeCommission’s proceedings against Famous Players and allied organizations on trust charges developed evidence tending to portray the methods by which Famous proceeded in its “trustification” of the industry.

Joseph C. Boss, a former exhibitor at McAllister, Okla., testified how Southern Enterprises, a subsidiary to Famous, and through which he was obtaining his pictures, failed to live up to its contract with him, furnished him with “repeaters” instead of the first-runs stipulated in his agreement, failed to send him pictures which he had “lavishly” advertised in advance, and finally, as he said, encumbered him out of his theater after he had been beaten down in his efforts to make the Lynch interest live up to their agreement with him, compelling him to “finally sell out at a great loss. Opposing legal counsel was lined up in battle formation, and the atmosphere was charged with electricity as hot words flew thick and fast between Robert T. Swaine, counsel for the respondents, and Marvin Farrington, for the Commission, over the Mississippian law as evidence to be brought into the record of letters passing between Boss and the exchange manager at Oklahoma City, pertaining to Boss’ complaints at receiving pictures furnished as first-runs, but which in reality, according to the witness, had previously been shown in McAllister. Swaine contended that the letters offered referred to other letters that were being withheld by the Government and which he said, Farrington had in his possession the preceding day, claiming they were complete and objection to the admission of the letters until the balance were produced.

"Where are they," Swaine asked heatedly, "You had them yesterday, and I demand them from you." "They will be offered in good time," Farrington replied, "and you will not find the letter that when he sold out he did not take all of the letters. He also said that he had no letters that were therefore some letters that he did not have, when you only retained the letters that you thought would help your side of the case in the particular lawsuit.

Mr. Examiner, Swaine exclaimed, appealing to another Alford. "I want you to note this that this is a striking example of the witness' willingness to tell only his side of the case and not to tell the whole story." "I don't want to argue this with Farrington evenly, for the first time showing indication of approaching anger, Farrington said "You witness' assertions are likely tell a great deal more than Famous Players would like you to hear. It has been necessary to do my best to show things of considerable importance than such long-winded threat or case.

At one time during the witness' identification of theFairbanks, Oklahoma, had appeared to the Oklahoma exchange for certain pictures which had previously been shown and that Miss employers in the trip, an Oklahoma real estate agents, had appeared to show that Miss Swaine was worth $22,000, asked by Ross, and that such interests would not be interested at that time. Boss testified that Lynch had become interested in the leading opposition theatre, and, that, as his own home. After W. R. Ross had talked with him about the amusement to the witness, it was approached by a real estate broker who said, that he expected to have very powerful principals who were interested in his house, coming him, at a proposition. The real estate, he stated, would not divulge the name of his principal, but, merely smiled when Ross told him, "I'll tell you your principal is, it is Famous Players.

"He didn't whistle, did he," asked Swaine, "I respond that it was, he was mannered and meek individual, "but he will when this hearing goes, to Dallas." Claims Rentals Were Jacked Up Boss testified that during the time he was having so much trouble over getting the first-run pictures with which his company would have to compete under the terms of his contract, he had been forced to get control of the Palace, he was very seldom used it. He had been in the ten-liner, as it had been closed to pay for Paramount pictures, and two pictures, as the "new house of Paramount.

The evidence was that he had offered for a Thanksgiving day performance a Fairbanks picture which had already had three runs in McAlister, when he was told that he could not get the picture. He told Ross, and found that the Oklahoma territory was a "Western Associated Exhibitors" deal, and was exclusive for the output of these companies to this rival, which was the theatre. First National was exclusive by another competitor through McAlister, it was impossible to obtain any good pictures. He said the Palace across the street was greatly running about a third of Paramount pictures and the Pal, and the balance of Metro, Uni- versal, United Artists, and several other companies, so that he would not be able to get them for this theater.

My dear Mr. Schenck:

I have just had the opportunity of seeing Norma Talmadge in "Within the Law." Please allow me to say that I consider "Within the Law" the greatest crime drama ever filmed.

The cast, headed by Norma Talmadge, gives the finest work of its kind I have ever seen, while the settings and direction are superb.

Everything Ready For Big Exhibitors’ Meet—Many Speakers Scheduled

Plans for the M. P. T. O. convention, to be held in the Coliseum,icago, May 21-25, are practically complete, with all indications pointing to the heaviest attendance and most program of any such gathering in the his-tery of the industry. Sydney S. Cohen has been leading a busy week whipping the various convention arrangements into pe.

The national board of directors and regional executive committees will meet next Saturday, to discuss pre-vention matters. The convention will be officially opened by the presi-dent of one of the vice-presidents on Monday, May 21, at 11 o’clock, to followed by the address of wel-me by a representative of the M. P. T. O., in turn followed by the official dress of welcome by Mayor Wil-liam Dever, of Chicago. The national organization will respond to this, in which the convention will be clased in session and committees named. A report on the Motion Pic-ture Palace of Progress will follow. 69 Entries for Golf

And the Event Is a Month Off—Looks Like a Real Affair at Belleclaire

Stilley they come, the entries for the Spring Golf Tournament. To date 69 entries have been received by various members of the committee and that won’t be all.

The big idea has been sold to Frank L. Newman, the demon golf k of Kansas City. Cataclysms and earthquakes—or perhaps a bad week’s business—will be the only things that will keep Frank away from Belleclaire on June 5. Newman has been pounding the pill for only a few years, but already his score is under 80.

Siding Kent and A. M. Botsford of Famous Players don’t intend per-mitting their various sales conven-tions to interfere with the tournament, and so they intend getting there from Los Angeles, after the final sales meeting there, to reach New York, at least one day ahead of the party.

There’s no doubt about the crowd having a good time. Golfers, golfers and others will be on hand and those that don’t plan to be there to en-courage the novices with their kindly (?) kidding remarks. One treat will be the presence of the youngest golf player in the business, Julius Laemmle, and in all likelihood, his father, Carl Laemmle will be there to see how his offspring upholds the reputation of the names, Laemmle and Universal.

If there were any proof necessary of how the idea is grasping hold, witness the intention of the Movie Age, the new regional published in Omaha to launch a tournament for exchange managers and exhibitors in the Middle West. (Continued on Page 4)

Sherman to Produce

Buys Screen Rights To 14 Novels

Harley Sherman states that he will shortly begin production of Basil King’s novel, “Steps of Honor,” at Hollywood, the production to be released Sept. 1st. He says that ne-gotiations are under way with several promi-nant stars to be featured in his produc-tions.

Sherman has purchased through Harper & Bros. the rights to the following novels: Basil King’s “Steps of Honor,” “Let Not Man Put As-under” and “The Garden of Chritiy,” “The Crooked Trail,” by Frederick Remington, “The Cat and the Can-ary,” by Margaret Cameron, “The House of Happiness,” by Kate L. Bosher, “A Successful Wife,” by Marie Van Vort, “Supreme Sur-prise” by Alidaville, “The Crooked Trail,” and “The Seven Angle” were in the original list that Sherman contracted for but he decided to substitute “The Crooked Trail” and another to be se-lected later for these two.

The picturized versions will all be specials with star casts, Sherman states, and after the first release on Sept. 1 there will be a production ready for release every eight weeks thereafter. Sherman is stopping at the Astor, and expects to leave for the Coast to select the cast for his first picture just as soon as releasing negotiations are completed here.

To Preserve Historic Films

The program, as far as it has been arranged, will end the week.

Tuesday, May 22.—Committee reports, report of National Treasurer John T. Collins, of Rutherford, N. J., presentation of music license question with addresses on subject, Address Tuesday afternoon by Gov. J. A. O. Preuss, President, on "Theater Insurance," followed by talk by Bruce Dodson, Kansas City, on "Group Insurance." Protection of the public against fraudulent stock sales will be thoroughly discussed by Wm. J. Burs, chief of the C. S. Secret Service delivering an address pointing out methods by which theater owners may cooperate with the Government in protecting the public. Burford, of Chicago, will deliver an address on "Uniform and Equitable Contracts." Burford was chairman of the committee that framed the equitable contract form submitted by the national organization to Will H. Hays. Cooperative banking will be gone into, and "The Code of Business Ethics" arranged by a joint committee of theater owner members of Rotary, International, Lions, Red Cross, Civitan and other clubs will be presented by the chairman of that body.

Wednesday, May 23, Jack Eastman, of Rochester, will address the convention Tuesday afternoon. The convention banquet will be held at the Sherman Hotel.

Many prominent personalages will respond to toasts, including a prominent producer and a U. S. Senator and a state governor.

From three to four thousand theater owners are expected to be in attendance by Cohen who expresses the belief that it will be "the most pronounced and constructive wakening of theater owners ever held in the United States."

In the Courts
Murray W. Garsson has sued in the Supreme Court for $1,000 on bill of exchange issued to William R. Carter at Jacksonville, Fla., and not paid when presented at his office in New York.

Charles H. Pedrick, Jr., has sued the Triumph Pictures in the Supreme Court for $3,095. He alleges that in April, 1922, he was engaged to be the manager for the remainder of the year, and in October he gave up the management, but was to get his pay just the same.

A default judgment for $8,444 has been filed in the Supreme Court against the Hamilton Film Corp., in a suit by Adele Jasons on an assigned claim of the Ritchey Litho. Co. for services and materials furnished.

Laura D. Wilke, play broker, obtained an attachment in the Supreme Court against Donn Byrne, author, on the ground that he is a resident of England. The plaintiff alleges that he was to get 10% for disposing of the film rights to Byrne’s story, “The Foolish Matrons,” which Maurice Tourneur bought for $10,000, and that he got only $200 after Byrne had received $2,000 on account, after which he sold his claim to a third party for $1,000. Byrne denies the plaintiff anything, and wrote her a letter declaring that the film rights were worth $15,000, but that she “jerked him down to” $10,000. She called her demand for the $800 “a piece of unparalleled effrontery.”

Nathan Burkam, counsel for the Goldwyn Pictures, filed an affidavit in the Supreme Court asking that the trial of Orrin Johnson’s suit for $5,100 for breach of contract be delayed until June, when George Mooser, who is a material witness for the defendant, will be here to testify. Johnson is suing on the ground that he was engaged at $850 a week to play in “Scratch My Back,” for not less than five weeks, but was permitted to play. He claims that the agreement was made orally with George Mooser in behalf of Goldwyn. Mooser is now in the Far East for United Artists, but will leave Japan for New York on May 13 and is expected here three weeks later. It is alleged he will testify that Johnson was not engaged for any picture.

out—after he’s his own boss.” With Pathe demanded a review of the ruling by the entire commission members voted that this sub-case could stay but they upheld M. H. Hosmer’s demand for the elimination of the following:

In a letter to the commission Pathe contended that the picture is burlesque and to succeed it must show things not ordinarily done, it said that the dog comes to no harm because one of the scenes shows the dog landing unhurt in the back seat of an auto, while no one “but an idiot” would think that the dog was attached to real dynamite that the dog would be blown up.

As to the exposure of the male leg, Pathe wrote that much great exposure of the legs of both men and women is permitted in other comedies and film dramas on the legitimate stage.

A Whale of a Picture When It Comes to Real Audience Appeal

"TRIFLING WITH HONOR"
Universal—Jewel

DIRECTOR ....................... Harry A. Pollard
AUTHOR .......................... Wm. Slavenes McNutt
SCENARIO BY .............. Frank Beresford and Raymond L. Schrock
CAMERAMAN ...................... John Brown
AS A WHOLE .............. Lively, original and fine entertainment that should prove valuable box office attraction STORY .................. Sure to appeal to a big majority, in fact everyone, and contains atmosphere that they'll all like DIRECTION ................ Very good; gets a lot out of the story and registers many fine touches
PHOTOGRAPHY .................. First rate
LIGHTINGS .................. Good
PLAYERS .................. Rockliffe Fellows in fine type for "home-run king" role and gives his best performance so far; Fritzi Ridgeway offers sincere and convincing portrayal and Buddy Messenger sure to please with his "kid" part; others Hayden Stevenson, Emmett King and Frederick Stanton EXTERIORS .............. A baseball field about the only important one
INTERIORS .................. All right
DETAIL .................. Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY ....... Ex-crook escapes court sentence, becomes famous baseball star and is finally regenerated through story of his life written by one of newspaper's staff
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .... 7,785 feet

Universal is offering another jewel of a Jewel in its picturization of William Slavenes McNutt's baseball story. The picture contains sure-fire audience appeal and so much genuine entertainment that it cannot fail to make its mark as a valuable box office number. With the mass of ardent baseball fans in the country who will surely be delighted with it, its success seems predestined but the picture's appeal is not limited to baseball fans, however. It has universal appeal and will go big with every crowd whether they know a bat from a ball or not.

To start with Universal had a bright, original story—probably not what would be called a big story—but a clever combination of situations with plenty of human interest and incidental business that rounds it out into a wholly interesting and absorbing piece. The story starts out as a crook melodrama with Rockliffe Fellows as the Gas-Pipe Kid, the best role that Fellows has ever had on the screen and in which he does the best work. He is ideally suited to the role and never fails to make it convincing.

Director Pollard has injected realism in every little detail and the return of hero to his home only to find a bearse at the door, a forerunner to the news of his mother's death, is realistically handled with the typical tenement crowd curiously, yet sympathetically, looking on. The romantic element is pleasing and the sequence devoted to the escapades of a regular boy, cheerfully played by Buddy Messenger, is sure to satisfy. Pollard has used up too much footage here. The part where Buddy overhears the plans of hero's pals to have him "sell" the world series could be cut.

The baseball climax is the star bit of the picture and you can bet they'll be just as enthused over the final game as if they were actually in the bleachers. There is a familiar, but none the less effective, kind of suspense in which the home-run king's pals threaten to expose his crooked past unless he "throws" the game. Of course he drops out, but when defeat for his team looks certain, in the last inning, hero goes in and after two balls and two strikes, knocks a "homer" that not only wins the game but wins back the sweetheart he had deserted five years before. Pollard certainly injects the spirit of the game here and it registers.

Should Be a Fine Box Office Number and Very Easy to Exploit

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

With the baseball season just opening Universal couldn't have selected a better time to release "Trifling With Honor." The only trouble is that the title isn't good enough for the picture, nor does it give any indication that the picture contains a baseball story. But that shouldn't stop you from getting your order in at your earliest convenience—or before. You can bet your hat your patrons will like this one and they'll enjoy getting enthused over the world series game that is staged and go out delighted with Rockliffe Fellows as "Bat" Shugrue.

Exploitation should be, i.e. the vernacular, a cinch. Your local baseball team can advertise themselves while helping you to put the picture over. Be sure to make it plain that this is a baseball story and get your men folks and the boys interested. The women will like it too. You can say that the story ran in Collier's Weekly. With a baseball season and a baseball picture you should have a clean-up in "Trifling With Honor."

Sensational Melodrama With a Strong Climax and a Fine Cast

Pine Tree Pictures Presents

"JACQUELINE" or "BLAZING BARRIERS"

Arrow Pictures—State Rights

DIRECTOR .................. Dell Henderson
AUTHOR ..................... James Oliver Curwood
SCENARIO BY ............. Thomas F. Fallon and Dorothy Farnum CAMERAMEN ............. George Peters, Charles Downs, Dan Maher

AS A WHOLE ............. Good virile melodrama, well cast and finely photographed with some real thrills STORY ................ From the novel by James Oliver Curwood. Laid in Quebec and timber-land thereabouts. Contains melodramatic situations with forest fire for the big climax

DIRECTION .............. Good; particularly in climax

PHOTOGRAPHY ............. Excellent

LIGHTINGS ................ Very good

PLAYERS .......... A long list of well-known names. Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Sheldon Lewis and little Russell Griffin in primary roles; includes Effie Shannon, Gus Weinberg, J. Barney Sherry, Edmund Breeze, Edria Fisk, Charlie Fang and Baby Helen Rowland

EXTERIORS .......... Some interesting views of Quebec in contrast to very good forest backgrounds

INTERIORS ............... Satisfactory

DETAIL ......... All right. Excellent tinting in fire sequence

CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Adopted son of lumberman is in love with girl brought up as his sister. She returns his love but he thinks she favors city villain now lumber camp boss. Hero saves other man in forest fire and wins girl

"Jacqueline" or "Blazing Barriers," scenarioized by Thomas F. Fallon and Dorothy Farnum from the popular novel by James Oliver Curwood, appeals to the emotions and the eye and provides a good red-blooded entertainment for those who like virile melodrama of the north woods.

Director Henderson takes a bit long in getting his characters set, inclining to jump from one to the other too quickly just at first, but once things are started the interest is sustained very well up to the forest-fire climax and that, combined with the spectacular stunt of two men paddling their way down the spectacular stunt of two men paddling their way down the spectacular stunt of two men paddling their way down the spectacular stunt of two men paddling their way down the forest-fire climax, holds the spectator in a state of tension that continues practically until the finish.

As a contrast to the woodland backgrounds there are some very interesting scenes of the old city of Quebec, that add to the atmosphere of the picture. The story opens in the lumber camp, switches to Quebec and a Chinese gambling den, thence to a residence in the city and back again to the camp where the balance of the action takes place.

The forest fire sequence has been very well done. Tinting of the flames has been employed with startlingly real effect and the work of the cameramen should be given honorable mention. The suspense is heightened at this point by cutting back at short intervals to the two men in the tossing canoe who are shooting the rapids to blow up the bridge and prevent the fire from crossing to the other side.

There is a long list of first-rate names but with the exception of Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Sheldon Lewis and Little Russell Griffin, the others have mostly bits, except possibly Effie Shannon and Gus Weinberg as Jacqueline's parents. Marguerite Courtot is an excellent type for the girl and Lew Cody entirely convincing as the lumberman lover. Little Russell Griffin, a cute kiddie, is in almost every scene, and does very well. Altogether, "Blazing Barriers" should please a large majority.

Story: Raoul Radon, raised by the Rolands in the Canadian woods, loves their daughter, Jacqueline. On her first visit to Quebec, she meets Henri Dubois, who is being blackmailed by Li Chang. Upon her return Dubois secures the position of boss of the lumber camp near her home. He is followed by the Chinaman. Raoul is arrested because of a fight with Dubois, through whose treachery he is informed that the girl does not love him. Later, Raoul wandering in the woods, finds them suddenly blazing. He rescues Dubois for Jacqueline, but finds after the danger is past, she does not love Dubois and the "clinch" follows.

"Blazing Barriers" Should Prove a Good Box-Office Bet

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who know their audiences like good melodrama combined with love-interest and a bit of comedy should secure this. There is a long list of splendid names that will attract attention and you have two real thrills in the strong climax to talk about.

Call attention to the fact that it is a James Oliver Curwood story of the northern timber lands, directed by Dell Henderson, with Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Sheldon Lewis and a host of others in the cast. A trailer showing a shot or two of the blazing forest should bring them back. Give them an idea of the kind of story it is, and get behind it with your exploitation. It should make money for you.
Production Excellent and Artistic But Story Makes Dull Picture

Hugo Ballin’s Prod.
“VANITY FAIR”
Goldwyn

DIRECTOR ......................... Hugo Ballin
AUTHOR ....................... Wm. Thackeray
SCENARIO BY ................ Hugo Ballin
CAMERAMAN ....................... J. Diamond

AS A WHOLE.....A highly artistic production, splendid photography and with unlimited pictorial appeal, but this alone fails to spell entertainment

STORY......The author’s manner of writing could not be visualized although much effort and expense is displayed in picturing his story

DIRECTION......Deserves credit for tackling what doesn’t lend itself readily to film purposes; his artistic efforts have not secured genuine entertainment

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Excellent
LIGHTINGS .................. Very good

PLAYERS......Mabel Ballin tries very hard to make Thackeray’s flirtatious Becky Sharp an interesting personage; the cast is reasonably effective and includes Hobart Bosworth, George Walsh, Harrison Ford, Earle Fox, Eleanor Boardman, Willard Louis and Robert Mack

EXTERIORS ................... Pleasing
INTERIORS .............. First rate

DETAIL......Far too much in spite of the fact that it is all good

CHARACTER OF STORY......A chronicle of the adventures of pretty Becky Sharp who spoils her life through her own vanity

Hugo Ballin isn’t strictly to blame for the fact that “Vanity Fair” doesn’t provide good entertainment. Certainly he has shown every effort and spent plenty of money to make the picture attractive. But he is to be criticised for selecting Thackeray’s well known novel which, as proven by Mr. Ballin’s attempt, is not suitable screen material. It was Thackeray’s manner of writing, his dialogue and description, that made “Vanity Fair” popular as a book rather than the chron- iced adventures of his heroine, Becky Sharp.

The result is an offering colorful in atmosphere, artistic in settings, technically fine and beautifully pictured, but the story development lacks a sustained interest, contains little or no dramatic incident and resolves itself into a series of pretty pictures in which Becky Sharp holds the center of the stage and carries on her vanities to her heart’s content. All the good features of Ballin’s production fail to give it an absorbing interest, fail to create in the spectator any anxiety as to the outcome and little thought regarding what has already taken place. “Vanity Fair” fails to impress other than for its pictorial appeal.

The picture is far too long and made so through an over-abundance of detail that, while effective and entirely descriptive of Thackeray’s novel, makes the picture quite tedious at times and anti-climactic. There is a sequence about a quarter way through in the feature that contains some first rate humor of a quaint order. It deals with the effort of Sir Pitt Crawley to obtain a third wife in the person of Becky Sharp.

Miss Ballin does very well with the role of Becky Sharp except for moments where she appears to be trying too hard to get her part over. Eleanor Boardman is a pretty Amelia Sedley, while George Walsh, Harrison Ford and Earle Fox do all that is required satisfactorily. Hobart Bosworth makes the most of a small character part and Robert Mack injects the humor mentioned above.

Will Please From a Pictorial Standpoint If That Is Sufficient For Your Crowd

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

“Vanity Fair,” aside from whatever else it may be conceded to be, is one of the current offendors for long distance footage. It is close to eight reels and the story doesn’t deserve it regardless of the expense that was evidently incurred to present it. It is unfortunate that a picture upon which serious effort has been expended should hold such an unsettled forecast as far as the box office is concerned.

That folks will be pleased with the picture as far as its being good to look at should give you little concern, because it is pictorially attractive. But whether or not they will be entertained by what occurs against these pretty backgrounds is another matter. Of course “Vanity Fair,” as a title, should mean something and in all probability serve to bring in many admirers of Thackeray. Hugo Ballin’s name can be used and that of Miss Ballin for the benefit of those who have seen their previous pictures.
Dream Ending Is a Pleasant Surprise After Much Improbable Action

Ethel Clayton in “THE REMITTANCE WOMAN”
Film Booking Offices

DIRECTOR ................. Wesley Ruggles
AUTHOR .................... Achmed Abdullah
SCENARIO BY ................ Carol Warren
CAMERAMAN ................ Joseph A. Dubray
AS A WHOLE............ Far-fetched Oriental meller that couldn’t very well be gotten away with except for the dream ending

STORY ................... Action that appeals to many and some good comedy touches that help put it over DIRECTION ............ Hasn’t been sparing when it came to injecting atmosphere; plenty of rich settings and Oriental business

PHOTOGRAPHY ............. Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS ................. All right
STAR ...................... Reliable and pleasing; will suit her admirers

SUPPORT ................. Rockliffe Fellowes hasn’t much to do opposite star; Tom Wilson good comedy character and Chinese players adequate EXTERIORS .............. Looks like they have prepared many special settings
INTERIORS .............. And the same on interiors DETAIL ................. Suffices; some of the titles are funny
CHARACTER OF PRODUCTION .... Girl dreams father sent her to China where she becomes involved in warring factions, but is saved by lover

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,000 feet

While this latest Ethel Clayton vehicle is not the most appropriate that might have been secured for this star, they have rather successfully pardoned its many improbabilities and far-fetched action by the old standby, a dream ending. Since people are known to dream all sorts of impossible things, Achmed Abdullah will have to be excused if he puts his heroine through a wild series of fictional episodes consisting of warring Chinese factions with the girl holding the mysterious key to a settlement. Minus the dream finish, “The Remittance Woman” would be voted downright hokum of the oldest “movie” variety.

The dream part of the plot is a complication of intrigues with the heroine in possession of a certain magic vase greatly desired by opposing Chinese factions. The development in this is of a serial order with the action reaching various climaxes and the suspense piling on until the very end. First the girl has the coveted piece, then she hides it in the home of a member of one faction, is arrested by the opposing party, escapes imprisonment through a ruse and once more retrieves the vase. For those who don’t mind what the action consists of as long as it steps along at a good pace and furnishes them with excitement, this is all very nice. Where they want action of a more sensible order, they may not get enthused about the trouble with the magic vase.

There is a bright comedy vein that does a lot though to relieve the absurdities of this dream plot. It is brought out through the character of a Yankee sailor on leave in China. Tom Wilson plays this role in true comedy style and they’ll get many laughs out of his work, and usually the laugh comes at just an opportune moment to tone down the exaggerated action.

Many of the titles help to make Wilson’s humorous touches effective.

Ethel Clayton can be relied upon to give a satisfactory performance in almost anything. That Achmed Abdullah’s story isn’t well suited to her personality is no fault of hers, however. The cast is a good one and includes many Chinese players who are capable and well suited. Rockliffe Fellowes plays opposite Miss Clayton in a fairly subordinate part.

Star’s Followers Will Like It Plus Those Who Don’t Mind Excitement Minus Logic

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is another case where F. B. O. issues a synopsis of a story contained in one of their pictures which does not conform to the story as it is told in the picture. This is no terribly important thing as far as the review of the picture is concerned, but it is detrimental where the exhibitor uses the synopsis in exploiting the picture. In this case the sheet does not even indicate that the Oriental episode is a dream and there are other details, unimportant to be sure, but still not conforming to the continuity in the picture, that do not agree with “The Remittance Woman” as it appeared when shown for review.

With Ethel Clayton’s admirers the picture should go very well and wherever they like a lot of action with plenty of complications and exciting incidents, it should be well liked. For those who favor Oriental atmosphere you have enough to talk about and catch lines regarding the mystic vase sought by two Chinese factions and in the possession of an American girl should get them interested.
A Good Tom Mix Picture With First Rate Mixture of Action and Thrills

DIRECTOR .................................. Jack Ford AUTHOR ................................. Jack Ford
SCENARIO BY ........................... Jack Ford
CAMERAMAN ............................ Dan Clark
AS A WHOLE ...... Usual western with conventional plot but some good action and star offering some excitement with his stunts STORY ........ Regulation western formula that works out pretty much in the same fashion as the majority DIRECTION ........ All right; distributes action, comedy touches and romance nicely and furnishes some thrills in climax
PHOTOGRAPHY .......................... Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS .............................. Natural
STAR ...... In a typical role, does good work and will please his admirers SUPPORT ...... Francis Forde and Harry Todd supply some laughs; Alma Bennett, the girl in the case; others Edward Piel, Joe Girard, Virginia True Boardman, Margaret Joslin EXTERIORS ......................... Good western locations
INTERIORS ............... Not many DETAIL ............ All right; titles sound like Ralph Spence
CHARACTER OF STORY ............ Cowboy rescues man after handing him over to enemy when he learns he is father of girl he loves

Shown in a Broadway house to an early morning audience consisting mostly of men, "Three Jumps Ahead" seemed to prove thoroughly satisfying judging from the laughs accorded the humorous touches and the audible surprise at some of Mix’s more daring feats. This latest Mix release, while consisting of situations of a conventional order, offers a good western entertainment for those who like this brand and the star can be relied upon to keep them interested through what he is given to do as the cowboy who plans revenge upon a certain enemy and then rescues him when he discovers his prisoner is the father of the girl he loves.

Of course the theme follows along a familiar formula with cattle rustling starting off the plot. Then comes a fairly unexpected twist in that hero Tom is actually overpowered and held prisoner, retaken upon his attempt to escape and once more held. It isn’t like the hero to be "up against it," in this fashion.

The action is effectively distributed but the best, as usual, is reserved for the climax when there is plenty of fast riding, with the camera securing some fine shots, and some old and new stunts in the saddle which Mix gets over to the satisfaction of the crowd. The overtaking of the stage coach offers a thrill and what is probably the best stunt in the picture is the spectacular leap that Tony, Mix’s horse, makes, with Mix in the saddle, over a ravine.

Francis Ford and Harry Todd, as the uncles of hero Tom, are responsible for the laughs through their rivalry for the heart and hand of the girl’s aunt. Jack Ford has directed the picture satisfactorily, sustained the interest nicely and provided an all-around good production with a suitable supporting cast working with the star. Mix gives his usual performance with the added feature of some new stunts and some more risks that will make him go big with his admirers. Mix still wears white gloves and doesn’t even take them off when he’s eating. Wonder why?

Story: John Darrell is held prisoner by Taggart, head of a band of cattle rustlers. Boone McLean and his uncle are also taken prisoner and Darrell forced to flog them after a futile attempt at escape. Darrell makes a get-away, returns to his family, and Boone is released on condition that he bring Darrell back. He does and then learns that Darrell is Ann’s father. Boone being in love with Ann rescues her father and all ends happily.

Enough To Talk About And Should Please A Good Majority

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Use the star’s name and whatever exploitation is necessary to get them interested. Mention of the star’s name should be sufficient to let them know this is a western and the stills in the lobby will do the rest. The picture is sufficiently short to permit a good accompanying short reel program and all told should give you a first rate and interesting program.

DIRECTION..........Gives story first rate production and makes good use of material; provides well suited cast

DETAIL ...................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY... Indian Prince becomes minister, later temporarily renouncing vows to carry out vengeance, but love of girl prevents it

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,270 feet

"The Rip Tide" will certainly satisfy those yearning for something different. With a story that is considerably out of the ordinary and atmosphere equally unusual you have something that should prove thoroughly interesting particularly to those who favor unique entertainments. J. Grubb Alexander has used ideas that of themselves are more or less of a stock variety but it is the combination atmosphere and characterization that makes them distinctive. And the story is strong in the latter element. There is much effective character development in the theme that has been splendidly visualized and through the careful treatment accorded it by director Pratt, is made absorbing and quite vivid.

Throughout the picture there are effective touches and bits of detail indicative of good direction. There is the opening symbolical sequence which is a definite promise of something new. Dick Sutherland, in an extraordinary make-up typifies the primeval age by arising from what appears to be a pool of thick muddy water and perches on a nearby rock in a pose after the fashion of the well known "thinker." Pratt proceeds with the story following one or two philosophical subtitles.

The opening reels may prove a trifle slow as Pratt has taken quite some time to establish a premise and introduce all his characters. While this all serves to give the later plot a solid foundation, it makes the opening at little slow in securing interest although the effective detail included should be able to retain the spectator's attention adequately.

The picture's best sequence is in the climax. Throughout Pratt has succeeded in retaining a mystery atmosphere in connection with the character Count Voronsky. You can never figure his "game," whether he is actually in love with the Indian Princess he persuades to marry him, or whether he is up to some sort of political intrigue. Nor can you decide the hero's future movements after the girl he loves marries another and his father commands him to carry out vengeance to preserve the family honor although his clerical vows demand otherwise. One of the best surprise twists is the death of Voronsky by accident. A bit of flame from a candle reaches a revolver and fires it directly in the villain's path. It is surely one of the most original exits that they have ever found for a villain.

"The Rip Tide" contains as fine a cast as you could want. J. Frank Glendon gives a first rate performance as the Indian Prince who forsakes his native traditions to become a minister. Stuart Holmes, Rosemary Theby and Diana Alden are quite capable and George Ricas makes a good deal of a minor role, that of a philosopher.

Should Be a First Rate Number Where They're Crying
For Something Different

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors catering to a clientele that welcomes a variation in their screen entertainment should be able to interest them with this latest Arrow release. You can talk about an unusual story and a picture that is rather novel in atmosphere as well. There is an A1 cast with plenty of names to use prominently in your announcements. Mention Stuart Holmes, Rosemary Theby, J. Frank Glendon and Russell Simpson in particular.

In your catchlines talk about the story as dealing with a Maharajah's son who became a minister, was disowned by his father, and later forced to break his vows to protect the family honor. Arrow has compiled an extensive campaign book with suggestions for exploitation that should be a big help in getting your folk interested.

Pretty Slight And Over Sentimental Story In This

SCENARIO BY ............. Sada Cowan and Ouida Bergere
CAMERAMAN .................. George Meyer
AS A WHOLE...... Gushing sentiment with very little in the way of real interesting situations; has small appeal

DIRECTION....... Couldn't very well have sustained interest any better except through less footage perhaps, especially in over abundance of close-ups

PHOTOGRAPHY....... All right, close-ups too big occasionally

LIGHTINGS ................. Good
PLAYERS....... Betty Compson featured with Conway Tearle; both labor with unattractive roles; Anna Q. Nilsson smokes too many cigarettes

EXTERIORS ................. Few

DETAIL ........................ Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY....... Girl secures place as maid in home of man she loves and later sacrifices her own happiness for his career

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ......... 6,946 feet

For the romance lovers, the flapper delegation and sentimentalists "The Rustle of Silk" can be recommended as entertainment. For those who prefer interesting, original and logical situations Cosmo Hamilton's story won't do. It is over sentimental and toward the close gets far too "mushy." It is the kind of story that will readily disgust those in search of more weighty material in their screen entertainment but, on the other hand, the love-sick heroine and her unhappily married lover, will be "loved" by the contingent mentioned above.

All Right For The Romancers But Not A Good Audience Picture

With "The Rustle of Silk" it depends entirely upon what your particular clientele prefers. You know best, if you cater to regular patronage, whether or not you can satisfy them with this sentimental piece containing the romance of a little hairdresser and her love for a prime minister. You can count on your flapper brigade being pleased with it and possibly your entire women patronage but the men will hardly find it entertaining. It isn't a man's story.

There is probably only one interesting touch in the picture and that is the idea of having the girl give up her lover just when affairs develop in such a way as to make their union possible. A divorce would prevent his appointment as prime minister and so the girl heroically sacrifices her long nourished love and contents herself with hoping that sometime in the future, etc. This may not be a good twist as far as audience appeal is concerned but it does serve to give the theme its only bit of originality.

The remainder of the situations, though they are hardly that, consist of boudoir scenes, tete-a-tetes between the party leader's wife and a man, who, unknown to her is her husband's enemy and merely using her as a tool to prevent his election, and the romantically pictured dreams of the maid who loves the woman's husband. It is all very flimsy and except for a satisfactory production and scenes that are very good to look at, there would be little indeed to interest the spectator.

Director Brenon couldn't do very much better with the material although a somewhat better sustained interest might have been secured had he finished the story up in five reels. It runs nearly seven which is far too long. Tappe hats are advertised in a sub-title.

Betty Compson and Conway Tearle make the most of fairly unattractive roles and Anna Q. Nilsson smokes her way through in the role of Tearle's wife. The cast is adequate on the whole.

Story: Fallaray is the likely candidate for prime minister when his enemy Chalfont, secretly the publisher of the leading paper, prints love letters addressed to Fallaray, to spoil his chances. Lola, a maid in Fallaray's house, and long in love with him, admits having written them although she had never given them to her lover. Lady Fee, Fallaray's wife, who had an affair with Chalfont, is ready to divorce Fallaray but Lola sacrifices herself that he may win in the election.

As far as exploitation is concerned, and where it is just a matter of getting them in, you have a first rate title to use and the names of Betty Compson and Conway Tearle. Cosmo Hamilton, as the author, might also interest those who are familiar with his works. Catchlines will give a further idea of the story, as well as a good assortment of stills and posters in the lobby.

CHARACTER OF STORY Expedition from San Francisco through the South Sea Islands
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION 5,000 feet

Presented by World Tours, Inc., and released by Pathe is this latest record of another trip to the South Sea Islands, this time made by the Salisbury Expedition. Edward G. Salisbury, the producer of "Black Shadows," is said to be a fearless explorer, and after seeing the battle between two warring tribes of head hunters contained in the picture the title is easily understandable.

The expedition starts from Los Angeles and by means of an animated chart, giving the route and the name of each island together with the nation owning it, the position of the travelers is always known. The first stop is made at the Marquesas Islands, and then the more civilized islands such as Tahiti, Pago Pago, Samoa and other Samoan Islands, where the natives, to quote Robert Louis Stevenson, "have but five interests in life—swimming, dancing, eating, resting and sleeping," all of which are photographed in detail. The water views in this section of the picture are extremely beautiful, particularly the scene showing the girl and boy sliding down the falls by means of a slippery rock.

From this point the expedition travels to the Island of Bou, the largest of the Figi's, where there is scarcely any civilization at all, but the natives fairly mild and peaceful, and thence proceeds to the Solomon Islands, the home of the wild tribe called head hunters, because of their cannibalistic tendencies. It is at this juncture that the film is at its most thrilling point, and you see what appears to be a real battle between two tribes. The fantastic dances and head-dresses used by the natives in their efforts to have the war gods smile on them are seen in detail as is the water trip taken by the besieging tribe to the coveted island, and the final attack, ending in triumph for the aggressors.

There are many bits of interesting detail here and there such as the spot on the Island of Tavuni where the 180th Meridian marks the division of the world's time, on one side of which it is Saturday when its Sunday on the other, the manner in which the bread-fruit is picked and ripened, and the luxuriant growth of the Hibiscus flower from which the natives make mucilage.

Besides the pictures of the natives Salisbury has incorporated beautiful shots of the islands and the surrounding waters, which are dotted with picturesque sailboats with crab-claw sails, that add much to the pictorial value of the film.

If Your Folks Like This Sort Of Entertainment It’s A Good One

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is another south sea island picture on the order of the Martin Johnson pictures dealing with these same tribes and their habits and manner of living. If your folks are interested in this type of entertainment you can give them "Black Shadows" with the knowledge that they will be pleased with what they see.

You can talk about the novelty of the picture and its pictorial appeal as well as the really educational angle that it presents. Mention the battle between the head-hunters, for action, and play up the dances, executed by the natives. The title alone won't tell them what its all about, so give them an idea yourself and use posters prepared.

“Sentinels of the Sea”—Fox Educational

Type of production ......................... 1 reel educational

An interesting series of pictures make up this latest Fox Educational to be released in March. The reel contains views of lighthouses and life-rafts that afford attractive material for an educational number. There are shots various lights along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts with some that are more familiar than others, such as Beacon Light in Boston, Ambrose Light in New York, and many more views of the lifesavers of the sea that are excellently photographed and often attractively tinted. Shots showing the tenders “going to work” via a pulley which transfers them from a small boat to the light are especially interesting and the reel as a whole, offers good entertainment of this particular order.

Type of production ......................... 1 reel magazine

An interesting and varied collection of subjects make up this issue of Pathe’s Review. The national sport of Indo-China, racing with large boats containing seventy rowers each, has not been seen before. A subject entitled “Chip-chip and her babies” shows mother bird feeding her little ones, whose open mouths constantly cry for food. Another section shows the entire process of making lead pencils, while the Pathe color section is devoted to shots of the whirling surf along the coast of Brittany.

“Borrowed Trouble”—Carter DeHaven—F. B. O.

Type of production ......................... 2 reel comedy

While the theme of this Carter DeHaven comedy is as old as the movies, “Borrowed Trouble” has been well handled as to players and direction and will probably satisfy a large majority. The DeHavens are a young married couple who after buying a wonderful house haven’t enough money to furnish it. The wife, however, writes her parents and describes the furnishings of the house next door as their own. The parents come to visit them and they take advantage of the fact that the electrical inventor who lives next door has gone away for the night leaving his baby and keys with them to pretend that the inventor’s house is their own, with some amusing complications.

“Ain’t Love Awful”—Century-Universal

Type of production ......................... 2 reel comedy

The fact that producers are still making comedies in which edibles are thrown around promiscuously would indicate that this sort of thing is still deemed amusing by a lot of people. In this Century two-reeler, which features Bobb Dunn, everything is thrown from bottles of milk to bouquets of flowers. There is also the familiar chase with everybody running after the escaping hero, who has only tried to elope with the old man’s only daughter. There is a laugh in the situation where Dunn has his head between the rungs of a long ladder and is running down a road. Two machines come along and catch the ends of the ladder, forcing Dunn to move backward instead of forward. He escapes the cars by dropping down a manhole. All right where they like a slapstick.

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt’s “Adventures in the Far North”—Max Fleischer

Type of production ......................... 4 reel expedition picture

There are several very worth while, interesting and valuable educational pictures on the market in the way of expedition films, or photographic records of trips into unexplored regions of the earth. The latest is Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt’s pictures of a seven months’ expedition of hunting, whaling and photographing in the far north, principally along the coast of Alaska as well as some inland trips. The Kleinschmidt picture is different from the animal hunting pictures, and while probably not containing the thrills of the African hunts, has numerous interesting and or less exciting sequences included in these four reels of scenes and hunting. The expedition was made in a reconstructed submarine and started from Seattle in the Spring of 1922, headed far enough north to secure many fine views of icebergs, volcanoes, and other natural beauties of the north. The photography is excellent and some of the pictures have been beautifully tinted.

Besides a quantity of usually fine views of the country, the coast and the water, Capt. Kleinschmidt has secured some of the best pictures of water animals that have been seen. Those of birds in hordes thick enough to look like a solid mass, schools of seals, sea lions and walruses are especially interesting. The photographing of whale harpooning and the capturing of young specimens of typical northern animals offer more worth while pictures. By far the most interesting of all, though are the pictures of a huge white polar bear swimming with her young offspring hanging on. Remarkable are the shots showing the efforts to rope in the young bear and the frantic attempts of the mother to battle off the captors and her eventual content when the little bear is allowed to go free. The picture is worthy of exhibition any where and should be heartily received.

“Giants vs. Yanks”—Our Gang—Pathe

Type of production ......................... 2 reel comedy

The latest outburst of Hal Roach’s irresistible gang of youngsters occurs under the interesting title of “Giants vs. Yanks.” In the spring a young man’s fancy turns to thoughts of baseball, and the gang is no exception to the rule. Not so their several parents who at the moment the game is called, find plenty of work for young hands to do. Considerable time is taken up in evading the different tasks, but finally everything is set and the game proceeds with little Farina as the umpire. Not for long, however, because they are chased off the lot. “Bugleman” Davis has lent his baby sister to a childless couple living nearby and the gang goes to get her. Finding a litter of puppies they are having a great time, when the house is suddenly placed under quarantine. And then the wrecking crew starts. The amusements they evolve are strange and weird, also very destructive, but most of all they are funny. They put white shoe polish on the little black baby and black shoe polish on the white baby, swing from the chandeliers, dress up in grown-up clothes, shoot all the stuffed birds with a real gun, and generally tear the place apart. Luckily the quarantine is found to be unnecessary, and the kids are finally returned to their waiting parents.

If you, by any chance, are not using these comedies, you are missing the best short reels of the year.

“Three Gun Men”—Fox Sunshine Comedy
Type of production ................................................. 2 reel comedy

An ordinary variety of slap-stick is this latest Sunshine comedy and quite lacking in real humor. An over copulent and seldom successful comedian tries hard enough to register intended comedy bits, but his efforts fail perceptibly. “Three Gun Men” deals with the efforts of extras, all of them imitating Chaplin, to secure jobs in the movies. The fat one finally lands the job and screen's his first picture for a “hard” audience which throws the proverbial bad, eggs at the conclusion of the showing. The offering isn't a good comedy number.

“Don't Flirt”—Dippy Do—Pathe
Type of production ................................................. 1 reel comedy

This is the first of the new Hal Roach one reel animal comedies called “Dippy Doo Dads,” which are directed by Len Powers. This one is an exceedingly cute number with all the parts played by geese, ducks, chickens, and monkeys. Dressed up in tiny clothes they enact a comic drama. A goose and her sweetheart go swimming together which causes the old hen to talk. They go to the paternal gander who in turn gets the law, in the shape of Mr. Monkey, on the young blod who is properly chastised, and driven from town. An extremely novel and entertaining short reel.

“Small Change”—Cameo—Educational
Type of production ................................................. 1 reel comedy

This one reel comedy derives its laughs from the situations existing in the ultra-expensive cafe where a not over-wealthy young man takes his best girl for a little supper. The constant tipping of waiters, check-boys, etc., and the enormously high cost of the smallest bit of food are among the gags used and though of course the conditions are exaggerated they will bring many a sympathetic smile to faces in the audience. Fred Hibbard has directed the girl and boy are Virginia Vance and Billy Eugene. It is a pleasant-enough one reel comedy and will, in all probability, prove sufficiently amusing to the average audience.

“Roll Along”—Christie—Educational
Type of production ................................................. 2 reel comedy

Although Jimmie Adams is the star of this Christie comedy, the work of the entire cast is so good that it is hard to say that one player is better than another. Aside from this the entire idea is novel and entertaining to a degree. At Christie, the director, has all the players in black-face make up, with the action taking place “away down south in Dixie.” Jimmie Adams and Sam Irving work on rival river boats, the “Smoky City” and the “Dusky Belle,” but both boys are in love with Natalie Joyce, a swift-stepping darktown strutter. Her fat sister, played by Babe London, is the best cook on the plantation but she can’t seem to get a beau. Her mammy tells the boys that the first one to get back from Smith’s landing, down the river, with a preacher can marry Natalie, and the last one back has to marry Babe. The race of the two old river-boats, which have struggled for years to beat each other’s record lends plenty of excitement to this portion of the film, and there is a big laugh when Jimmie triumphantly comes up with what he thinks is a preacher only to find he is an undertaker. This is a first-rate number that gets far away from the average.

The Pill Pounder”—C. C. Burr—Hodkinson
Type of production ................................................. 2 reel comedy

This is, on the whole, a regulation slap-stick comedy with Charles Murray as the featured player. There are however, some really funny sequences that keep things from getting slow. One of these is the poker game bit with the players switching cards with Murray whenever he leaves the table. The result is that they give him a winning hand, much to their chagrin. Another good bit is the slow-motion stuff inserted after Murray gives Jimmie an over-dose of bromo-seltzer and we see him slowly sailing out of the door. This should have no trouble getting over, especially where Murray is liked, although some of the humor is a trifle broad.

“Curbing the Dope Evil”—Hoey Lawlor—State Rights
Type of production ................................................. 1 reel drama

This is the sort of short reel that may find favor in small towns or in second-rate theaters where they like a lot of running around and hit-or-miss action regardless of continuity. The title can be relied on to draw, if you don’t care whether they are pleased or not. It was originally made for a two-reel and has been cut without regard for smoothness of continuity. The story deals with John Jackson’s efforts to locate a missing package of drugs, and his adventures in a tea room that has been given over to the sale of “hopp.”

“The Crystal Ascension”—Kiser—Pathe
Type of production ................................................. 1 reel Oregon Trail Series

“The Crystal Ascension,” Kiser Artfilm directed by Broderick O’Farrell pictures the experiences of a group of tourists ascending Mount Hood of the Oregon Cascade Range. Each step of the ascension is carefully pictured and the wonderful backgrounds of snow and ice, clouds and chasms are exceedingly beautiful. This reel should prove an excellent addition to a hot-weather program. The photography is fine, the subject matter interesting and the scenic effects remarkably beautiful. The title doesn’t give a very clear idea of what the reel is about, so it would be well to let your folk know something about it.

“So This is Hamlet”—C. C. Burr—Hodkinson
Type of production ................................................. 2 reel comedy

There is a fairly new idea in the plot of this C. C. Burr comedy which features Charles Murray and a cast including Felix Adler, Charles Hines, Dorothy Allen and Dot Walters, and it will probably be liked very much where burlesque comedy goes well. Charlie and his partner are in the fur business and the firm of Fein and Klein is doing well until it takes a flier in the picture producing game. They start by producing “Hamlet” with variations, and the finished picture is finally thrown on the screen of their “rejection” room. The rest of the footage shows the picture as produced by them, with occasional cut-backs to Fein and Klein watching the critics’ faces at the first showing. The titles are good and there is some funny stuff built around some of the well-known lines. For instance, when the King finds a bottle of hooch labeled “Yorick” buried in a grave the title “Alas poor Yorick, I knew you well,” is inserted. The comedy would have been better as a whole if they had not let the burlesque run so long.

Short Subject Quarterly

Will be issued Sunday, June 3

HUNDREDS of exhibitors expressed their interest and appreciation of the last issue. Many wrote in to say that it gave them a better idea of what to do with "short subjects" than they had ever possessed. The views of important first run exhibitors as to how they handled their "short subjects" proved an inspiration to many others. The forthcoming issue will contain a large variety of informative, helpful, suggestive articles, both to the exhibitor and the producer.

This quarterly issue offers an unusual opportunity to the producer and distributor of short subjects to present his message to the exhibitor.

Non-Theatrical Interests Meet at Delmonico’s To Discuss General Problems—Notables Accept

The Motion Picture Chamber of Commerce (Non Theatrical) will hold a dinner tonight at Delmonico’s of which upwards of 250 people are expected. The dinner will be for the purpose of discussing problems in the non-theatrical field and means of furthering the temporary organization that developed in Allany recently when the passage of favorable legislation was sought by non-theatrical distributors.

According to Sidney Morse, of the Masonic Order who is handling the arrangements, Governor Smith, Eastman Kodak, Courtland Smith, Lee Hammer of the Russell Sage Foundation, Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, of the Social Education Association, Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and Dr. Mees, head of the Research Department of the Kodak Co., are among the notables expected. "Filmland," a picture produced by Eastman Kodak, will be shown to the guests, and also a special two reeler made up of interesting shots from various of the productions made by non-theatrical firms, showing the progress made along these lines.

Barrmore for “Eternal City”

Sam Goldwyn has engaged Lionel Barrmore for “The Eternal City.” He leaves on May 26, for Rome.

The Dembow’s Change

George Dembow, former Philadelphian manager for Fox is now in Boston as district manager in New England for Goldwyn. Sam Dembow, assistant general sales manager for Fox has left the company to go to the coast for Goldwyn. In Philadelphia, S. H. Rehe, who has been groomed for the post has been appointed resident manager for Fox.

Death Halts Hearings

The Federal Trade Commission’s hearing against Famous Players scheduled for yesterday was postponed until 10:30 this morning as a mark of respect in memory of Edward C. Leffingwell, prominent New York attorney, who died on Friday. Leffingwell was a member of the firm of C. A. Edison, George Eastman, Courtland Smith, Lee Hammer of the Russell Sage Foundation, Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, of the Social Education Association, Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and Dr. Mees, head of the Research Department of the Kodak Co., are among the notables expected. "Filmland," a picture produced by Eastman Kodak, will be shown to the guests, and also a special two reeler made up of interesting shots from various of the productions made by non-theatrical firms, showing the progress made along these lines.

Coast Theater Deal

Loew’s State, Los Angeles and the Warfield, Frisco Leased by Lesser Group for $7,500,000

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—A deal has been consummated between West Coast Theaters, Inc., and Marcus Loew whereby the former organization will take over Loew’s State here and Loew’s Warfield in San Francisco under a 25-year lease.

The lease involves $7,500,000, and the agreement provides that West Coast Theaters, Inc., are to have complete charge of the actual operation of the theaters under direct supervision of the Loew office. The houses will play First National and Metro pictures in the future.

The West Coast chain now totals 116 houses. This new, important transaction was closed by Joseph M. Schenck, who is interested in the Lesser-Gore-Ramish activities. Marcus Loew is expected here shortly.

The Loew office yesterday, in discussing the coast deal stated that a separate company had been formed to cover the transaction; that the Loew organization had sold not the theaters or the property and that the new arrangement gave West Coast Theaters, Inc., a 50% operating interest.

Various negotiations have been under way for some time looking toward the creation of another group for operating the two big theaters on the coast which are among the finest in the country.

Film Row Upset

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—Golden Gate Ave., “Film Row,” was quite upset yesterday over the report of the acquisition of the big Loew houses by West Coast Theaters. Well posted exchange men say this is an indication of the growth of West Coast to even greater strides, and hint that the addition of the Rothschild houses in Granada, Imperial and California, will be the next move, to be followed by

Ford Considering Production

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Who is Henry Ford’s scout here? A number of film people are wondering, because the report is persistent that Ford is considering entering the industry and that a representative is here speaking about the plan to stars.

Renewal Expected

Jack White to Continue Release Through Educational—On Way to Coast

Although no announcement has been made by parties concerned, it is expected that Jack White will continue his distributing arrangements with Educational.

White left for the coast on Friday after spending several weeks here. He has closed with Earl W. Hammond of Educational and E. H. Allen, the producer’s general manager.

Lloyd Hamilton, another producer, is here relative to the 1923-1924 distribution.

The Ballins Here

Hugo and Mahl Ballin are in town from Los Angeles.

Gallagher and Shean With Fox?

It is understood that Gallagher and Shean, the well-known vaudeville team who announced their intention of appearing in pictures recently, have signed with Fox. This was unconfirmed yesterday.

Another First Run Opening

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Jones, Linick & Schaefer are remodeling the Orpheum on State St. and it is said will change to a first run policy for the Fall. This would give opposition to the Roxy. The Orpheum seats about 900.

En Route for New Orleans

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—The Famous Players executives attending the various sales conventions left for New Orleans last night after a two day convention at the Drake. The Southern meeting will be held at the St. Charles tomorrow and Thursday.

Lichtman Buys “The Boomergan”

Al Lichtman and J. G. Bachmann have signed with David Belasco for the rights to “The Boomergan” by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes. “The Breath of Scandal,” a novel by Edward Balmer, has also been purchased. Both will be produced as part of the Fall schedule.

Film Men at Plaza Dinner

Among the film men who attended the annual dinner of the Vaudville Manager’s Protective Association at the Plaza last night were Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Ed Schiller, Harold Franklin, E. S. Moss and W. S. Butterfield, the latter of Battle Creek.

Bobby Irons

John M. Spargo, who on behalf of the Exhibitor’s Herald, has been a donor of a special prize of 12 Bobby Irons for the forthright of the boys on the management at Belloclear, Bayside, L. I., on Tuesday, June 5, has received the following from W. Wallace Hammon of Vitagraph:

"When I was a boy West last Fall I had the pleasure of playing a round of golf in Kansas with a non-descriptive set of clubs, borrowed, and one of the clubs was marked ‘Bobby’. It was the only one of its kind on the links and the only one I ever saw. But I will say that it was a wonder. It was this club, and not my ability as a golfer that enabled me to low-score in a four-ball foursome.

"Now I note in Saturday’s FILM DAILY that you are strong for the Bobby iron. It has been my experience all along to be at Bayside on June 5th, but now nothing can keep me away. I must see those ‘Bobbies’ which I read, are to be there. I have been able to find one in any store."

“Santa Claus” Zukor

What Happened to the Inhabitants When He Visited His Birthplace Near Budapest

The Paris edition of the New York Herald of May 5 contains the following interesting item from Budapest:

“Today the day, the small village of Riese, in the Zapplin district, had the sensation of its life when the stars of the circus company, with dire predictions made years ago as a poor farmer’s apprentice to try his luck on the other side of the ocean. He has a name a suit and 100 dollars, and has had enough money to pay the third-class (Continued on Page 2)

Walker Becomes a Producer

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Johnny Walker, in addition to working in pictures, has formed a new company which will make 12 feature films, featuring Eddie Polo, Catherine Bennett and Kathleen Myers in melodramatic story productions. With Walker is John H. Good of Youngstown, O., W. H. Curran, co-director of “The Courtship. The company will be in charge of production. The Polo pictures will be made with a personal eye to European sales. Walker’s next picture, ‘The Good Son,’ will be ‘The Worm,’ which he purchased from Charles Ray.

passage for his enterprising eighteen-year-old son. Yet young Zukor managed to reach the land of his dreams somehow and, after some initial hardships, in becoming president of one of the largest moving picture companies of the world.

On a tour through Europe, Mr. Zukor made up his mind to visit his birthplace, and when he consulted the time-table in his hotel in Budapest and did not find what he wanted, he ordered a special train, a thing never done before by any native of Riese.

"After having spent the night in his father's humble cottage, Mr. Zukor assembled the inhabitants of the registrar's office and promised to fulfill all their wishes if they would tell him what they wanted. The first asked for $5, the second wanted a suit of clothes and the third a cow. A sickly old man asked for a free railroad ticket to Budapest in order to undergo an operation there, and Mr. Zukor found that the ticket cost less than a ride in the subway in New York. A father asked for money to send his son to a grammar school and a woman wished for a birth present for her yet unborn child.

"The fire brigade was in need of a new fire engine and the Jewish community of a new "schorar horn." Every Riesien, in fact, had some wish or other, but Mr. Zukor found none of these wishes too great and granted them all. He distributed his dollars freely, and the whole of Riese was a picture of happiness and pride over its millionaire son. The village notary ordered the exchange list from the nearest town to learn the value of the dollars, and the postmaster telephoned the happy tidings to Budapest.

"When the general happiness was near seething point, Mr. Zukor boarded his train and left Riese as suddenly and unexpectedly as he had come."

New $500,000 House For Brooklyn

Work has commenced on a new picture house at Nostrand Ave. and Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, to cost $500,000. The new "Phantasia," as it will be called, is being erected by the St. Marks Holding Co. with a seating capacity of 1500 on the ground floor and 1300 in the roof garden, which will practically be another theater. It will be completed in November.

the acquisition of the Jensen & Von Herberg houses in the North shortly. The report was spread that last Fall the West Coast organization tried to make a deal with Rothschild, but this fell through. Famous Players is understood to have a 25% interest in the Rothschild houses.

With the three Rothschild houses lined up West Coast would have "things pretty much their own way" seems to be the opinion here among sales managers. If the Von Herberg deal was perfected it would mean about 11 or 12% of the entire country so far as rental is concerned. The opinion was ventured that a grave situation was developing. For despite the assertions of West Coast executives that they pay "fair prices" there are many along Film Row here who have contrary opinions.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Girl I Loved"—United Artists Herald

EVENING JOURNAL— is a work of art.  It is one of those simple, unpretentious tales that "move to restate the art of living."

Mr. Ray has never done anything better than his portrayal of John Middleton. In fact, it can readily be said that he has never before done anything to good advantage.

EVENING WORLD—And we have racked our memory in an effort to think of a screen actor who could more beautifully portray the lead role than Charles Ray, and failed utterly. To us, he symbolized." Charles Ray seemed to be just about the sort of a chap James Whiting Riley was writing about when he penned the poem.

GLOBE—Charles Ray puts another terrific strain on his already rapidly decreasing popularity with the "The Girl I Loved."  It is another horrible example of a star lacking the restraining hand of some one knowing the limits of his ability.

Generally speaking, the atmosphere of the production is excellent, the photography above the average, and the acting, with the supporting cast, particularly Patsy Ruth Miller, unusually good.

HERALD— * * * back into the atmosphere which suits him best in "The Girl I Loved." **

It is a sad story, and a thin one, but it is vitalized by the amazingly fine work of Charles Ray and Patsy Ruth Miller in the two central roles.

Mr. Ray has always been a splendid actor, possessed of a sincerity and a pantomime ability which has placed him far above the usual average of movie stars; but we doubt that he has ever done anything as good as this.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—If you want to see a unique and charming picture, do not fail to go to the Capitol.  All the Irish fragrance of an old-fashioned garden in the moonlight has been magically infused into the screen version of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, "The Girl I Loved."

SUN—The young star in his latest picture does some of the finest acting of his career and some of the worst. The worst appears in the earlier comedy scenes when he shows his awkward, cumbly dislike of his newly arrived sister.

TELEGRAM—A new Charles Ray—humorous and whimsical as ever, but fired with a new force of dramatic power. **

TIMES— * * * shows Charles Ray in a very sentimental part.  He is a capable young actor, but he seems to have undergone a change since he first appeared on the screen. Charles Ray has come in for the kind of stuff given to the first-class stuff of his kind, giving Mr. Ray an opportunity to do his entire act.

-Daniel F. Morgan has joined the staff of Charles Walton.

"The Isle of Lost Ships"—1st Nat'l Strand

DAILY NEWS—A splendid yarn of high adventure.  * * We recommend it heartily to all lovers of excitement, romance and the unusual. It is called "The Isle of Lost Ships," a title as mysterious and fascinating as the picture. Against a background that fires the imagination, Director Tourneur has told a fast-moving melodramatic story that captures and holds one completely.

EVENING WORLD—"The Isle of Lost Ships" is most certainly something new in picture stories and, having been directed by Maurice Tourneur, is masterfully handled. The cast too is excellent. **

GLOBE—Maurice Tourneur is the director and he has given the film some clever and convincing touches. There is some beneath-the-water photography that is not bad. It is a more than adequate cast, and more than adequate direction, wasted on stuff that is not particularly worth doing.

SUN—"The Isle of Lost Ships,"  * * * is a real thriller. This sea story, directed by Maurice Tourneur, is a fascinating picture wrought with beauty and fault of excitement.

TELEGRAM— * * something novel and stirring in color pictures. Real romance that has an air of actuality even in its wildest moments holds the onlooker spellbound. "The Isle of Lost Ships" is just the sort of hair-raising story that an old salt tells as he sits ashore, between voyages, putting his old pipe and drawing on feet and fiction.

TIMES—Granting that it possesses a highly imaginative plot, "The Isle of Lost Ships,"  is a film of more than average interest and interest and that it has all the ear-marks of good direction with considerable acting to detail. **

It is a good story and in the hands of Maurice Tourneur it is given every possibility in the film. Tourneur's spark throughout the photoplay, and some of the scenes of a storm at sea are as good as if not better than have been put into other pictures.

WORLD— * * * the sea storm  is without question the most realistic thing of its kind ever produced in the cinema.

"The Isle of Lost Ships" starts off with a marvelous reproduction of marine tempests, and then delves into that most wadly, conventional open sea melodrama, no better than any one of dozens of others of the general type that have gone before.

Daniel F. Morgan has joined the staff of Charles Walton.

Against Music Tax
C. Ritter Opposes Any Plan for Reduction—No Compromise, He Advocates
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—If the report is true that he proposition to tax a reduced demand on the M. P. T. O. at Chicago next week, such a move will have the unstinted opposition of James C. Ritter, the national president, according to a statement issued by Ritter through L. M. Richey, manager of the Michigan organization.

"There is no compromise between right and wrong," declared Ritter. By making ourselves a party to such an arrangement we would be admitting the tax is just and that at least a portion should be paid. I believe the exhibitors of the United States are demanding that the law be amended or repealed and that such action should be taken by the national organization through Congress to make the field over and above the 100% backing of the exhibitors of the country which I am confident such a movement would have. In many sections the rate of seven and a half cents a seat is nothing new. The entire tax is unfair and should be abolished for the motion picture theatre and other places where the playing of taxable music is of benefit to the composer and publisher instead of damaging him."

Buys "The Virginian" Rights Go to Al Lichtman—Once Planned by Fairbanks—16 for Next Year

Al Lichtman has closed for the rights to "The Virginian" which Douglas Fairbanks held for a long time. It was to be Fairbanks' next picture, following "Robin Hood," but instead he will make "The Thief of Baghdad."

"The Virginian" will be one of the preferred pictures for next season. Lichtman has also secured "Poisoned Paradise," by Robert W. Service, a story of Monte Carlo; "Faint Per- fume," a new novel by Zona Gale which will be dramatized next season on Broadway, and "The Frail," by Frederick Oori Bartlett. As noted, the company has secured "The First Year," "The White Man," and "The Mystery." All told, sixteen pictures are planned for the new season. Three, originally scheduled for release, will be "Fever," including "April Showers," "The Broken Wing" and "Mothers-in-Law." Other stories on hand include "A Mansion of Aching Hearts," "My Lady's Lip," "The Aristocrat," and "When a Woman Reaches Forty."

Cohen to Testify After Convention; Edison Lauds Films' Educational Value
Exhibitor Leader Will Bring M. P. T. O. Minutes Before Trade Commission and Divulge Correspondence with Zukor on Theater Situation—Educator Sees Great Future for Pictures

Thomas A. Edison, Dr. J. J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, scheduled as one of the important speakers before the M. P. T. O. convention at Chicago next week, and Sydney Cohen, president of M. P. T. O. were among the important witnesses who testified yesterday in the Federal Trade Commission action against Famous Players and subsidiary organizations.

Edison and Dr. Tigert were called as expert witnesses, the Government's object presumably being to raise a point from the trend of their testimonies of the great potentialities of motion pictures in many important fields, leaving the inference to be drawn that the monopolization of such an important industry or its restriction to the point of hampering independent effort in a field of such manifold possibilities for good would be injurious not only to the industry itself but would menace the development of the industry's power for good.

Edison was invited to present the minutes of the 1920-21 convention in which was incorporated correspondence with Adolph Zukor and M. P. T. O. relative to theater extension and acquisition, in which was discussed the feasibility of limiting theater extension to only one in which it was impossible to obtain picture showings except through the acquisition or control of a theater or theaters.

Cohen told Government counsel that he did not have these minutes with him because they will be needed at an executive committee meeting to be held just prior to the Chicago convention, but promised that he would obtain them and have them ready for presentation as soon as he returns from the convention.

Motion pictures are the greatest and most powerful disseminating information in existence, and the possibilities of pictures as an adjunct to education are limitless, declared Thomas A. Edison, one of the pioneers who called early efforts to plant the trail for what is today the (Continued on Page 2)

Expansion Plans
F. P. Canadian Corp. Listing Large Blocks of Stock—Further Growth Looked For
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Montreal—A further expansion of the activities of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., is presaged in the proposed listing of $4,000,000 first preferred 8% shares and $7,500,000 of common of the corporation in the Toronto and Montreal exchanges according to a formal announcement by the Royal Securities Corp. Lord Beaverbrook is generally credited with holding a substantial interest in Royal Securities.

In connection with this flotation, it is pointed out that the corporation was organized in 1919 when it owned 16 theaters seating 37,000 persons, and owns 32 houses in Canada. Despite heavy construction, earnings in the first full operating year, ending Aug. 28, 1920, were $291,987 against first preferred dividends to be paid of $180,000. In the year ended Aug. 31, 1922, earnings totaled $320,000 and first preferred dividends were maintained. During the half year ending Feb. 24 last, earnings amounted to $297,553, against first preferred dividends of $160,000. All figures mentioned were after operation, maintenance, rentals, taxes and depreciation costs had been deducted.

world's fourth largest industry. Pictures, he asserted, can improve the nation's health just as surely as cigarettes. They effect the conduct, taste, morals and manners of America's children, he said, Darwin was right, the famous inventor declared, and pictures supply us with that imagination which we should not outgrow.

"The motion picture is today the most powerful medium for influencing and moulding public opinion," Edison stated. In the future it will be an even more powerful force. The radio is making great headway, but it will never rival or even approach the motion picture as a medium for transmitting information and moulding and developing thought and opinion. We get 85% of the information which is transmitted to our brain through the eye. We are not taught much through the ear except music.

The possibilities of motion pictures are unlimited, and I believe that in the future, with pictures playing an important part in our educational system, all children will want to go to school to get an educational picture made right. A kid doesn't know he is being taught.

"A child's greatest aversion is books. I experimented a number of years ago by attempting to teach physics to your children through the medium of motion pictures, and found from the reports of their parents that they hit about 80% of the idea during the first lesson. A child I believe can learn more easily than an adult, because their minds are more receptive."

"The book publishers became peeved at what appeared to be beneficial competition with their own product. Edison stated so he didn't concern himself with his experiments. Edison admitted with a sad shake of his head that he missed a big bet when he failed to secure European patents for his ketoscope.

"The show business was out of my line," he said, "so I got out of the business."

Dr. J. J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, corroborated the statements of Edison relative to the possibilities of motion pictures, asserting that the average human being receives more information through the eye than all the other senses combined. Dr. Tigert predicted that future pictures will be invaluable in teaching history, declaring that in years to come history of today and tomorrow will be accurately portrayed on the screen, as well as habits and customs and every detail of activity that is susceptible to photography.

The Commissioner asserted that pictures will prove a great aid in the work of Americanization, by helping the newcomer to America's shores an accurate idea of our history, traditions of institutions and geography. Because pictures speak a universal language and convey an appeal that knows no geographical boundaries, the screen will in future do much toward improving international relations, Dr. Tigert predicted.

"The educational value of motion pictures is just beginning to be felt," Dr. Tigert said. "Ultimately, however, the commercial and entertainment phases of the industry will be far outdistanced by the educational and instructional side of development and use of pictures."

Joseph C. Boss, the exhibitor of McAlaster, Ohio, who was producer of the Government last week to tell of his "bad treatment" at the hands of Southern Enterprises, Inc., was on the stand for cross-examination.

Attorney Swaine, questioning for the respondents, attempted to force the witness to admit that he had been very well treated by Famous Players, that it was only through the benevolent influence of Lynch's organization that it was possible for him to enter business at McAlaster and that Famous had made every effort to "take care of him," and treat him fairly.

Swaine produced a telegram from Frank Freeman to Hulsey, manager of the Texas-Oklahoma-Arkansas circuit of Southern Enterprise theaters advising Hulsey that no obligations of any kind were due Hulsey, at McAlaster, and that he had a free hand and go ahead, (presumably with plans for the acquisition of Boss's theater), as far as the main office was concerned.

Boss declared that it was the first time he had ever heard of such a telegram, that he did not know that Freeman really sent such a wire but that if he did he "lied."

"Would you be willing to make such a statement if Mr. Freeman were in the room?" Swaine asked.

"I certainly would," retorted Boss heatedly. "I repeat, if Frank Freeman sent that telegram, he was telling a lie."

"You shall have the opportunity of telling him that to his face," Swaine said.

"I will welcome it," was Boss's rejoinder.

Shortly after this verbal tilt Freeman walked into the room.

"Is this the Frank Freeman you were referring to just before Mr. Edison was on the stand?" interrogated Swaine.

"Yes sir, that is the man I was referring to." "Do you still make the same statement with regard to this gentleman's veracity that you made a little while ago," Swaine asked, extending thetelegram toward Boss.

"I still say that if Mr. Freeman wrote that telegram, that he wrote a lie," Boss replied.

Asked if he didn't think Freeman's memory with regard to the telegram would be as accurate as his own, Boss replied that "Mr. Freeman's memory is probably controlled by his position." Boss stated that he himself was adhering to the truth and that Freeman might do so if he followed the dictates of his conscience but that his affiliations probably submerged his accuracy of memory.

Leslie Wilkes, summoned last week by the defense with files of the original correspondence between Boss and the Paramount exchange dealing with his grievances against Famous Players, was asked by the Government to identify photostat copies of agreements under which it is alleged Famous Players, through Hu- sey in Dallas, returned Boss' McAlester theater to Barney Resnick, owner of the property, after purchasing it from Resnick when Boss' difficulties forced him to "get out from under."

Boss testified that he trusted Freeman when the latter told him that as long as he, Boss, was in McAlester and showing Paramount pictures, Lynch would never offer competition there, and that he also implicitly trusted Joseph Gilday, Paramount exchange manager at Oklahoma City, when the latter told him that he could show two-day run pictures one day and get a future return date any time he chose.

Swaine made the witness admit that he knew all contracts were not valid until approved by the New York office, and read the stipulation on the contracts from several pictures that Boss has booked that they were to be shown for two consecutive days. Boss also stated that he was aware of the provisions of the contracts which made it plain that no alterations on the part of exchange managers would be considered binding, and yet felt, he said, that Gilday's oral agreement with him, which he admitted was not in conformity with the express stipulation of the contracts that he signed in all good faith, would insure him the privilege of calling a picture back for a second day's showing whenever he wished.

Boss testified that he had never asked Freeman to put in writing his verbal promise that Lynch would never invade his territory, nor had he asked a written agreement from Gilday validating his verbal agreement or understanding, because as the witness said, "I trusted them."

The witness stated that he had contracted for star pictures, featuring the highest salaried artists under the Famous banner in 1919, at prices ranging around $35 and $40, and had presumed that this price would continue indefinitely. He said, however, when asked if he would have been willing to pay higher prices if production costs and salaries for stars became higher, that he would, asserting that "I am a reasonable man."

The cross-examination of Boss will be continued at today's session.

New Material for Famous Players—
Ivan Zeis Writes an Original—"Big Brother" Bought

Before leaving for Hollywood last night, Jesse L. Lasky announced the purchase of new story material. Leading the list is "West of the Water Tower," by an anonymous author who will help prepare the script.

In connection with this, Lasky stated that he has enlisted the aid of the Committee on Public Relations of the Hays organization in order to secure the reaction on a story of this type. "Big Brother," Rex Beach's new story has been bought for production by Allan Dwan, following "Zaza." This story starts serially in Hearst's International shortly and is the one for which it was first reported Richard Barthelmess has secured the rights.

Vince Blasico Ibanez has written an original story, his first, entitled "Argentine Love." This will be on next year's schedule. As noted, "Rita Coventry" by Julian Street has been purchased for the use of William de Mille. The statement confirms the fact that Cecil B. De Mille will make "Triumph" by May Edgington upon completion of "The Ten Commandments."

Smashing Records

Hodgkinson Advertising for 30 Day and Date Runs in New York Proves Successful

Many house records were smashed in the 30 theaters in Greater New York on the opening of the week's simultaneous showing of "Down to the Sea in Ships," backed by a newspaper campaign that included full-page and quarter-page advertisements.

The house manager of the Alber- marle, Brooklyn, reports that the theater did a larger business on Sunday, than it had done since his connection with the theater, playing to 6722 admissions. The C. O. W., Brooklyn, with a seating capacity of 1500, played to 6138 admissions. The Strand, won his battle for 756 admissions on Saturday and Sunday. The house seats but 1376.

The Jewel, W. 116th St., hung up a new record for the house. Seven performances was the schedule of the Avon, Brooklyn, and with a seating capacity of 600, they accommodated approximately 3500, with many turned away.

One of the most phenomenal rec- cords was hung up by the Forum. With a seating capacity of 3000, they played to approximately 12000 paid admissions. The Olympia broke its house record on Sunday.

The Tivoli found it necessary to open the roof garden. At the Peerless, Brooklyn, Monday night, the line extended two full blocks, with police assistance in keeping the sidewalk open.

Finish With Boss

McAlester Exhibitor Off Stand—
Jamie Burman of Cortland, N. Y.
New Witnesses

The cross-examination of Joseph C. Boss, former exhibitor at McAlester, Okla., whose testimony during the last few days of the hearing will form an important part of the Government's proceedings against Famous Players and allied organizations, was completed yesterday with Mr. Boss still adamant in his "that's my story and I'll stick to it" attitude as to how he was treated by Famous Players.

Boss was followed on the stand by Jamie Burman, a former exhibitor at Cortland, N. Y., who had two houses at Cortland, one at Auburn, and one at Seneca Falls. Burman testified that he ran Paramount pictures at two of his theaters until the cost of his pictures was advanced $5 more than he was willing to pay. After an argument with Moritz, the district exchange manager for Para- mount and a salesman named Roso, Burman stated, he discontinued the Paramount service. Shortly there- after, he said, he began receiving post- als from people in Cortland, asking why they could not see Paramount pictures. He told people that the price of Paramount pictures was too high and that he could not afford to show them. Shortly there- after, he said, advertisements began appearing in the Cortland papers headed, "Cortland is a good town, but—" and attempting to explain why Paramount pictures were not being shown.

Burman's examination will continue today.

Defeat "Blues" in Two Towns
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Minneapolis—Renville has voted down "Blue laws" by a vote of 153 to 134. E. L. Parsons, manager of the Crystal there, was prominent in the fight.
At Plankinton, S. D., the proposed Sunday "blue law" was voted down by a majority of 136.

To Mr. Executive Sales Department,
Anyfilm Company,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Have you ever considered how important it is for every man on your staff to be posted every day on what's going on in this business?

Have you ever considered what it is worth in dollars and cents to have every one of your roadmen thoroughly acquainted every day with what is happening, and thus giving them a talking point and easing the contact with your prospective customer?

Have you ever considered how valuable this would really be?

Many, almost all of the leading distributing companies subscribe for every one of their offices; and some for every salesman. They have found it "good business."

If it has so proven to them, what would it do for you?

Minnesota To Have Large Delegation at Convention—Many N. Y. Executives Going
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Minneapolis—The Minnesota delegation to the Chicago convention plans to travel in royal style. The number of exhibitors has reached such proportions that two special trains have been chartered to get the group to the Windy City.
The big special leaves here tonight at 8 o'clock. The second will leave Monday night at 10:45, bringing the group into Chicago in time to attend the first business session Tuesday. An entire floor of one of the leading Chicago hotels has been engaged for the Minnesota group.
Ask any Minnesota man what he thinks about Al Steffes' chance for his presidency and only one answer will be given. Everyone here thinks Steffes has the presidency cinched.

Godsol Makes Buy
Acquires Roosevelt Theater, Chicago As Personal Venture—Lease Unchanged
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Chicago—Frank J. Godsol, president of Godwyn has purchased the real estate on which the Roosevelt theater stands and the theater structure from the Ascher-Roosevelt theater Co. at a price reported at $1,800,000. The buy is a personal one on the part of Godsol, although his company owns a 50% interest in the theaters operated by Ascher Brothers.
The Roosevelt, which is one of the most costly houses erected here because it was put up when construction was at its peak, will continue to be operated by Balaban and Katz, who leased it from Ascher Bros. some time ago. Godsol, as the owner of the property, will spend $200,000 a year for the lease of it and will also share in the profits.
The house seats 1,600. The building is subject to a mortgage of $1,388,000.

Claims $50,000 Damages
According to Robert Spear, his attorney Miguel Gonzales Ibarra, yesterday filed a suit against the M. P. Prod. and Dist. Ass'n, the Prudential Film Service and Joseph Seiler, alleging malicious intent in procuring an indictment for the alleged theft of "Fascination." Gonzales was arrested in August and released, according to Spear, in March when the indictment was dismissed. No one at the Hays office cared to comment on the suit. Neither did Seiler at Prudential.

Goldwyn Dickering for the Liberty There—Want It as "Show Window" for that Territory
One of the interesting statements that Edward Rose of Goldwyn at the Federal Trade Commission hearing yesterday was the fact that Goldwyn is dickering for a theater in Kansas City.
Later it was learned that this house is the Liberty, now owned and operated by Sam Harding. The theater seats 1,000 and is in the downtown section of the city about equally situated from Newman's Royal and the Newman. It is under the theater is not being sought as a first-run primarily, although it will, of course, house the Goldwyn product first-run, but as a "show window" for that territory where exhibitors can watch how the new Goldwyn product is put over with the public.

Gov't Witnesses Fail to Show Up—Bowes, Rosenzweig, Owsley of Legion Trinity
Yesterday's session of the Federal Trade Commission's trust proceedings against Famous Players was consummated principally in waiting for Government witnesses who failed to materialize, and in a brief examination of several witnesses including Col. Alvin Owsley, National Commander of the American Legion, Charles Rosenzweig, manager of the New York exchange of F. B. O., and Edward J. Bowes, vice-president of Goldwyn.

Col. Owsley spoke of the extensive use of films in furthering the patriotic educational work being carried on by the Legion for veterans. Pictures are being used to a great extent in this work, he said, especially pictures of the operations of the American Expeditionary Force in Europe during the war, called "Flashes in Action." Col. Owsley stated that these pictures were not taken by the Government and were owned by the Legion. They are released, he said, through the Legion's own releasing organization, and there had been frequent difficulties in obtaining a showing in numerous theaters, the witness testified.
"Moving pictures is the most potent factor for presenting public opinion and dominating thought in this country today," replied Col. Owsley in reply (Continued on Page 4)

Ashes in II Reels
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—“Ashes of Vengeance,” Norma Talmadge’s new picture, will be released in 11 reels. The company press department furnishes the following statistics relative to the pictures:

“it already has cost $650,000 and $200,000 more will be spent on it. It will be released in eleven reels and 1,500 feet of film will be shot for the cutting room to assemble. More than 2,000 prints, 4,000 costume accessories, and 5,000 costumes with all accoutrements have been made at the United Studios from photographs of old costume plates. More than 1,200 people dance on the set of which is a duplicate of the Louvre Palace grand ballroom of the time of Charles IX.

“The Huguenot massacre of 1572 is being filmed with 1,700 horsemen and horses and ‘Huguenots.’ Enough power was used on the lights employed for the big Louvre ballroom and night massacre scenes to light the city of Los Angeles for two hours. Every generator in Los Angeles was used to light the sets. Seventy-four electricians, twelve camera- men, seven ‘still’ cameramen and a technical staff of more than 300 men is now at work on the production.”

to a quick, temporary counsel statement as to his view along this line.

Rosenzweig testified that while he was in charge of Universal's New York office, during one of the first long-continued hearings, he succeeded in securing a showing through Dr. Riesenberg in the Rialto, Criterion or Rivoli for "The Virgin of Stamboul," "The Devil's Blind Husbands" but had always received the same answer—no open booking.

During the hearing with F. R. Rose, he testified that he had offered "The Third Alarm," and Ethel Clayton's picture, "Can Women Love Twice?" to Joe La Rose, production manager of these theaters, with the same result.

It was finally necessary to rent the Astor Theater to obtain a first-run New York showing of "The Third Alarm."

Rosenzweig admitted that he knew that Ethel Clayton was formerly a Paramount player.

"Did you know?" Swaine asked the witness, "that Famous Players didn't renew Ethel's contract because they considered her a poor actress?" Rosenzweig replied that he was not aware of this fact.

"Outside coaching another witness," Swaine smilingly remarked.

Bowes testified on direct examination that the corporation, which owns a 50% interest in the Capitol and Rialto, and that this step had been taken to insure a New York run for Goldwyn pictures.

Goldwyn, he stated, had never experienced any difficulty in securing first runs over the country, declaring that all Goldwyn pictures had received first runs that were justified by the quality of the picture.

Goldwyn plans to put out about 40 feature pictures during the current season, Bowes said. About 18 have already been released this season. The witness testified that Goldwyn had forged greatly to the front during the last year. "I am compelled to reluctantly admit," he said, "that Goldwyn made enviable headway last year.

Government counsel was unsuccessful in drawing from the witness the statement that Goldwyn's acquisition of theaters in different parts of the country was made necessary in order to secure first run showings.

Bowes stated that Goldwyn has an interest in about 25 theaters in different cities, of which four are first-run. Heegaard Underwood had forged greatly to the front in Kansas City, not to insure first runs, he pointed out, but to be used for exploitation of Goldwyn pictures.

Rosenzweig's first-run houses, he said, are in New York, Denver, Milwaukee, and Los Angeles. Goldwyn, he stated, will run "Fielding's" in the downtown area of the city.

Mr. David Goldwyn's new Park Theater.

This question was asked in connection with the recent announcement that Cosmopolitan will distribute through Goldwyn.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Goldwyn, was also at the morning session. Grainger was permitted to answer some of the questions asked of Bowes because the witness was unfamiliar with certain phases of the distribution of the Goldwyn activities.

Elek Ludvig, general counsel for Famous Players, was on the stand for a short while to identify various documents and agreements which are to be incorporated into the record.

While testifying on Wednesday, Jamie Burnham, a former exhibitor of Cortland, N. Y., declared that he had lost money on "F. L. M. Miracle Message," which cost him $500 for Cortland, a town of 13,000. He admitted on cross-examination that he had sold his two houses outside of Cortland, one in Seneca Falls and the other in Auburn, because they weren't paying. He admitted that all three towns were overtaxed.

He said that he finally got an adjustment from Famous Players relative to price, and finally got back his advance deposit when he threatened to sue—and not before—and things were working out pretty well until 'they handed me' what?"

"They?" Judge MacDonald of Famous Players counsel. And everybody laughed.

"They<I>Phyllis</I>" repeated Burnham. "That is to say, the Hoy crowd got after me."

And then Burnham went into some explanation relative to what is known as the Hoy system of reporting. He explained that he received letters from Vitagraph, Famous Players and others, with reference to his credit standing.

The attorneys squabbled when Burnham tried to explain why the Hoy system broke up, declaring that a quarrel with an exhibitor in Philadelphia resulted in a suit against Hoy. Burnham declared he could not remember the name of the exhibitor who brought the suit.

Roth Resigns
Leaves Universal After Brief Period of Service—No Reason Assigned for Change
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Eugene H. Roth, as resigned at Universal. No further statement is made at Universal relative to this.
Roth joined Universal in March as special representative of Carl Laemmle, the youngest golf player in the film business. Close on the heels of Universal is Hodkinson, Investigation, Al Lichtman Corp. and Joseph M. Schenck Prod., each with four golfers or golfers, as the case may be.
Of course, Mr. Schenck as George Gallup is on the committee, it was expected he would carry the Hodkinson staff for the tournament. So Callun said he accelerated his move when this side-kick and then persuaded Raymond Pawley and W. F. Seymour to chime in.

Koerpel Challenges
J. A. Koerpel, district manager of Goldwyn in Cleveland, turned in a wonderful score on a recent match game with Dr. M. A. Loring on the Highland Golf Course at Cleveland.
Koerpel, playing in great form turned in a card of 79 on a course of par 72 for 18 holes, winning, his match in easy manner.

So enthused over his game in the third time out this year, Koerpel issues a fair challenge to meet the winner of the FILM DAILY Golf Tournament.
The condition of this match is to be 36 holes, 18 to be played on the Cleveland Highland course and the other 18 to be played at the option of the opponent.

for New York Hearing Until Monday
With Government counsel in the Federal Trade Commission's attempt to prove that Famous Players and subsidiary organizations are operating in restraint of trade rounding up witnesses to help prove the Government's trust allegation, the last few days have apparently failed in deliver testimony. Iniminating to Famous the last few days sessions have developed into a histrionic routine, and yesterday after the brief testimony of Robert Lieber, president of First National, the hearing was adjourned until 10:30 Monday.

Lieber On Stand
Lieber testified that the principal reason for his becoming one of the original Frist National franchise holders was to insure getting a supply of pictures for his Circle Theater at Indianapolis. He said that he was partly influenced by Paramount's demand that exhibitors showing the Paramount brand contract for 52 pictures a year. "I wanted to pick out my own pictures," he said. He said he was first approached with regard to First National's organization by J. D. Williams, but couldn't recall whether or not Paramount's early honorary and advisory relationship wasn't first approached.

Lieber recalled a meeting at Zukor's country place attended by himself, Zukor, H. D. H. Connick, S. R. Arthur, Loney, H. M. Blank in 1921. The meeting, he said, was merely to discuss the depressed and nervous condition of the film industry, and to call a meeting of the Famous Players theatres being First National's sub-franchise holders, but Lieber replied that the question of the meeting was not taken up.

The witness persisted that the meeting was purely perfunctory and rather than a meeting of picture business was discussed.

Lieber said that his duties as president of First National at the outset of that organization's activities were chiefly honorary and advisory, but the executive phase of operations being handled by J. D. Williams and Harry Schwab on Williams' theory was "bigger and better" picture firm. In response to Swaine's cross question as to the percentage of First National pictures shown at the Circle Theater in Indianapolis, the witness answered that he did not know the percentage of First National pictures shown at the Circle Theater in Indianapolis, the witness answered that he did not know the percentage of First National pictures shown at the Circle Theater in Indianapolis.

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice Ford has granted the application of the Michi- gan Motion Picture Co. to restrain the Precision Machine Co. from binding a contract with the plaintiff has the right to sell Simplex projectors exclusively in Michigan until next fall.

In the suit of Frank G. Hall against the Penn Import & Export Co., to restrain the defendant from prosecut- ing suit against him for $67,000 on notes of the Hallmark Pictures, Supreme Court Justice Lehman has denied the application with permis- sion to renew it after Hall has filed a new complaint. The court said that the complaint in the case fails to show that Hall has a defense to the action on the notes. Hall con- tends that the defendant agreed to accept $15,000 in full payment of the claim, but that if the agreement of settlement was without any consideration it would not be the basis of any equitable rights of the plaintiff, "however unconscion- able the behavior of these defendants may be."

A default judgment for $7,194 has been filed in the Supreme Court for Frederic E. Klein against the Zora Realty Co., a dummy corporation for Patrick A. Powers, in which name he took title to the Robertson-Cole building when he bought it last June at the same time that he took title to the personal assets of Robertson-Cole under the name of F. B. O. Klein alleged that Powers agreed to find a buyer for the building at $75,000 only, but that when he induced Arthur Greenbaum and Nathan Wilson, to take it on the terms offered, the property was withdrawn from the market and he lost $7,750 in commis- sions. Powers was also named as a defendant because the pigrers were not served on him and the corporation did not defend the action.

Antonio Moreno has returned to the coast where he will play opposite Nola Negri in "The Spanish Dancer."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Stuart Stages "Old Fiddler's Contest"

St. Louis—Herschel Stuart of the Missouri hooked-up with the Times on an old fiddler's contest to be staged at the theater May 14. The winner will represent the city at a state-wide contest to be staged at Paris, Mo., in June.

Tag Day, Popular Exploitation

Greensburg, Pa.—During the recent run of "Gimmie," at the Strand, a tag day was launched by the management as an exploitation tie-up for the film.

2,000 special tags, bearing the word "Gimmie," were distributed by school children, giving a tag day effect. A package campaign also was using the production up with local events.

Free Display At Na'f Perfume Show

Joe Weil and Harry Ormiston cooperated with the Delica Laboratories for a tie-up at the National Perfume show which just closed at the 71st Regiment Armory. A 40 x 60 painting on "The Abyssmal Brute" was planted at the Delica booth in the center of the hall. A sign reading "No Wonder Reginald Denny was infatuated!" She uses Delica Brown" tied up the picture with the toilet preparation. A 3-sheet cut out of Priscilla Dean was used on the opposite side of the booth. A series of 8 x 10 photos in "The Flint" completed the display, and advance teases heredals on the "Abyssmal Brute" were distributed with samples of the preparation.

"Mad Love" and "Gimmie" On One Bill

Providence—"Mad Love" and "Gimmie" were booked for a double bill at the Victory and were put over through the exploitation staged by Buddy Stuart, assisted by Harry Cruil.

A street ballyhoo was made by taking the 24-sheet poster of each production and placing them on the sides of a large truck. Heralds for both pictures were placed in various stores and restaurants throughout Providence and the famous Boston Store agreed to place heralds in each package done up. A tie-up was made with the Waldorf, Astor and Belmarae Lunch rooms, heralds were distributed there. The Narragansett, the Dreyfus and the cigar stands in the Biltmore Hotel also used heralds. Eight newboys inserted the heralds in their newspapers in return for passes to the pictures. "Gimmie" buttons were distributed to the students of the technical high school and at the Summers Street high school were engaged to help distribute buttons at the schools and practically every newboy in the city wore a button.

For "The Flame of Life"

Topeka—Attached to every cigar lighter, or placed on the counter at cigar stands was a stunt of E. D. Kellmann, manager of the Grand. The card read: "The Flame of Life" is Grand at the Grand. See it.

Decorate Lobby With Stars

Johnston, Pa.—Manager W. F. Bittner of the Cambria, made valuable use of the 24-sheet posters for "The Strangers' Banquet" as an exploitation feature. He cut out the heads of the 23 stars, used as a border around the poster and pasted each one on star shaped beaver board cut-outs. These "stars within a star" were hung on wires in the lobby and, coupled with a six sheet cut-out, enlargments and frames of stills, they gave the theater a very attractive appearance.

News Clippings on Tour

Erie, Pa.—The Perry theater sold Pola Negri first and "Bella Donna" incidentally in its exploitation for that picture. Manager Nate Wagner and A. Mike Vogel, faced over a four-panel three-sheet board and pasted up all newspaper clippings of Pola Negri's arrival in America, that could be found.

The usual place for such a display is the lobby, but they engaged a man to stand or the box-like contrivance and hold it through the streets. He stopped at various intersections, did a little spiel, and soon had a crowd trying to read the clippings. The police were instructed not to see him. The song "Bella Donna" now in the music stores brought six big windows for the theaters. Four windows were secured for the novel, and the managers of two of the stores were given fan photos to hand out with each purchase.

Screen Tests Exploit "Souls For Sale"

Portland, Ore.—Manager Paul Noble, of the Liberty, stopped traffic with a street ballyhoo when he played "Souls For Sale," and put over a double-truck tie-up with the Oregonian.

Noble announced that in connection with the showing of the picturization of a star's life, he would extend to 30 girls the opportunity of having screen tests made, to determine their fitness for the screen. A truck company furnished a truck to advertise the stunt.

A director and cameraman were obtained from Premium Pictures. Four Kleig lights and a Warnar spot were also placed on the truck, with the camera. The truck was covered with banners announcing "Souls For Sale," and the screen tests which were made the day of the opening in front of the house.

Right Down the Line

1919—St. Louis—a handful of exhibitors. The Film Daily (then Wid's) printed a "special" right in St. Louis.

1920—Chicago—a real crowd of real exhibitors. The Film Daily (then Wid's) printed a "special" right in Chicago.

1920—Cleveland—several hundred exhibitors. The Film Daily (then Wid's) printed a "special" right in Cleveland.

1921—Minneapolis—several thousand exhibitors. The Film Daily (then Wid's) printed a "special" right in Minneapolis with a printer's strike on and the mercury about 100 in the shade.

1922—Washington—several thousand exhibitors. The Film Daily was again on the job, printing right in Washington.

And now comes Chicago again—week of May 21. In the Coliseum. You'll find the little old paper published right on the ground. And if you see a live wire who reads anything else during the convention, tag and label him. His first name will be Unusual.

Do you know a better "buy" to reach those who attend the convention—as well as the rest of the country?

Some Inside Stuff

Relative to the Making of "The Covered Wagon"—How This Big Picture Happened

It is pretty well conceded that "The Covered Wagon" is one of the greatest pictures made. Not only in this country, but in the world. One of the best posted men in production—not identified with Famous—is authority for the statement that it is the greatest picture ever made.

And here, for the first time, are some interesting facts relative to the production—not furnished by the publicity department of Famous—and, in fact, rather difficult to obtain.

You might not believe it, but originally "The Covered Wagon" was intended as a vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. James Cruze was scheduled to direct it. And Cruze was worried, because he could see difficulties in making the picture without spending over $100,000—which was all that had been allotted for the production. So Charley Eyton, business manager of the Lasky studio, Hollywood, was all upset when he visited Jesse Lasky to inform him that Cruze wanted to use 25 or 30 wagons in the production and wanted other do-does that would block making the picture for the estimated cost.

Now it happened that Lasky had read the Hough story and was enthused over the possibilities of the production. So when Eyton delivered his message, Lasky had Cruze come to his office. He told Cruze to forget Minter and the story as a Minter story. "Get rid of her in some way," said Lasky, "and don’t bother about 40 wagons. If we are going to make this picture make it as Hough intended his story. Have as many wagons as will go into the camera eye. Make it impossible to see the last one. And when you come to the river fording don’t fake it—do it. Show it. In detail. Have the buffalo hunt. Have the Indian fight. Make it big. Don’t try to make it for $100,000; spend $300,000, or more if you have to. But make it big; make it right."

Cruze left the office wondering if he was dreaming—wondering what had happened. It was the first time, so far as he could recall, that any director had been given orders to go ahead, without regard to cost, at the plant. He was almost in a daze. But he went ahead. And then, as Lasky admits to some friends, he saw dollars fade away in a manner that he never dreamed of. The $300,000 mentioned was spent before the picture was well under way, $500,000 was crossed, then six, seven, eight, and finally the picture was completed.

The editorial board of the studio sat in to see what had been done. Along it rolled, until suddenly it came to an end. "For God’s sake," yelled Hector Turnbull, "how do they get that way? You can’t stop as this is. We’ve got to take them to Oregon; not leave them on the way. We’ve no finish to this. It’s all wrong," Lasky agreed. But how to finish it was a problem. Few of the cast were still with Famous. Kerrigan was working on another picture; Torrence was in another studio. The locations necessary were far away. But Lasky was undeterred; he got on the phone and explained his difficulty to each producer who had the various actors under contract. High powered racing cars were pressed into service. Lasky agreed not to keep his borrowed stars for more than two working days. And on a Friday night Kerrigan, Torrence and the rest were whisked away over the mountains, and the cameras ground all Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and late Monday night the stars were whisked back again to Hollywood, to take up their work with the various companies where they were engaged. But Cruze had developed the finish, just as it is, Oregon Trail, gold mining in California and all.

And so, while Jimmy Cruze deserves tremendous credit for the great picture, in fairness to Jesse Lasky, and his organization, all this should be known.

Gladys Walton in Typical Role That Will Please a Good Majority

Gladys Walton in “CROSSED WIRES” Universal

DIRECTOR .......................... King Baggot
AUTHOR ............................. King Baggot
SCENARIO BY ....................... Hugh Hoffman
CAMERAMAN ......................... Ben Kline
AS A WHOLE...Farce that will please star's following and has what is recognized as good audience appeal

STORY......Contains a lot of improbabilities but it all goes to make up a picture that will go well with a big majority

DIRECTION......Good for the most part, although exaggerates on some points and allows star to overact her characterization

PHOTOGRAPHY ...................... First rate
LIGHTINGS ............................ Standard
STAR...........Well suited to this role and handles it very well except when she overacts

SUPPORT......Good; includes George Stewart, lead; Lillian Langdon, Tom Guise, Kate Price, Eddie Gribbon and others

EXTERIORS .......................... None
INTERIORS ............................ All right

DETAIL......Suitable; occasional comedy bits too slap-stick

CHARACTER OF STORY....Telephone girl breaks into society by side door but comes out with a rich husband

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........4,705 feet

In line with Gladys Walton’s recent pictures Universal is now releasing “CROSSED WIRES,” a King Baggot story and production, that presages the star in another of her typical characterizations, the sort that pleases her admirers and a good majority of screen “fans” on the whole.

A more critical, or the so-called high-brow audience, probably wouldn’t find much entertainment in the highly farcical theme which Baggot has devised chiefly for the exploitation of Gladys Walton and to present her in the sort of role and atmosphere to which she is best suited, for she certainly does a flapper characterization splendidly. In this the star is inclined to overact especially where she manages to secure an invitation to a social affair and appears at the party in her “borrowed feathers.” Of course this isn’t likely to annoy her admirers in the least and they’ll get a lot of enjoyment out of the way she maneuvers the whole matter of breaking into society.

The improbabilities of this and other situations will also be overlooked for the sake of the amusement they afford. The complications that ensue following Kitty’s visit to the home of the rich Bellamys contain plenty of laughs and the general misunderstanding which leads Kitty’s Irish parents to accuse the elder Bellamy of white slavery and Kitty of gross misconduct will prove thoroughly amusing to Miss Walton’s following and they’ll enjoy the performances of Kate Price and Robert Daly as her mother and father respectively.

Director Baggot injects plenty of the right sort of atmosphere and his opening sequence gets the picture off to an interesting start. It deals with the occupation of the heroine Kitty and shows her manipulating the plugs at a telephone exchange and airing her ambitions regarding an entrance into society. The interest is well sustained and there is a fairly exciting climax with the inevitable happy ending.

Eddie Gribbon has a character part that he plays very well and in typical “hard boiled” fashion, although Baggot allows him to overact occasionally. The cast is first rate and includes besides those mentioned George Stewart, as the rich young Bellamy, who Kitty finally wins in spite of his mother’s hope for a social alliance; Lillian Langdon, and Tom Guise as Stewart’s father who manages Kitty’s escape after her true identity is discovered.

Will Amuse Your Patrons and Should Be Easy to Get Them Interested

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

More exhibitors cater to people who prefer the sort of entertainment contained in “CROSSED WIRES” than to the class that probably wouldn’t concede it good entertainment or amusement, so there should be a big enough market for it. If you have played any of the star’s previous pictures and found that your folks liked her, you can give them this one and feel sure they’ll be satisfied.

Miss Walton appears in the kind of role they like to find her in and you can tell them this time she is a telephone operator who aspires to a social life. Let them know she goes out to win a rich husband and does. The title suggests easy exploitation and might readily be used to advantage if you have a telephone list, by calling your patrons and saying, “Excuse it, please, just ‘CROSSED WIRES’ following the stunt with the announcement of the showing.

Impressive Presentation But Too Much Footage

"THE PRODIGAL SON"
Stoll Production—Release undetermined
DIRECTOR .............................................. A. E. Coleby
AUTHOR ............................................. Sir Hall Caine
SCENARIO BY ........................................ A. E. Coleby
CAMERAMAN ................................. Not credited
AS A WHOLE...Impressive presentation of Hall Caine’s forceful story with the interest somewhat lessened because of length STORY......A strongly dramatic story, considered Hall Caine’s masterpiece, given fine production DIRECTION......Very good on the whole; cutting makes continuity poor at times
PHOTOGRAPHY ......................... Very good
LIGHTINGS ................................. All right PLAYERS........An entire English cast very well chosen in the main EXTERIORS......Unusually fine; include shots in Iceland, Paris and Nice
INTERIORS ........................................ Suitable
DETAIL ........................................ Entirely too much CHARACTER OF STORY......Tragedy results because of faithless husband whose brother sacrifices his entire life for the other’s happiness
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......About 10,000 feet

When Stoll Films of London made “The Prodigal Son,” one of the greatest of Hall Caine’s works, popular twenty years ago, it was expected to be a big picture. It is, but its tremendous length and tiresome detail plus the cutting necessitated to bring it down to the length of an evening’s entertainment has resulted somewhat disastrously for the production.

The film was released in London in two sections shown on succeeding nights. As presented here it is complete in a ten-reel version. The story, which was tremendously full of detail, has been followed closely and the finished result is a production that in spite of its excellent presentation and many dramatic climaxes wearies by the vast amount of footage. The American editors have made the mistake of trying to clip scenes instead of removing entire sequences. This helps little, and at times proves annoying. There is no relief, not a laugh, which adds to the somberness of the production.

The exteriors throughout are exceedingly good. There are numerous fine locations, including some splendid shots in Paris, one in particular showing the exterior and interior of the famous Church of the Madeleine, another shows the River Seine with the Eiffel Tower looming in the distance, and still another the Casino at Nice. Many scenes taken in Iceland, a new location for the setting of a screen story, are also particularly interesting and beautiful.

The players on the whole are exceedingly sincere and the work of Stewart Rome as the elder brother is genuine and forceful. Louise Conti, as the mother, is not particularly well-suited. Colette Brettel is sweet as the wife and later her daughter.

The first half of the picture seems, in spite of its less dramatic scenes, to be more interestingly presented than the latter half, which is inclined to jump over great spaces of time with only a title; for instance, after Oscar escapes from the Casino where he has won illegally at baccarat, you do not see him again for sixteen years, and then he is scarcely recognizable. The ending is too long dragged out, but has been given the necessary happy touch with the saving of the old farm from the sheriff by means of the money left by the unrecognized prodigal son.

Might Prove a Good Attraction If Cut—Be Careful

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Those who like a strongly dramatic story with a moral may be well pleased with this, and those who desire something different in atmosphere and locations may find this entirely satisfying.

It is a really big picture handled in a way that will impress and after it has been cut from its present tiring length it might prove an excellent attraction. Feature the fact that it is the first picturization of the popular novel, and has been made abroad on the actual locations mentioned in the story. The cast contains no names known here, but you can promise some very good dramatic work.

This picture was made on a large and probably expensive scale and if and when released may be brought to you on a high valuation. Because of this you had better make certain of seeing this before you finally complete negotiations.
Interesting Crook Melodrama and Romance Combination in This

Shirley Mason in “LOVEBOUND”

FOX

DIRECTOR.................................... Henry Otto

STORY...... An agreeably combined melodrama and romance that will be pleasing to average crowd

DIRECTION........ Effective on the whole; keeps picture down to right length with adequately sustained interest

PHOTOGRAPHY ........................... Standard
LIGHTINGS ................................. All right

STAR........ Pleasing in a role that suits her particular style of playing

SUPPORT...... A good cast including Albert Roscoe, Richard Tucker, Joseph Girard, Edward Martindale and Fred Kelsey

EXTERIORS... Beach sequence and dream bits good
INTERIORS ................................. Appropriate
DETAIL ................................. Satisfactory

CHARACTER OF STORY.... Girl involved in jewel theft marries district attorney who forgives her when identity is discovered

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION......... 4,407 feet

There is one fine thing about this latest Shirley Mason picture that deserves commendation right off, and that is the idea of getting away from a highly annoying and aggravating twist which usually follows as a climax to a story of this order. When the intended fiancee tries her best to tell her future husband something, and he refuses to listen and later learns of something in his wife’s past, he usually casts her off in dramatic fashion and takes at least two reels more to reach a reconciliation. This is what generally happens, but someone deserves credit for side-stepping the regular routine and having the husband immeately forgive the unhappy wife and help her forget the past. This is the best point of George Scarborough’s otherwise familiar story.

But in spite of a more or less trite plot, “Lovebound” is an interesting little picture with enough good twists to make it satisfying. The romance and melodrama is nicely combined and with the possible exception of a far-fetched bit or two, is sufficiently plausible. One twist that adds a clever touch is the theft of jewels by a clever scheme consisting of carefully laid plans.
The crook, who in a way to command the aid of a young girl whose father is in power, persuades her to act the part of his wife with the explanation that it is to secure money promised by an uncle when he is married. On the other hand he gets a jeweler to bring stones to his room, and when the “wife” enters pretends the purchase is to be a present for her and secludes the stones in a desk drawer. The crook excuses himself for a minute and later it is discovered the jewels are gone, having been taken from the desk through a hole bored from the next room, the desk containing no back. This bit is clever and very nicely put over.

The romantic element is prominent throughout with heroine Shirley in love with a district attorney, in whose office she works as secretary. You can depend upon the star to make the most of a role of this sort, and it is the type of story that is well suited to her personality and wins the admiration of her following.
Albert Roscoe plays opposite.

Story: Besse Belwyn seeks to protect her father from an old accomplice, Meredith, just released from prison. She agrees to help the man in what she believes to be an innocent adventure, but finds she plays an important part in the theft of valuable jewels.
Besse marries the district attorney who refuses to listen to her confession. How Meredith is later killed in an effort to escape after an attempted extortion from Besse, discloses her part in the incident of the past, but Meredith’s death closes it and her husband forgives her.

A Good Average Attraction With Pleasing Possibilities

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is an interesting little feature with a pleasing star—a combination that should make it a good attraction for the average audience. Where the star is a favorite it should be very easy to get them in with promises of a pleasing picture in which the star does good work and is well suited. The interest is well sustained and the story sufficiently fast moving to hold them until the end.

Use the star’s name prominently, and since the title does not indicate the exact nature of the story, it might be well to use some explanatory catchlines.
They may expect a more sugar-coated theme than the title suggests. Stills of the star in the lobby will attract and you can tell your women folks she wears some attractive costumes.
A Poorly Prepared Continuity the Biggest Handicap Here

Clara Kimball Young in
"CORDELIA THE MAGNIFICENT"
Harry Garson Prod.—Metro

DIRECTOR ................. Geo. Archibald
AUTHOR ...................... Leroy Scott
SCENARIO BY ................ Frank S. Beresford
CAMERAMAN ................ Charles Richardson
AS A WHOLE.............. Doesn't make a very attractive entertainment; too much contrary business and lack of sustained interest

STORY.................. Observes very poor continuity which is chief cause of picture's inability to hold attention DIRECTION............. Ordinary; has allowed too many entrances and exits and otherwise hasn't used players to best advantage
PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Good
LIGHTINGS ................. Good
STAR....... May please a loyal following but is beginning to lose her prestige in this type of society atmosphere SUPPORT ............. Create a vague idea of society folks; all very stiff in appearance; includes Huntly Gordon, Lloyd Whitlock and Lewis Dayton; Jacqueline Gadsdon, a newcomer, the most at ease
EXTERIORS .................... Suitable
INTERIORS ................. Some look real DETAIL .................... Far too many sub-titles
CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Society girl forced to go to work is accused of blackmail but later is cleared by man she marries

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 6,800 feet
This society blackmail story by Leroy Scott, adapted by Frank S. Beresford, doesn't make a particularly attractive screen story as presented, probably because it is more complicated than it's situations warrant. Beresford's continuity provides for increasing suspense and under Archibald's direction this is secured through piling on the complications, injecting mysterious touches and misleading bits to throw the spectator off the track of a possible clue. As, for instance, in the early reels the very mysterious butler is quoted as saying something regarding claiming the child, identified as an adopted French orphan, as his son. This leads to the suspicion that the butler is the husband of the mistress of the house and that the boy is their offspring.

The trouble with "Cordeila the Magnificent" is that there is too "much ado about nothing" in it. There is too extensive mystery for the amount of surprise that the denouement contains. The spectator is forced to wade through so much detail indicative of a deep-dyed mystery that when the climax is finally reached and the whole thing explained, you are inclined to feel cheated or at least unduly aroused.

Scott's theme, at best, is a weak concoction with a false society atmosphere and with many improbabilities including the twist which makes an apparently intelligent woman the tool of a shyster lawyer whose real business is blackmail and involves her in a highly intricate scheme to obtain money from a society woman with a "skeleton in her closet." A very poor continuity is one reason for the lack of sustained interest and it also provides for a poor development. The action relies almost solely upon continuous sub-titles for explanation. Cutting would improve the film considerably for the amount of material certainly does not warrant the almost seven reels that it has been accorded.

Clara Kimball Young, in the title role, makes the most of a fairly colorless part and a vehicle that doesn't provide her with exceptional opportunities. The star isn't always photographed to best advantage nor does she wear gowns most becoming to her. The supporting cast is fair.

Value Depends Upon Star's Popularity or Patrons' Demands

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The entertainment value of "Cordeila the Magnificent" depends upon two things: the popularity of the star and the possibility of pleasing your audience with a picture that is about average. Clara Kimball Young's latest attraction can be greatly improved by cutting but in its present excess footage state can hardly be relied upon to satisfy a clientele at all critical. They are bound to lose interest through a poorly constructed plot and they will be disappointed with the denouement.

However, you know best what you can do with it and should act accordingly. It is unfortunate that the director and scenario writer missed on the story because it might have made a fairly interesting picture with a more careful handling. For the star's admirers it may prove satisfactory and catchlines will do to let them know what it is about.
Not a Very Good Story and Star Overacts Most of the Time

Herbert Rawlinson in
"FOOLS AND RICHES"
Universal

DIRECTOR ...................... Herbert Blache
AUTHOR ......................... Frederick Jackson
SCENARIO BY.....Chas. Kenyon and Geo. C. Hull
CAMERAMAN ..................... Allen Davey

As a whole...A rather familiar brand of picture with some regulation "movie" situations; will do if they aren't too particular

Story...Gives star role that provides him with sort of things he appears to glory in doing direction...Doesn't conceal a weak plot but production is adequate and cast satisfactorily handled

photography .................. All right
lightings ...................... Standard star......Cannot seem to get away from overdoing pet mannerisms; works them overtime in this support......Katherine Perry pretty but far too unimportant in role of Nellie Blye; Doris Pawn and Arthur S. Hull all right as clever grafters and Tully Marshall the best in the picture, but exits after the first reel or so exteriors ...................... Few

interiors ...................... All right detail ......................... Suffices character of story......Son loses fortune left to him by father, but after he makes good finds that father has provided for son's expected losses

length of production.......4,904 feet

Given a role that provides him with an opportunity to beat the villain at his own game, Herbert Rawlinson can be depended upon to get himself thoroughly excited about it and although this runs true to form for the regulation hero-villain plot, it supplies the star with just the kind of playing that he shouldn't have been given a chance to do because he is bound to overact. Rawlinson goes in for this "heavy" stuff to a degree and the more he bulges his eyes and the more he heaves his chest the less convincing his acting is. Just why they insist upon giving him material that allows him to overact to his own and the picture's disadvantage isn't apparent.

It couldn't have given Frederick Jackson much trouble to think up this typical buy-in-the-stock-and-ruin-the-hero plot which consists of all thoroughly popular situations of a regular formula brand. And even though Director Blache gives it an adequate production and there is a satisfactory cast, "Fools and Riches" never rises to any heights as screen entertainment. It would be difficult for the director to disguise a plot of such a simple movie-concoction order, so the development holds no surprises.

The on-looker knows from the minute hero gets control of his father's money that his pal, and the girl who pretends to be his fiancee, have it all cut and dried to fleece him. In fact they planned it even before the old man dropped off. But to counter-balance hero's weakness with mere hundreds of thousands you have the plain, faithful girl who you know will be the inevitable life-saver in this case. Everything happens along just as you expect and the last straw in this hokum affair is the elegant surprise when hero is handed a letter which announces that his father had provided for the present emergency by putting the greater part of his fortune in the care of his attorney to be given to the son when he had learned his lesson, also that the pearls hero bestowed upon his intended fiancee were imitation and the attorney has the real ones. You can't help but give the old gentleman credit for the foresight he showed.

Tully Marshall, as this extraordinary father, is by far the most interesting and capable of the players, but it just happens that he has to die in the first or second reel. Katherine Perry is good to look at but you don't get the chance often enough.

You Can't Make Any Promises But It May Do If They Like Rawlinson

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who think that their patrons will accept this latest Herbert Rawlinson picture and be satisfied with it, can safely book it, but you know best whether or not a story of as purely "movie" formula as this will please them. If they are at all critical it won't possibly do. Nor can you make any promises for the picture except to use the title with catchlines.

If it happens that they like Rawlinson use his name prominently and you can mention Doris Pawn and Katherine Perry although the latter is not especially well known to the fan crowd. There isn't much action in the picture for you to talk about but it may be that stills in the lobby indicative of the parties staged by the spendthrift hero might get them interested.
Tom Mix In A Melodrama That Has In Action What It Lacks in Logic

INTERIORS ..................... All right
DETAIL ...................... Suffices

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Cowboy runs into series of complications that take him to China after he saves the life of a rich man

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 4,608 feet

The Tom Mix fans are due for a surprise when they see his latest, "Stepping Fast." The picture is wholly unlike the usual Mix western. It lives up to the title in fine style, and contains a lot of situations that provide enough action to keep it going but they are very far-fetched and the development consists of coincidence, vague improbabilities and is very much after the fashion of a serial—episodic and with many anti-climaxes.

The theme is essentially melodramatic with the customary incident including mystery bits, varied action that embraces fights, escapes, rescues, chases and the usual combinations that go toward supplying the excitement necessary for meller. All of this gives the star the right sort of opportunities and regardless of the lack of logic and serious intent, his admirers will undoubtedly be pleased with the film. Mix is kept busy throughout chiefly in fighting off the enemy, or rather enemies, since there are three of them. But picture heroes never play a losing game so it doesn't matter how many villains the story contains, Mix handles them easily. The star still retains the gloves, only removing them in one scene.

At the outset you expect another western but the story soon takes a new turn with the introduction of a Chinaman who is in search of a treasure possessed by the man whose life hero saved in the desert. This is the beginning of "Stepping Fast" with the action starting right off and continuing when the location switches to China. They do a lot of moving around in the picture with much of the excitement provided by incidents of a familiar variety. There is a good fight in a Chinese shop with the employment of trap doors and other instruments of suspense and action that are of a serial variety. The action really consists of one long pursuit with first the hero seeming victor and then the villainous band, with the near-victor alternating with each succeeding episode.

The development is necessarily episodic but for those who find this sort of material entertaining, it will do very nicely. The supporting cast is good and the production adequate.

All Right For Star's Following Or An Average "Fan" Audience.

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In the event that Tom Mix is a popular drawing card at your theater you may find it profitable to have a picture with him in a different sort of role. Probably it will please his admirers to find him in a different atmosphere for a change. You can promise a picture full of action and thrills and for the right audience, "Stepping Fast" should prove a good number. Second and third class houses should do a first rate business with the attraction thought it isn't suitable for a first class clientele.

Use Mix's name and be sure to let them know his latest is a mystery melodrama and not a western. For big moments talk about the fight in the Chinese den, the final chase and the subsequent deaths of the three villains. The title can be exploited with the star's name to good advantage.
Some Laughs in Latter Reels But Not Enough To Be Always Amusing

Walter Hiers in
"SIXTY CENTS AN HOUR"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................... Joseph Henabery
AUTHOR ........................ Frank Condon
SCENARIO BY ................. Grant Carpenter
CAMERAMAN ................... Faxon Dean

As a Whole......Contains some amusement toward the close that may send them out satisfied

Story......Pretty slight and very slow in drawing laughs but develops into fair comedy after a while

Direction....Might have gotten it off to a better start but otherwise is fairly satisfactory; some touches poor

Photography .................. Good
Lightings ........................ All right

Star......Needs good situations to register laughs; not a knock-out comedian

Support......Jacqueline Logan deserving of a better chance; an average supporting company

Exteriors ........................ Suitable
Interiors......Not many necessary, except soda fountain

Detail .......................... Fair

Character of Story......Soda dispenser, held for robbing bank, turns in thieves, wins big reward and fulfills long cherished desires

Length of Production.........5,632 feet

It is possible that there are those who may be amused by the antics of Walter Hiers as the ambitious soda dispenser in "Sixty Cents an Hour," but they'll certainly have to be easy to please and particularly mirthful if they find enough laughs in this one to make them thoroughly happy. This latest Hiers starring vehicle is surely a weak enough comedy piece as far as genuine laughs and original situations are concerned. It has a few fairly good spots but they are far in the minority and at too great a distance from each other to tide over the interest. A laugh now and another in ten or fifteen minutes hardly makes for a satisfactory comedy entertainment.

It is hardly the fault of Henabery for not having secured better results because Frank Condon's story was too big a handicap. For a two-reeler it would have sufficed splendidly and proven thoroughly enjoyable. It hasn't feature possibilities and necessarily lacks feature requirements. Henabery does succeed in making it more amusing toward the close, but it takes so long to reach this part that folks are pretty well discouraged waiting for the laughs. The idea of a fat man continually losing his garter fails to make the picture hilarious, and the continual devouring of sodas by Hiers will have the same effect upon the audience as it is supposed to have on the star—the sight of one eventually makes him sick.

The plot itself is especially slight and provides little in the way of strong comedy situations except toward the end when hero is suspected of having robbed the bank and kidnapped the president's daughter. Then it does get fairly comical and the chase contains some laughs that register, particularly where they shoot at the back of the flivver in which hero is riding and the coins start dropping all over the street with the whole town turning out to pick them up. More of this business would have made "Sixty Cents An Hour" a much better attraction.

Hiers strives hard enough to be amusing but he needs good material. At that he'll probably never be a Lloyd, a Chaplin or a Keaton. The cast is adequate with Jacqueline Logan featured in a part that doesn't give her a very fair chance.

May Do If They Are Satisfied With a Laugh Now and Then

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Maybe they'll be satisfied with "Sixty Cents An Hour." Maybe they won't. It depends very much upon the mood they are in and how easy it is for them to laugh. There aren't enough real laughs to make the picture a genuine comedy entertainment and the few good bits that it does contain are so far apart that their effect is considerably lessened by the footage that separates them.

If it happens that they showed their approval of Walter Hiers as a star through their acceptance of his initial starring picture, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," it should be easy enough to get them interested in "Sixty Cents An Hour." The duration of Hiers' reign in stardom would seem to depend, however, on the ability of Paramount's scenario department to provide him with sure-fire material.
Another “Boston Blackie” Story That Should Satisfy

William Russell in “BOSTON BLACKIE”
Fox

DIRECTOR ....................... Scott Dunlap
AUTHOR ....................... Jack Boyle
SCENARIO BY ..................... Paul Schofield
CAMERAMAN ...................... George Schneiderman

AS A WHOLE......... A crook melodrama that should find favor where they like this type of story or where star is a favorite

STORY......... Adaptation of Jack Boyle’s “The Water Cross,” another Boston Blackie story. Centers mainly around inhuman form of punishment supposedly inflicted in prison

DIRECTION.........All right: keeps action quite tense throughout. A few comedy touches would have helped

PHOTOGRAPHY ................ Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS ...................... Good

STAR ..................... Should satisfy his admirers

SUPPORT .......... Adequate; includes Eva Novak as the girl; Frank Brownlee the villainous warden; Otto Matieson, Spike Robinson, Frederick Es-melton

EXTERIORS .................. Suitable
INTERIORS .................. All right

DETAIL .................. Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY .... A crook, released, tries to effect reform of methods used in prison.
He is falsely accused of murder and goes back to serve sentence, escapes and is saved by confession of real murderer at last moment

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 4,522 feet

Exhibitors catering to a crowd with a preference for crook stories should have no difficulty in satisfying them with this latest William Russell picture which is an adaptation of one of Jack Boyle’s well-known “Boston Blackie” stories.

There have been several of the series made by different companies, among them being “A Face in the Fog,” with Lionel Barrymore, and “Missing Millions,” with Alice Brady. This one lets you know by its title just what kind of a picture it is.

Instead of a theft of jewels or money, however, this time the story deals with an inhuman method of punishment called “the water cross,” supposed to exist in the Wallace prison. According to Jack Boyle, the prisoner is chained to a wall while a high pressure hose projects water against him. A severe dose of this punishment so damages a man’s tissues as to cause death. The exact operation of the treatment is shown in all its detail and it may not be liked by some women.
In the earlier part of the film a boy, released from prison, comes home to die after being a victim of this treatment.

There is a good thrill in the situation in which Blackie, having “framed” it with the district attorney that he is to send him back to prison in order that he, Blackie, can get evidence against the inhuman warden. Benton, enters the attorney’s home by the window according to plan. He finds the attorney seated at his desk, dead. The detectives surrounding the house also according to previous plan, naturally arrest Blackie for murder.

The man-hunt with the warden and his men searching the hills for the escaped prisoners affords plenty of suspense that will satisfy those who like this sort of thing, and although the ending is trite, with the governor arriving in the nick of time with a pardon, it’s really what the crowd expects.

Russell’s admirers will, in all probability, be pleased with his work in this one. Eva Novak plays opposite the star in a well-suited role and the rest of the cast is satisfactory. There is a wonderful dog in many of the scenes that exhibits almost human intelligence and emotions.

Russell’s Name Should Help Plus That of Title

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If your crowd is right for this sort of a picture, you should do very well with this one. It isn’t staged in such a pretentious way as some of the other pictures dealing with the same central character, but that won’t make very much difference as far as the action is concerned. Be sure and mention Jack Boyle’s name in connection with the title. It will draw those who are interested and who have read the stories, which ran in the Cosmopolitan magazine, as well as those who saw any of the other pictures dealing with “Blackie’s” exploits.

Where the star has a good following play up his name. You can also mention that Eva Novak is in the cast.

“F. O. B.”—Hammons—Educational
Type of production ........................................... 2 reel comedy

Although some of the comedy in Lloyd Hamilton's latest offering is a trifle messy, there is also a good deal of really funny stuff, particularly in the last reel. The idea of flies using the horse's back for a toboggan slide may get by all right, but it was scarcely necessary to show a man catching flies and dropping the dead ones in a pile. Aside from this, however, there is plenty of good humor in the comedy, which should have no difficulty in getting over well, particularly where they like Hamilton. The scene in which he leaves home because his dog Eddy must go, is exceedingly well done, but the big laugh comes when he gets into the baggage car that is the temporary home of a gang of tramps. The things they do to the sweet young man will bring howls of laughter.

“The Gamblers”—Aesop Fable—Pathe
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel animated cartoon

There is a good bit of humor in this fable when all the animals although at first unwilling, finally succumb to the music of the dice thrown by Henry Cat. Farmer Al steals the dice and Henry plots to get even. He finally does, much to Farmer Al's chagrin, all of which is supposed to point to the moral that one should “never gamble in a hen house.” This should get over in fine shape particularly where they like this type of comedy.

“Between Showers”—Cameo—Educational
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel comedy

With the exception of one very funny new idea in the shape of a mail order cottage that warps when it rains, there isn’t a great deal of originality in “Between Showers,” but as a whole it is clean, breezy amusing stuff. Cliff Bowes has bought and furnished a home, and is looking for the girl. He finally finds her in the person of Virginia Vance and she takes her step-mother and small brother to inspect her new home. All goes well until it starts to rain and then the gables of the house flap madly in the wind while the rest of the cottage slowly loses its form until the floors develop hills and valleys and finally the entire structure collapses. An amusing comedy that should please the average audience.

“The Mouse-Catcher”—Aesop Film Fable—Pathe
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel animated cartoon

This time Paul Terry's animated animals are exceedingly amusing, and while the Fable seems to follow the story of the Pied Piper more than anything that Aesop wrote, the action is quick and the laughs numerous. Farmer Al Falfa's house is overrun with mice. They are so bold they even steal the cheese out of the traps with forks. Tom Cat appoints himself as the champion mouse catcher of the world and tries to lure them out with his musical flute but to no avail. Finally he secures a vacuum cleaner that catches everything in the house including the mice, but just as Farmer Al is congratulating Tom, the cleanser bursts, letting them all loose again.

“Wings of the Storm”—Range Rider Series—Pathe
Type of production ........................................... 2 reel western drama

Leo Maloney, the Ranger-hero of this popular series which he directs and writes in conjunction with Ford Beebe, is seen this time masquerading as an escaped convict. The story is well told with the directness usual to the series and will thoroughly entertain western-loving fans. This time there is a fight in the dark that runs for quite a bit of footage with the only light coming from lightning flashes and pistol shots. The girl is Josephine Hill, a pleasing addition.

“This Way Out”—Jack White—Educational
Type of production ...................................... 2 reel comedy

Directed by Roy Del Ruth and produced under the supervision of Jack White, this two reeler should thoroughly satisfy any audience and go particularly well in the Broadway houses. The opening is novel and consists of a flirtation between a man's suit of clothes and a lady's dress hanging on a clothes line. Then a little skirt appears and calls a large house-dress to see the flirtation. The house-dress grabs the suit by the collar and the scene continues with Billy Armstrong being yanked into the house by his wife. The next bit also contains a surprise. Cast out by his wife Armstrong is seen in a set that looks like a burlesque on the frozen north. Lige Conley, dressed as a cowboy tries to comfort him. Suddenly a nearby clump of trees part and disclose—the theater manager who tells the boys to get a move on and get the theater lobby fixed up in a hurry, because the owner is coming that evening. It's a real laugh, and there are others all the way through. Particularly funny is the scene in which the new film operator allows a cat to walk in front of the projector and the shadow is thrown on the screen of the theater, blotting out the picture. This is one that will more than please a critical audience.

“The Romance of Life”—Bray—Hodkinson
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel educational

It is a big task to deal in one short reel with the evolution of life on this planet from the earliest days, but that is what Bray has attempted to do, and the result is an extremely interesting reel. Of course it has been possible only to show a scene or two of each step in the evolution of the world, and many titles have been used to explain the different scenes. Some of the microscopic pictures of the first forms of life are exceedingly interesting and the entire reel presents its subject in an easily understandable form.

“Get Your Man”—Hal Roach—Pathe
Type of production ..................................... 1 reel comedy

Directed by George Jeske and featuring Paul Parrott this one reeler is a travesty on the trials of a Northwest Mounted policeman, who is sent to capture "Howling Hank," a cattle rustler. There are some real laughs in it and the photography is splendid, all the scenes taking place out of doors in the snow. Needless to say the hero finally "gets his man" and does it by making Hank chase him all over the world finally leading him into headquarters.
"The Lion's Mouse"...Marguerite Marsh, Wyndham Standing

HARRISON'S REPORTS March 31, 1922

"The Lion's "Mouse"...Marguerite Marsh, Wyndham Standing

A first-rate melodrama; the mixture of suspense, good direction and acting, and fast action may always be depended on to result in a picture that will thoroughly satisfy the majority of fans. "The Lion's Mouse" is no exception. Mary Cedelle, an English player, whose name occasionally appears with American artists, gives a clean-cut impersonation of the mouse's role. Any picture in which a young and attractive wife temporarily jeopardizes her marital happiness for the sake of either an unfortunate or erring brother is sure to win the audience's heartfelt sympathy. The heroine in this case, in her zeal to exculpate her brother from the trials of intestines and to maintain secrecy about the matter, is suspected by her husband of unfamiliness. But in the end, everything comes out as it should. Picture-goers who have an interest in the story and the material will doubtless be well pleased with the result.

Gentlemen:

In the Film Daily of May second we ran a page advertisement announcing that our Tut-Ankh-Amen picture, "THE IMAGE MAKER" was ready for screening for national distributors and state rights buyers. The number of responses received by us was indeed very gratifying and came from all branches of the industry including the most representative concerns.

The reason for this letter is, that since we are ready to make a kick when things go wrong we feel that a word of praise and encouragement would not be amiss when things go right.

Wishing you continued success, we are,

Very truly yours

Effective Heart Interest Should Make It Good Audience Picture

Robin's Pictures presents
"FOR YOU MY BOY"

Wm. J. H. Stone—President
Wm. L. Roubert—Manager
Dorothy Tew—First Assistant Manager

DISTRIBUTION TO
Wm. L. Roubert
Matty Roubert

STORY

Has appropriate heart interest and effective appeal although it is not particularly original.

DIRECTION
Usually satisfactory: toward the close some too much footage unsurfacing complications and bringing about happy ending.

PHOTOGRAPHY
All right.

STRAIGHT PLAYERS
Ben Lewis does the best work in role which he makes thoroughly convincing: capable of securing sympathy: Scholarly White adequate except when called upon for emotional bits: Matty Roubert good in short sequence: others: Leon Dean, Jean Armour, Gladys New, Franklin Harris and Scott Hines.

CHARACTER INTERIORS

Father of man sets him go to jail to protect name of former parent he believes to be his real father

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION
About 6,000 feet

"FOR YOU MY BOY" can readily be called a good box office picture for many exhibitions, in fact it contains the sort of audience appeal popular with the majority of picture goers and those who make up the biggest part of the picture going public. For such as the greatest number of exhibitors catering to this class desirable the production seems to have a favorable forecast. It contains a heart interest story, that, while not specifically original, has situations which secure the spectator's sympathy and in which the paternal instinct is made the proof of heart interest instead of the usual moral lesson.

The opening sequence in which a poor mail clerk relinquishes all claim to his infant son immediately gains a sympathy for him that is retained through what follows. Roubert has succeeded in keeping his story down to probabilities and with the exception of a few rather prominent bits of coincidence in the development his theme is logical and smoothly told.

Toward the close he does pile on some unnecessary complications by bringing back a character of the early reels who threatens him, now a respected citizen, with the exposure of his prison record. Of course this has a tendency to make him still more respected where he can confess that he served a jail sentence although innocent, to protect the man he believes to be his father. Except that this makes the conclusion slightly involved, and prolonging the ending a trifle, this sequence does complete every thread of the story and brings a satisfactory conclusion.

Roubert provides an appropriate production though an inexpensive one. The cast contains no well known players but Ben Lewis deserves special mention for the very painstaking performance which he offers to the father who offers his child for adoption. His work in the later reels is especially worth while. Young Matty Roubert does well as the boy.

Story: John Austin agrees never to claim his son, Jack, adopted by the rich Count Melville, as his own. Years later Jack is sent to prison for a theft committed by Melville who is killed before the theft is discovered. Jack accepts the guilt to protect the name of the man he believed to be his father. Upon his release he discovers that Austin, a trusted employee of Melville's has been defended by Austin's daughter, the real father. The reunion follows Jack's success in business and his marriage to his employer's daughter.

Story Will Please the Majority and Father Love Can Be Exploited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Exhibitors who know their folk like heart interest stories will surely be able to handle them with "FOR YOU MY BOY." To sell it in the story of a father who was forced to give his son away. You might make a special note of the fact that this is a father love theme and not a mother love story. The variation might prove particularly interesting as much as it is usually a case of mother love.

The title can be exploited effectively with catchcues such as "If your boy was motherless would you give him up to another who could give him the things you couldn't provide?" See what happens in "FOR YOU MY BOY" in which a father is confronted with this problem. If you showed "The Heritage" Roubert's last production, you might recall it. A poster display in the lobby should attract attention.

Chicago—The chief topic of the convention is just this: who will be the next president?

All other questions are, for the moment, of secondary interest. And there is a lot of real interest in the question of who will succeed Sydney S. Cohen, as head of the M. P. T. O. of A.

There are in the field W. A. Steffes of Minnesota, "Jim" Ritter of Michigan, Martin G. Smith of Ohio, F. J. McWilliams of Wis- consin, and among those who may develop strength are "Djinn" Harris of Pittsburgh and there is some talk of C. A. Lick of Ar- kansas and, despite his declarations that he is not a candidate, of Sydney S. Cohen.

Mrs. Wallace Reid supported by James Kirkwood, Bessie Love, George Hackathorne, Robert McKim, Claire McDowell, Victor Bateman and other notables who give a performance in "HUMAN WRECKAGE," never before seen on the screen. Entire world waiting for this picture des- tined to surpass anything in all motion picture history. Distributed by F. B. O.—Advrt.

RAINY FILM ABOLISHED
Exhibitors and Producers Enthralled
by the Dura Company's Method of Protecting Prints

Producers have spent for tunes to give the public the best screen results that money can buy. They select their story, their director, their cast; they build elaborate sets, in short, every detail of care and ingenuity is made to make a perfect picture. Finally the producer sees his picture on the screen and is delighted to find that result of his labors justified the enormous expenditure of money. The exhibitor with equal enthusiasm bought the picture. But on the first run showings the S. O. R. sign is ignored in the mad rush of the overflow attempting to gain admittance. Everyone is happy. The picture is called a “success.”

BUT: Every theatre does not have first run. The same prints are used for second, third, fourth and subsequent runs. The same print which held the audience spellbound with its exceptional photographic quality, soon becomes full of rain, dirt and old stains. It is full of jumps in action caused by the much much overlap due to broken perforations. Patrons lured into a theatre on a promise of a good show leaves dissatisfied. Some of them never to return. The exhibitor protests to the exchange. The exchange manager shrugs his shoulders, shrugging him into helpless. All the above is past history.

The Dura Film Protector Co., Inc., 220 and 42nd St., New York City, has perfected a method fully protected by patents to overcome all the faults mentioned. It has registered the word "Duraize" in the United States patent office as its trade name.

Duraize prints by applying a thin coating of celluloid over the enamel of new prints. This in no way impairs the photographic quality of the print, but on the contrary gives it a more brilliant appearance on the screen. The emulsion becomes so waterproof that the Duraize prints will not become "rainy."

Not only the perforations but the joins are greatly reinforced by the thin layer of celluloid.

Duraize film is oil-proof, and waterproof, and to clean it, is only necessary to use a damp sponge and a cloth moistened with cleaning fluid between re-winders.

The cost charged for Duraize prints is two dollars per reel. One day’s additional run will more than cover this cost. The exchange which accepts Duraize prints will have already added life to the film and will satisfy the exhibitor and his audience.

Hope to Keep Out “Steam Roller”

Seek Harmony
but that the convention would be very harmonious. He, therefore, referred the question to the League of Nations—one of his pet phrases.

Much depends, relative to the presidency, on the nature of the committees and how they work. One of the candidates unhesitatingly declared that he would be able to forecast by tonight what might be expected after the committee’s had been named.

The suggestion has been offered that to organize the committees properly that the best thing to do would be to name the president of each state organization on the committee on resolutions; and the vice-president on the committee on rules and the secretary of each state organization on the committee on credentials. This, it is said, would open the way to a “real” convention.

Much depends, it is also said, on the choice of the permanent chairman for the convention. Lick, of Arkansas, is being talked of as a good one, providing, of course, that he is not a candidate. The point made here is that no candidate nor any of his state delegates should be elected permanent chairman and that, if necessary, a good parliamentarian can be secured from outside the ranks of delegates. The suggestion has been offered that the president of the Kiwanis Club might easily serve. In other words, it is the apparent desire to keep organization or “steam roller” methods of procedure out of the convention.

If anything like this is attempted, the suggestion was made on Saturday that several state units might be expected to walk out of the gathering. That indicates the tempo of some of the visitors. Just how the New York delegation will vote is, of course, one of the absorbing topics of the moment.

Goldwyn is doing Big Things!
On Edge

(By wire from The Coliseum, Chicago)

Well, boys, you're here. We're here. The gang's all here. What are you going to do?

You might not know it—you might not believe it—but you're on the edge of the nicest can of dynamite that ever was used and if your aren't very careful it's liable to blow up. Somebody may lose a few arms and a couple of legs and go back to the worse—and some of you may not go home at all. If so far as your exhibitor organization is concerned—there may be none.

That's a nice pleasant thought for a Monday morning. Might be worse. But it's bad enough. Here are the facts:

You can go as far back as you want and you will find that exhibitor organizations have been formed, have functioned for a few years, and then something has happened. And then everything has gone to smash. And then a year or so later somebody starts something and you have another one rolling just the old way.

Right here in Chicago several years ago was started what is known to be the finest national exhibitor organization ever. What was the motive is at this moment incidental, but the national convention which followed the Chicago gathering made history. And it looked as though everything was set. And that always happened occurred again.

Today finds the national exhibitor organization facing the situation of what it intends doing and how it intends to finance which it intends to do.

If the constitution of the M. P. T. O. was to go into effect to-and the election was held late this afternoon, only a few would have the privilege of voting for a candidate. They only units that are paid up or rather were paid up to a few days ago.

Now isn't this a nice state of affairs?

No wonder the Michigan organization insists upon a financial gram to be determined upon before anything else happens, wonder that they insist that the incoming president have sufficient finances with which to operate.

A lot of things have been said and many more will be as to the traditions of the M. P. T. O., the leadership of Sydney. But this is certain—there isn't another exhibitor in this city who out of his own pocket would have financed this organization as he has done, taking the chance of getting it back in time, some time, some how.

This is all wrong. There is no reason why Sydney Cohen couldn't pay the check for exhibitors of this country. There is no reason why any one man should, because this sort of a condition always gets into an automatic method of operation. And this is not ended as a reflection nor a suggestion that Cohen has been erratic. But it is human nature that the man who foots the bill should have a lot to say and it is about time that one man and one man only gets footing the bill.

You're exhibitors. You have investments. Some of them are handy heavy. Sometimes your banker has something to say that isn't so sweet. You need an exhibitor organization. With one you're sunk. But if you can't have an exhibitor organization sufficiently financed to justify its existence, then on earth you expect to get one?

You have been shilly-shallying, fussing around, for the past few years. For what?
Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over.
Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

A Mad Love Sundae
Baltimore—An exploitation feature put across by Goldwynner Willie Robson for "Mad Love," at the Century is spreading throughout the country.
Robson induced the Hendler Creamery Co. to get up a window card, which was sent to local ice cream dealers using their product advertising the "Mad Love Sundae" during the showing. The creamery people also sent to the dealers the recipe for a "Mad Love Sundae." An account of the tie-up was sent to the Ice Cream Review which published the article.

Passes Attract Large Crowds
Mt. Vernon, Wash.—C. C. Ruth of the Mission tie-up with the Golden Rule department store for the run of "The Christian." The Mt. Vernon telephone directory was taken and names of 50 women selected at random. These names were written on 50 envelopes containing passes for the showing. The envelopes were then placed on the counters of the department store, and newspaper advertising invited the women to come to the store and see if they were among the lucky ones. The store had a special sale on the same day and through the tie-up attracted a great crowd.

"Youth Triumphant," the initial Victor B. Fisher production has been completed.

Sydney S. Cohen Predicts Ruin for Thousands of Exhibitors Unless Present Situation Is Met

(By DANNY)

Chicago—"All pictures released today are super features. All exhibitors say the only thing super about them is the prices."

"If something isn't done, thousands of exhibitors in this country will be out of business next year.

"This is not an infant industry. It's an industry that has too many infants in it, in the producing and distributing end of the business."

"The proposed uniform contract is too cumbersome. All that's needed is an order blanket and an understanding of an arbitration agreement."

These were the salient features of the annual address delivered by Sydney S. Cohen at the opening of the fourth M. P. T. O. convention yesterday.

Cohen spoke for nearly two hours, making recommendations and going over the many the well-known phases of the organization's activities. The fireworks of the M. P. T. O. convention are scheduled to be started today. At the moment the absorbing question facing the convention is who will be the next president? Upon his much depends.

This is especially so, because there's so much mattering, so much discontent that unless certain developments occur several state units may break away and the present organization may crumble.

Although Sydney S. Cohen rests that he will not be a candidate there is a strong belief that his supporters and friends will not agree upon any of the candidates in the field and, consequently, the point may be reached where it will be Cohen or no one.

Those in a position to know say Cohen is sincere in his attitude and has tried to find a compromise candidate (Continued on Page 6)

Call Kent Again

Sharp Words Over Re-appearance—Knobel and Goldreyer New Exhibitor Witnesses

Verbal brickbats flew thick and fast between opposing counsel in the federal Trade Commission's proceedings against Famous Players yesterday when W. A. Fuller, chief counsel for the Commission, demanded that S. R. Kent, whom the Commission had expected to again place in the stand yesterday and who is attending the Famous Players convention at Los Angeles, be summoned to New York immediately to resume the stand.

Fuller contended that Kent had not been released as a Government witness and that notwithstanding the expense and inconvenience which would result from calling him to New York should be summoned to appear.

Robert T. Swaine declared that it would be impossible for Kent to be in New York before June 4.

"We have done everything within our power to help the Government in its investigation of Famous Players," Swaine angrily told Examiner Alvord. "We have opened up our files and records, have a large clerical force busy digging up contracts, documents and testimonial data for the Government. Now they ask us to stop our business and Mr. Kent away from the sales convention, in which he is the most important figure, just to help the Government. Doesn't that deserve a little consideration? We have been in business for years and listened to Harries, A. Edison, Dr. Tipton and Col. Osbey of the American Legion tell us of the ethical future of pictures, in fact on everything that was not relevant to this investigation. We have not even complained when for several days there was only about two hours actual testimony by Government witnesses.

Eck L. Ludvig, general counsel for Famous then took the floor and asserted vitriically that any Government contracts were "outrageous and preposterous," and asked Fuller if he really meant it, "so you don't exactly declared Ludvig, "say so and put yourself on record." Fuller replied that he wanted Kent, summoned, that he was a very material witness.

Later in the day Ludvig showed in the record of the proceedings at the conclusion of Kent's testimony on May 3 the witness was received, he having been excused, and Fuller replied that inasmuch as Kent had been held to produce certain documents and contracts it was understood that he was still under the constraint, but the Government attorney appeared to be willing to modify his earlier insistence that Kent be summoned immediately and the record closed for the Government. It would be satisfied if he appeared at the earliest possible moment. This was agreeable to both sides and the smoke of battle cleared away sufficiently, and the result of the knobel of Grobe & Knobel chain of theaters in the Michigan Co. was decided.

Knobel stated that the chain of seven theaters in the Bronx that he is interested in, have given a Knobel, Goldwyn and Grobe handled all of Paramount's output because they have been compelled to do so in order to get their pictures. The Knobel attorney testified that he had frequently endeavored to have some pictures cut from the list that he didn't think were good, but hadn't succeeded. His customer, the Cosmopolitan features, would not allow the Knobel chain to show the Cosmopolitan features through Famous Players, and the Knobel chain had been given to the Keith Circuit without notice.

He had been contracted for "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York," he said, but the contracts were cancelled, presumably because Goldwyn took over the Cosmopolitan one. Knobel has not taken the stand, referring to these two pictures declared as he smiled at the counsel for the respondents and the advocate of Famous seated nearby, "those are two pictures that we are going to get if they are released. This will be one time they won't get away with it," Goldwyn asserted that the breaking of the contract for other Cosmopolitan productions was not contested, but that a hot fight would have been waged had the pictures been of a quality to justify it.

Knobel further stated that he had been guilty of "bicycling" or "switching" as he termed it one time only, when a picture for one of his theaters didn't arrive and he ran a picture in this house that he had already run in other houses. Prather Mc- Donald, cross examining for the defense, asked the witness, "Are you sure that you didn't engage in the practice of 'bicycling' or 'switching' as you call it with six pictures instead of one?" Absolutely not,\" replied Knobel.

Knobel asserted that the exchange manager from whom he bought his Paramount pictures had told him that his theater attendance, giving him the numbers of people who had attended several of his theaters on certain days when Knobel complained of high rentals, saying that his business was not good enough to justify the price asked. He admitted in response to questioning of Prather McDonald that he had invited one of the exchange managers to come and look at his books and judge for himself whether his business was good enough to justify the rental asked, but stated that at this time the Paramount exchange had already changed his attendance. He said that prices for picture rentals were the same in all exchanges, if exchange were not fair, because there were only one or two hundred people daily who were admitted on passes.

Knoel stated that he bought Paramount pictures according to the terms and conditions of the contract, and that the terms of pictures by all companies has been increased on the increase for the last few years.

Indications now point to the continuation of the hearings in New York, with June 3, and possibly longer, as it is not known just when Sr. Kent will arrive and Government counsel are insisted that he be put on the stand here instead of Philadelphia, which is the next seat of the Government's inquiry, on the grounds that his testimony may have reference to matters pertaining to documents that are in the files of Famous Players here.

ENEMIES OF WOMEN
by Vicente Blasco Ibanez
WITH LIONEL BARRYMORE and ALMA RUBENS

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN" is established as the season's most sensational success. It broke all records at the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago, where it is now in its fifth capacity week. It broke all records at the Central Theatre, New York, playing Two Dollar top for four capacity weeks.

Continuing its New York engagement at the Rivoli, it took in $6093 on the opening, one of the biggest Sundays in all Rivoli history.

In these cities "Enemies of Women" has been playing against the strongest opposition picture in the field today.

It is still running capacity at Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles. Similar triumphs have been scored in Milwaukee and San Francisco.

It is the Year's Biggest Box-office Picture!

"The Girl of the Golden West"—1st Nat'l—Strand

EVENING TELEGRAPH—"The Girl of the Golden West" was a fine play, a successful grand opera and now, as shown on the Strand screen, it is better than ever, even as a picture. We look upon "The Girl of the Golden West" as a picture we would hate to have missed, and we're glad we saw it.

HERALD—There is plenty of good, old-fashioned humor in "The Girl of the Golden West." This melodrama of the frontier, which has done service as a belles-lettres masterpiece and as a grand opera, is at its best on the screen. It is infinitely more realistic when recorded in the natural scenery of the Wild West than it ever could be when played, however, expertly, in front of a painted background.

MAIL—Edwin Carewe, the director, has caught some of the spirit of the West at its best and has pictured it sincerely and with much restraint, thereby eliminating the cut and dried "western stuff."

Many of the play's thrilling moments are preserved in the picture.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The acting might be improved in several spots, but on the whole Edwin Carewe, who directed the film, and Adrienne Ames, who scattered the story, have done their job skillfully.

SUN—This rousing old melodrama of the West has been "motorized" quite smoothly, from Balboa's play and the pulses as much as ever. "The Girl of the Golden West" is the most exciting thing that has come to town since "The Covered Wagon."

TELEGRAM—First as a belles-lettres stage play, then as a book, and later as an opera, "The Girl of the Golden West" won such favor and popularity that Managing Director Joseph Plunkett now presents it summarily as a film.

TRIBUNE—The chief trouble seems to lie in the selection of the cast. * * *

This picture suffers too much from too much direction and too little characterization.

Review By Mindy—Mind your, we are not saying that it isn't a pretty good picture, but it could have been a masterpiece with that wonderful story to start with and the real golden West to draw on for props and sets.

On your front page, you covered a perfectly obvious painted drop.

Edwin Carewe directed the picture worth writing, in spite of its shortcomings.

WORLD—Melodrama of the broadest kind is on center most of the time. The audience, and much of the interesting story, is on center. It is acted by Mr. Keggins, Miss Thelma and Sylvia Branner almost faultlessly and its photography could not be much more attractive, so that it seems to us the first National has a future play here which is well up among the best.

date to meet the situation, but so far has failed.

Blair McElroy of Fitzpatrick and McElroy, one of the strongest men in the Middle West has been mentioned as a serious possibility, but it is definitely known that McElroy does not want the post although conditions may develop which may force him to accept.

Al Steffes is gaining ground and at this writing is said to have about 120 votes. One of the interesting developments of the Steffes candidacy is that some of the New York delegates considered strong Cohen men are here wearing Steffes buttons. If New York throws its weight to Steffes, he will be a hard man to beat. This is sure.

Theodore Hays of Finkelstein and Ruben is doing fine work for Steffes. Hays is the type of man who makes and holds friends and is proving hard for the Minnesota candidates.

Those interested in Ritter are making their campaign on this platform:

What Michigan has done should be carried out nationally. Considering the wonderful accomplishments of that organization, it should develop into one of the strongest of the lot, especially opposed to Ritter. The job is too big for him, that he hasn't the background to handle an organization of the size contemplated.

Joe Mogler is taking his candidacy seriously, but apparently few others are except in a complimentary way. Martin Smith of Ohio is expected to be a well-groomed dark horse for Cohen's friends. Others don't count except for something unexpected developing.

During the meeting of the executive committee it developed that for next year's program Cohen had outlined a very comprehensive development calling for an expenditure of a large sum probably in excess of $100,000. One of the interesting ideas is the establishment of six service stations scattered throughout the country to develop and perfect organization work. One of the members of the committee commenting on this said it was fine to plan such an expenditure but it was somewhat ironical considering that during the past year only about $3,000 had been paid into the national treasury. He added that the state organizations seemed willing to finance their own operation but evidently did not take much interest in the national body, at least judging from their lack of financial support to the organization.

Glen Harper was elected temporary chairman and opened the convention.

Today, the various trade paper editors will speak. George Eastman will also make an address.

Red Flags

(By wire to THE FILM DAILY)

The Coliseum, Chicago.

What's all the shootin' for?
Where are we going and how are we going to get there and why are we going? And what's it all about?

Several centuries ago when the noble and delightful entertainment known as bull fighting was developed one of the things necessary to bring about a perfect afternoon's pleasure was to get the bull good and mad before a flock of dagoes, crack him over the snoot and everybody ate sirloin steak free gratis. So the highly intellectual minds of Spain realizing that bulls don't like red saw to it that a large flag was prepared of that color and all they had to do was to wave it in front of the bull and the party was on.

Have you ever figured just how much red flag waving has been going on in the development of the national exhibitor organization?

Last year, back in New York, some one suggested that it was time to lay bricks and stop throwing them. What that interesting talker overlooked was that there never was an occasion in the history of the world but that more constructive work was accomplished by laying bricks rather than by throwing them.

The M. P. T. O. of A. was formed in Cleveland because some adroit gentleman figured out that after considerable talk of producers encroaching upon the exhibitors' side of the business that enough exhibitors would respond to form a national organization. And they were right. And maybe it was necessary. And because of this perhaps they can be forgiven. And perhaps they can be forgiven for taking the same battle cry to the Minneapolis convention. And perhaps someone can be forgiven for developing the brilliant suggestion that Jimmy Walker represented the producers and was the producers' candidate in Washington last year. Perhaps they can be forgiven.

And it is rather more or less interesting to speculate as to just what kind of a red flag is going to be waved here to stimulate interest for another year.

Oh bunk.
Oh tommysot.
Oh, hell!

Several self-respecting decent Americans in the picture business have reached the conclusion that red flag waving belongs to anarchists. Did it ever occur to you that maybe they're right?

And they have also reached the belief that people who throw bricks usually land in jail. Has this occurred to you?

Let's get constructive. Or let's get out of business. Any damn fool can throw a bomb and kill the greatest man in the world. Any child can stick its finger in the dikes of Holland and ruin a nation. But it takes men, and real men to fight and take a lickin' whenever it's coming to them. So let's be men.

You have some real men out here. And it's about time that they showed themselves. At if they don't let's close up the Coliseum. Let's forget the "convention." Let's go back to the hotel and have a good time for a couple of days and then go fishing and then go home. But if we are going to be anything and do anything to bring to you a better understanding of all branches of this business, come on! Go!

We're calling the role of some of the real men. There are lots of others but you just can't think of them at one time. So here goes. Come on Theodore Hays! Come on Butterfield! Where's Jim Ritter? Where's Claude Judy? Where's Brylawski? What's become of Whitehurst?

This is the call of the clan.

Where's Pramer? Where's Ed Bingham? What's become of Mike Comerford? Has anybody seen Harry Crandall? Come on Liggett! And there are a lot more—if we are going to get somewhere—come on! Let's go!

Atlantic City—William Randolph Hearst addressed the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan sales convention yesterday and sounded the keynote of the Cosmopolitan production policy when he said that pictures like 'Knighthood' would be the only kind he would make.

Hearst came down with Arthur Brisbane and Joseph A. Moore. Official mention was made of the formation of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

Unanimous Disapproval of Hays Agreement Registered—New President Still Vital Topic

(By DANNY)
The Coliseum, Chicago—A resolution condemning the uniform contract developed by the Hays organization was enthusiastically adopted at the M. P. T. O. convention late yesterday.

The report of the special committee which made the findings was read by W. D. Burford of Illinois who cited specific objections to the agreement. The objections included the following:
The clause dealing with advance payments and cash deposits.
The clause which denies exhibitors the right to make any eliminations in films except with the written or telegraphic consent of the distributor.
The clause relative to play dates.

The clause bearing on the time limit for the acceptance or the rejection of contracts.

That portion of the contract which includes arbitration as part of the contract and the fixing of penalties by the arbitration board.

Burford analyzed each of these points at length.

In all probability, the Michigan plan to finance the national organization will come up today or tomorrow. Nominations for the presidency and other offices will surely be made today and there is a strong possibility that the election will occur today.

The presidential race continues to be the most important topic of the M. P. T. O. convention. Sydney S. Cohen, although having announced repeatedly that he is not a candidate.

Hearst, in his address, said:

"I have not been in the business so many years but I have seen the quality of production increase continuously and it is always the best picture which succeeds the most. We have seen the smaller picture fall away, the cheaper pictures, drop by the wayside and only the big pictures, the strong pictures, remain.

"Therefore during the coming year and until the public's ways change, and personally I do not think they ever will change in this respect, we are going to make almost entirely, and I really think quite entirely pictures of the class of When Knighthood Was In Flower."

A number of changes have been made in the field force. J. D. Solomon, a salesman in Salt Lake has been made manager there, succeeding Charles Knickerbocker who takes over the Minneapolis office. Seth Perkins is now Seattle manager, replacing W. E. Banford who becomes district manager in charge of Salt Lake, Denver and Butte. Ralph Pielow will be Portland, Ore., manager. This is a promotion from the ranks. C. F. Lynch, Omaha salesman is now manager in that city and A. S. Schuster is to be manager of the Butte exchange. C. E. Gregory, Kansas City salesman is the new manager of that exchange, replacing J. F. Hill who goes to Oklahoma City. W. J. Clark, Minneapolis salesman is to be manager at Charlotte, a new office. L. B. Remy has been advanced from Dallas district manager to district managership in charge of Dallas and Oklahoma City. The company has now 11 district managers. Offices in Butte, Charlotte, Des Moines and Portland, Ore., open next month.

Edward Bovay in an address yesterday outlined the advance the company has made in production. Information gathered from the various sales managers indicate that the prospects for summer business are very encouraging.

Press association reports yesterday said that the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan merger involved $70,000,000.

Eastman Denies

dit of which the Eastman Company acquired a virtual monopoly in the manufacture and sale of raw stock in the United States and that competition in the manufacture and sale of prints was hindered and eliminated and prices of positive prints fixed and standardized. The answer of Eastman disclaims all knowledge of the amount of film made and sold by its domestic competitors, and therefore cannot state whether it enjoys a monopoly of manufacture. It is admitted that Brulatour handled approximately 81% of the Eastman film between Jan. 1 and March 1, 1920, and 70% between the latter date and Sept. 1, 1921.

It is admitted that Brulatour was the principal stockholder in Paragon, Inc., but it is denied that Eastman controlled or had any interest in the company. The answer admits the purchase of G. M. Laboratories, Inc., the San-Jaco Laboratory, and Paragon Laboratory, but denies that such purchases, as charged in the complaint, were made "for the purpose of cooperating and intimidating competing manufacturing laboratories or to induce them to refrain from making further purchases of raw stock manufactured by the Eastman Kodak Company." All other allegations in the commission's complaint are denied.

In his answer, Brulatour admits his connection with Eastman, but denies any conspiracy in the conduct of the business of the laboratories purchased. He denies that he supplied producers with positive prints at prices below those at which competitive manufacturing laboratories could supply them. He denies any delay in deliveries to competitive laboratories and denies shutting off their source of supply. He also denies there was any conspiracy to coerce laboratories into using Eastman film.

The Allied Laboratories and its members have been given an extension of time to June 11 in which to file their answers to the complaint.

"Bright Lights" Near Completion

"The Bright Lights of Broadway" is almost finished. A few exteriors remain to be shot. Bennie Zeidman is making it for Principal.

"Three O’Clock in the Morning," the latest C. C. Burr production, was previewed by the producer Tuesday evening at the Gotham.

Cohen Still a Power
still has sufficient strength to be elected.

The prediction was made here in one of the offices yesterday that Cohen could possibly be elected on the first ballot. Efforts to bring about a caucus of the Steffes and Ritter followers are under way. A combination may result which might prove sufficiently strong to defeat Cohen.

Cohen's followers and closest friends have been informed of the situation which may confront the national organization should Cohen be re-elected. For a time it looked as if A. R. Pramer of Iowa might be named by the Cohen supporters as an offset to Pete Woodhull of New Jersey is also being considered in this connection.

Frank J. Rembusch strolled into the convention yesterday morning and his appearance created quite a flutter among those who know how he regards Cohen.

In the morning, George Eastman spoke briefly. Dr. Rush Kees of the Eastern Section of Music of the importance of music to pictures, Congressman Snyder of Utica, N. Y., told of the fraudulent stock operations with the object of suggesting that exhibitors do all in their power to check such illegal practices.

Addresses were made by trade paper editors. Martin J. Quigley of the Exhibitors' Herald spoke and later Robert E. Welsh, editor of the Moving Picture World who extolled the work of Cohen to such an extent that his address was interrupted and for about two minutes, there was wild cheering for Cohen. It was the first intimation of what might be expected if Cohen desires re-election.

American Society Represented
(Staff Correspondence)
Chicago—J. C. Rosenthal, of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is here, awaiting a chance to address the convention relative to the music tax situation. Rosenthal told THE FILM DAILY recently that the Society was willing to graduate the music tax so that the exhibitor in the small towns would not have to pay as much as the big first run.

Loew Denies Charge of Boycott
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Milwaukee—Marcus Loew has denied the charges of boycotting, made by Walter Bauman, secretary of the Wisconsin unit, who sent out telegrams to the effect that big producers apparently banded together to boycott the Palace of Progress exhibit at the convention.

Baer Returns
Fred E. Baer returned from the Chicago convention yesterday.

Today's Program
(Staff Correspondence)
Chicago—The important events on today's program will be the election of officers this afternoon and the banquet at the Sherman tonight. At the dinner there will be addresses by Warren Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and president of the organization's co-operative bank in Cleveland; former Governor Preus of Minnesota; Dr. John J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, and Mayor William Dever of Chicago.

Elaine Hammerstein and several other stars, who are here, will probably be presented.

As Rembusch Sees It
(Staff Correspondence)
Chicago—Frank J. Rembusch, a shining light of former conventions, arrived from Shelbyville, Ind. yesterday. This is how he describes the convention:

"Here at the ringside, I find the same convention of previous years. Exhibitors are interested only in the election. We predict Cohen's election on the first ballot. Even A) Steffes has refused to cover a bet of two to one. Cohen has a new machine every year, but the model is the same. Here is how it runs: His Indians representative, Gus Schmidt, can appoint all Indiana delegates who must be for Sydney but not of my knowledge. "Anyhow, it's fun to meet the old friends and also the old enemies, if there are any."

A Battle Almost
Howard Smith and Jimmy Walker in Altercation Over Sunday Closing in New York State
(Staff Correspondence)
Chicago—A near-battle developed in the lobby of the Sherman Monday night when a group including Howard Smith of Buffalo and John Mannheim of New York accosted State Senator James J. Walker as he passed through.

An altercation resulted relative to a statement reported to have been issued by Smith to the effect that neither Walker, Charles O'Reilly nor Sam Berman had anything whatsoever to do with the Sunday opening legislation in New York State. During the discussion Walker pointedly commented to Smith that the men who had made Sunday opening possible in New York might be able to change this legislation. The discussion then came to an abrupt end. Later Mannheimer tried to patch up matters by explaining to Walker that Smith who is a Republican had acted only as a party man.

RAINY FILM ABOLISHED

Exhibitors and Producers Enthusiastic over the Dura Company's Method of Protecting Prints

Producers have spent for tunes to give the public the best screen results that money could buy. They select their story, their director, their cast; they build elaborate sets, in short, every detail is carried out to make a perfect picture.

Finally the producer sees his picture on the screen, and is dejected to find the result of his labor justified the enormous expenditure of money. The exhibitor with equal enthusiasm books the picture.

On the first run showings the S. R. O. sign is ignored in the mad rush of the overflow as attempting to gain admittance. Everyone is happy. The picture is called a "success."

But every theatre does not have "great runs." The same prints are used for second, third, fourth and subsequent runs. The same print, merely showing the film, is placed in a celluloid with its beautiful photographic quality, soon becomes full of rain, dirt and oil stains. It is full of jumps in action caused by the removal of much footage, due to broken perforations.

Patrons lured into a theatre on the strength of a great show leave disgusted. Some of them never to return. The exhibitor protests to the exchange. The exchange manager shrugs his shoulders believing himself helpless. All the above is past history.

The Dura Film Protector Co., Inc., 220 West 42nd St., New York City, has perfected a method fully protected patents to overcome all the faults mentioned. It has registered the word "Duratize" in the United States patent office as its trade name.

It Duratizes prints by applying a thin coating of celluloid over the emulsion of new prints. This in no way impairs the photographic quality of the print but on the contrary gives it a more brilliant appearance on the screen. The emulsion is so protected that the Duratized prints will not become "rainy."

Not only the perforations but the joints are greatly reinforced by the thin layer of celluloid.

Duratized film is oilproof and water Resistant and to clean it is only necessary to pass the film through a cloth moistened with cleaning fluid between the reels.

The price charged for Duratizing prints is two dollars per print. On Saturday an additional run will more than cover this cost. The exchange which handles the Duratized product not only adds life to the film and will satisfy the exhibitor and please his audience.

Goldwyn
is doing Big Things!
Organize!

(By wire to THE FILM DAILY)

The Coliseum, Chicago.

Still here. Still on the job. And if I'd have gone to the place yesterday that some people suggested—well I wouldn't be in Chicago. And the funny thing is I am not going—not for a few days, anyway.

During the past five years there has never appeared so many in anything ever written for the little old paper. So perhaps on will pardon the liberty.

But a national exhibitor organization is one of the things that we believe in. So much so that we have tried in various ways to make our 5,000 odd readers understand that in the past. Some of these brothers come around and talk about trying to disorganize their organization you tell 'em what we tell 'em—they're crazy.

But there has been entirely too much soft-pedalling, too much dilly-footing, too much oh, let 'em alone with regard to the national exhibitor organization, and it is time that this stopped. Here has been too much petty politics, too much ward-and-prentiff stuff, too much ballyhooing and not enough of all of the other things.

It was all right a year or two ago because after all you were very young and you don't expect an infant to stride like a man. But you're big now and you're old enough to know, and you're going to be treated as such. And if you're not you're going to be told that men should hear and it is immaterial whether you like it or not—because if somebody don't make this plain to you you're going along just as you have—just like so many ostriches—who stick their heads in the sand and then cannot see what is going on.

You've got to organize. You've got to organize right for your own good. For the good of this industry. For the good of your investment. You have got to get set right. You have got to pay or it. It doesn't make much difference how much 'Movie Chats' bring into your state or national treasury or how much advertising slides might help. If you're not willing to pay for your own protection why should the other fellow do it for you?

There are several hundred mighty big league important exhibitors in this country who laugh right out loud and say "oh, hell!" every time some one suggests that they join your organization. Why?

Figure it out. How many of the important first-run operators of this country are even willing to consider the idea of becoming identified with you? Why?

Figure it out. What prevents, what stops cooperation between this organization and what is known as the Hays organization? And why?

Just before we all left New York to attend this pow-wow the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Asso. gave a dinner (there were a lot of film folk there, too) and to the eternal shame of picture people might this be said: that vaudeville—which doesn't begin to compete in public importance with motion pictures—is organized. There exists a real working basis between all hands, the managers, the artists, and the in-between fellow.

Sydney Cohen was at that dinner. He heard. He knows what the biggest men in pictures and vaudeville think of cooperation. Jimmy Walker was there. He knows.

Zukor was there. And Loew. And Hays and a lot of other important people. And they knew. And they applauded some of the remarks on cooperation so strongly that their palms hurt and stung.

Gentlemen, you haven't the chance of a Chinaman on the 32nd edge of the last ditch in hell if you don't organize.

DANNY.
At Broadway Theaters
Capitol

The Capitol orchestra renders some Italian folk songs as the opening musical number this week. The following units include: "Caruso," scenic impressions of "Traviata," by the Ballet Corps, assisted by several solists. The weekly novelty planned for the house is "The Marlin Johnson film, "Trailing African Wild Animals," the feature. Next comes "The Clock Store," in the "Spooks," also a short reel Fable picture. The organ closes the performance.

Rialto

The Rialto orchestra is the guest of the Rialto this week, and incidentally closes the bill. A prologue to the feature, "Enemies of Women," is the only other number on the bill, due to the length of the picture.

Rivoli

Because the Rivioli orchestra happens to be the guest of the Rialto this week, and incidentally closes the bill, a prologue to the feature, "Enemies of Women," is the only other number on the bill, due to the length of the picture.

Strand

The program at this house consists of "Star Modern" (Genus) a weekly serial and a serial feature, "Here and There," a compilation of short subplots. The weekly novelty consists of a prologue to the feature, "The Girl of the Golden West," and "The War Bride," one of Aegean Film Fables. Percy Barnes closes the show with selections on the organ.

Town Involved in Litigation

Tobias A. Keppler, attorney for Gallagher and Shean, in a statement to the press, confirms the report first published in THE FILM DAILY that the team has signed a contract with the Famous Players. The picture planned is a feature, "Around the Town with Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean." Flora Ziegfeld claims under his contract with the team they cannot make the picture, but Keppler has assured them they can go ahead with it.

Principal Closes Three Deals

Max Roth of Principal Pictures has closed the following sales:

The company's entire product for Cuba to H. A. Kelly, Cuban Film Co.

"Environment" and "World's A Stage," to Selection Art Film Service, for Porto Rico and Santo Domingo.

Betsy Jewel has finished a part in "The Silent Command," the naval story which has made Fox.

Advocate of Shorter Features

H. S. Gallup, general manager of the Delphi Theatres, Inc., which operate houses in Marquette, Escanaba, Munising and Iron River, Michigan adds another entry to those exhibitors who oppose excessively long features. Gallup says the ideal program includes, in addition to the feature, two short subjects but he finds this arrangement impossible when the feature exceeds 5,000 or 5,500 ft. in length.

Eight More in Peck Series

Los Angeles—Principal Pictures intends producing eight more of the "Peck's Bad Boy" series, in the first of which Jackie Coogan appeared. Coogan is no longer with interests identified with Principal, and no selection has been made as yet for the title roles.

Has Films in Color

The Color Cinema Co., Inc., has produced a two-reeler, a three-reeler and a feature in natural colors. C. Lang Cobb, sales manager, has started on a sales tour on behalf of these pictures.

HELEN CHADWICK Loses Suit

Famous from Coast

Max Graf is in town from the coast. He is at the Astor and his visit here concerns distribution.

Mrs. Wallace Reid with Bessie Love in "HUMAN WRECKAGE," the new production to be distributed by F. B. O., and which promises one of the biggest sensations ever known in all screen history. More Plain Words

Danny hits at exhibitor-distribution today but his in a constructive manner. His comment from Chicago on page 8 this issue, is decidedly worthwhile.

Chas. O'Reilly Says Deflections by Distributors Can Be Remedied Under Uniform Contract

Charles L. O'Reilly, owner of the 18th St. Playhouse and the Rex on upper Broadway and president of the T. O. C. C. and M. F. T. O. of New York, expressed the opinion yesterday that under the terms of the uniform contract distributors can be held responsible for not delivering all of the pictures they have contracted for.

This point was made at the Trade Commission hearing when O'Reilly testified that of the six Cosmopolitan Films, he had contracted for from Famous two, "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" had not been delivered. He said he contracted for group 5 of the Paramount "90" series, and that they had split with it the 2nd St. Playhouse, but couldn't effect such an arrangement with Famous. He had to take the whole block so he and the competition house bought the group separately without protection against each other. The "41" series turned out so badly that he would not take the "39." Of the "41" 35 were produced by Famous, of which 34 were delivered and the remaining six Cosmopolitan signed for under a separate contract.

He added that under the uniform contract to which both Famous and Cosmopolitan were parties, Cosmopolitan could be corrected for these pictures, since they were specified in a contract negotiated by Famous and Cosmopolitan. O'Reilly declared that Famous should not have played "Enemies of Women" at the Rivoli and Rialto without endeavoring to have the picture released also to exhibitors who signed for it.

I want those two pictures and I don't care if the Paramount comes to me by going to Famous. Players, Western Union or Postal," he said in reply to a question of whether he would pay a $5,000 fine levied by the Paramount for the action of exhibitors who had joined in the "41" series. O'Reilly stated that Famous was now distributing for Cosmopolitan.

The witness played the block booking section, declaring that exhibitors were not able to secure pictures which they knew in advance will not be available to their audiences. He added that his complaint reflected exhibitor sentiment throughout the State, stating that the M. P. T. O. has now embraced members of 907 out of the 1400 theaters in the State.

A. J. Wolf, owner of the Adelphi and Symphony between 57th and 80th on Broadway, testified that his theaters used to be second run houses, but had been forced into second run by the building of Loew's 15th St. Theater. Wolf said that after Loew's 83rd verdict, his theaters would have to choose between playing the first run houses, or else being forced to pay the levy to the Adelphi Symphony combined with the Olympia, a competition house, and Wolf then pointed out to the F. P. agent manager that the three houses together could assure a longer run and more revenue to Famous than the Loew house, but that this didn't succeed in getting first run, one.

Wolf stated that he is getting Paramount pictures cheaper this year than the past, and said that he was given a better price when he opened his books and proved that the Adelphi Symphony office in New York, that he had given had sold only pictures as of negatives, as well as down payments. He added that the Famous output for the past year has been consistently better than that of any other company. During the last two years, he said, other companies have produced pictures as well as many pictures as Famous.

Wolf agreed with the Paramount-Swanke, cross examining for the respondents, that the Loew management and the other independents kept an eye on the Loew houses, and that these individuals independently produced pictures as well as usually keeping an eye on the circuits to which they delivered.

The Loew protection, he said, is now seven days from the last playing date. When asked to be entered in the record without objection of the admission by the respondents, Wolf inquired of the Loew management, who, according to the recent testimony of James T. Jenkins, had been placed in the Corridan, N. Y., offices of Famous Players as a representative for his having stopped showing Paramount, had in fact been installed as such. Mr. Jenkins, for the Commission, had placed in the record, agreements between other exhibitors in the Wabash area of Southern Enterprises and the Loew management under one of the terms of the agreement, summarized by Wabash's Mr. Pettit, the line up of the famous Players, as a retaliatory measure which it had in fact been installed as such.

Mr. Pettit, for the respondents, stated that the Adelphi and Symphony, which were formerly operated the Palace, in a comeback order, that they should not be used for any purpose other than to deliver the prints of Famous Players to the various engagements which it had in fact been installed as such.

T. Leonard, for Famous Players, Players, as the retaliatory measure for his having stopped showing Paramount, had in fact been installed as such, was called by O'Reilly, as the line up of Famous Players, Players, as a retaliatory measure which it had in fact been installed as such. Mr. Jenkins, for the Commission, had made the record, agreements between other exhibitors in the Wabash area of Southern Enterprises and the Loew management under one of the terms of the agreement, summarized by Wabash's Mr. Pettit, the line up of the famous Players, as a retaliatory measure which it had in fact been installed as such. organization. This was discussed here and something may come of it. There is talk of Wisconsin and Ohio combining to form an organization which will operate regardless of any other national exhibitor organization. Those opposed to the Cohen candidacy worked desperately yesterday morning and in effort to check his reflection.

They made efforts to have Harry Crandall and several others run but to no avail. Some of the Ritter Michigan men and Wisconsin delegates who were for Steffes insist that Cohen "double crossed" them, declaring that neither of these men would have run had they known that Sydney intended again running. They say they believed what he has been saying that he was not and would not be a candidate.

two reel comedies will be produced and marketed exclusively under the auspices of our organization.

JIMMY AUBREY comedies are built for laughing purposes only—clean situations and concentrated action, without uncalled for stretching and padding. They stay in their chosen field—two reels of unbroken fun.

JIMMY AUBREY has created a place for himself as a leader among comedians—a reputation achieved by consistently making better and better comedies of two reel length. Regardless of the fact that other comedians are deserting this field for greater length productions, Aubrey will consistently continue to produce his famous type of comedy in two reels at the rate of one each month.

The first of the newer and greater Aubrey comedies will be ready in July.

POST IMPRESSIONS

A series of pictorial visits abroad.

The Post Pictures Organization spent eighteen months abroad visiting the quaintest, queerest and most unique spots in the world.

The garb, customs and mannerisms of foreign peoples were photographed—picturized with a truth and fidelity to detail never before attempted.

The result is that each of these forty subjects whether the locale be Lapland or Larissa, one of the oldest cities in Greece, is an exquisitely conceived pictorial delight.

The finest theatres will enable their patrons to visit Europe via Post Impressions.

Correspondence regarding distribution is invited
Distribution

(By wire to THE FILM DAILY)

The Coliseum, Chicago.

What's the answer?
You have been buttonholed. You have been pulled into a corner and told the story of how the exhibitors' distributing company is going to be a lifesaver. Maybe you're one of the unlucky gentlemen who has not been buttonholed yet. But don't give up hope and despair. You will be. So that's that.

Now don't let anybody kid you along and tell you we have an axe to grind against the proposed exhibitors' organization, because we haven't. But if you try to find your way to a new spot along a new road you watch the signs and then sometimes you get there. And if you watch the signs very closely you don't get too far out of the way and you don't have to make too many detours.

And that's what we're doing. Watching the signs.

And how do the signs read and where do they point?
It's no use going back into ancient history because life's too short, but let's take a few of the later developments of this nature and see where the signs point and how they read.

Selznick was going to have a national exhibitor organization. And what do the signs read? And where did the money go? United Picture Theaters composed solely of exhibitors—operated by exhibitors—was going to do the same thing that the proposed exhibitors' distributing company now proposes to do. And what do the signs say? And how do they read?

Thousands of dollars sunk. How many? What's the difference? Sunken. You never hear of them any more. And they were pretty clever men who were running the United Picture Theaters. Pretty smart. Some people said darned smart.

There isn't any doubt that it is possible, feasible, perhaps practical for such an organization to become profitable. You can hire brains. There is no question about that. But boys, be careful.

It may be that there is plenty of room in this country for a cooperative exhibitors' distributing organization. There are enough problems to be worked out, however, to make one think twice at least on this.

Has it ever occurred to you that if the biggest exhibitors, the biggest first run operators have had trouble in this connection what chance you have of working it out.

And after all, the biggest exhibitors, the biggest first-run boys have an exhibitors' distributing organization of their own. It is called Associated First National Pictures. And it has never paid a dividend. And it's had the greatest stars in the business. Charlie Chaplin, Norma Talmadge. And a lot more.

This doesn't mean to say that First National isn't a good business institution and in time will make a lot of money because it probably will. But they have been five years trying to work it out with only one man in each key city to get the big picture first, and they haven't worked it out yet. At least so far as profits are concerned. And if they are having all this trouble who are you and how do you figure that you can do better than they can?

This isn't personal. It isn't intended to be. But are Messrs. True, Harris, Burford and Cohen, more clever than Lieber, Schwalbe, Rowland, Williams, or Richards?

If they are what have they done to show it. Napoleon once said "Tell me what he has done." And that question is presented here.

Be careful. Move slowly. Be sure you're right and then before you go ahead think it over again. Otherwise this may happen: a lot of money may be subscribed by the exhibitors of this country towards the founding and financing of an organization which in time may not prove the great financial success anticipated—and this business—your business—cannot stand this. You can't afford it. Think it over.

11 Step Out of Active Management in Favor of Associates—Wants Exhibitor Contact

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Hal Roach announced yesterday that he had turned over the directorial reins of his extensive organization to a committee composed of three associates, all of whom have been with him for years. They are Warren Doane, general studio manager, Harvey Walker, title man, and Crizer, film editor. These three have been active in studio management and have now received a business interest in the company. Roach plans to step out of active management and spend a good deal of his time in traveling. He says he will get the exhibitor reaction against his product and find out what he wanted in the way of short reels, he will also be on the watch for new talent. No changes in the studio force are planned.

Semon Here Today

Larry Semon is due in today from the Chicago convention to sign his new contract with Truett Prod. It will cover three years and under it, Semon will make three pictures a year, the first probably "The Girl in the Limousine."

Wray Physioc To Produce

Wray Physioc has arrived from Miami, Fla., to secure the cast and arrange distribution for a feature on which he will work in Miami. Physioc's production will be a picturization of a famous French novel. He reports work is underway on a studio near Miami which will be the home of Physioc productions. He is stopping at the Astor.

The Reason Why

"Everything that has happened is due to nothing but political childishness, silly, amateurish politics at that," Danny Cohen said yesterday. His editorial is on page 4. Other convention news on page 6.

But Convention Ends in Fiasco—Half of Delegates Walk Out—Cohen Amazed at Action

By DANNY

The Coliseum, Chicago—A most complete fiasco resulted at the M. P. T. O. meeting yesterday when following the "unanimous election" of Sydney S. Cohen to the presidency fully half the delegates marched out of the hall.

While there was no opposition openly to Cohen the action of over half of the delegates in walking out, thus refusing to remain to contribute to the fund desired is an indication of their ideas. In other words, that an organization practically half wrecked. Cohen's followers must raise $30,000 to meet the deficit of last year as well as provide funds for its operation during the ensuing year.

How this can be accomplished with the numerical strength of what is left of the national organization is a problem, practically insolvable at the moment. When the leading figures among those who walked out were questioned as to their plans, they said they had no idea of quitting the national organization but also that they had no idea of contributing to its support under existing conditions. In other words they will not pay up while Cohen and his cohorts "run" the national body.

So many state delegations were among those who left and there was so much of a mixup as to where delegates were that it is impossible to mention all of the delegations which left. Among them, however, were Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, many of the Illinois and Indiana delegations, some of the Southern and Mid-West delegations and others.

Immediately the delegates started leaving the hall there was tremendous confusion and the work of electing the vice-presidents proceeded in a

7 Houses Building

Officials of the company expect to add 20 houses to the chain by 1924 through actual building or acquisition of houses now operating.

The construction program includes an 1,800 seat house in San Pedro, ready for opening in five weeks. The theater will feature a production of $500,000. In Pomona, a 1,500 seat house is under way for opening in August. This represents an investment of $200,000. At Hermosa Beach, West Coast is a partner with the Venice Investment Co., in a theater project involving $200,000.

At 3rd and Arizona, Santa Monica, a theater and office building is being constructed at a cost of $400,000. The theater will seat 1,700. In Hollywood the theater is entirely remodeled at an expense of $75,000. The capacity will be increased to 1,000 seats. On Western Ave., at 54th St., a theater seating 500, is being built by R. F. D. List for West Coast. This investment approximates $250,000.

On the corner of Washington, Vermont and New Hampshire, including two main boulevards, there will be a 2,500 seat theater.

The total investment of the building alone, not including real estate, will be in excess of $750,000. On York Blvd. between 51st and 52nd Sts., A. Badeley is erecting a theater to cost $165,000.

Three more deals are now pending for theaters contemplated. All of them will be situated in Los Angeles at a total investment of $750,000.

West Coast states that their associate Claude Langley has closed for a new theater which will cost $400,000.

Langley has recently re-modelled and re-equipped the De Luxe on Alvarado St., the Pasadena at Pasadena, and the Hippodrome at Taft, at an expense of $50,000.

Exhibitors and Producers Enthuse Over the Durati Company's Method of Protecting Prints

Producers have spent fortunes to give the public the best screen results that money could buy, soon becomes old hat, their cast; the build elaborate sets, in short every detail is carried out to the last. The producer finds on the screen and is delighted to find the result of his labor justifies his enormous expenditure of money. The exhibitor with equal enthusiasm books the picture.

On the first run showings the S. P. S. is ignored in the mad rush of the over-flow attempting to gain admittance. Everyone is happy. The picture is called a "success."

BUT: Every theater does not have "first run." The same prints are used for second, third and fourth. The same print which held the audience spellbound with its beautiful photographic qualities becomes full of rags and oil stains. It is full of jumps in action caused by the removal of much footage due to broken perforations.

Patriots lured into a theatre on a promise of a good show leave disgusted. Some of them never return. The exhibitor protects his exchange. The exchange manager shrugs his shoulders believing himself helpless. All the above is past history.

The Durati Film Protector Co., Inc. 220 West 42nd St., New York City, has perfected a method fully protected by patents to overcome all the faults mentioned. It has registered the word "Durati" as the United States patent office as its trade name.

It Duratiizes prints by applying a thin coating of celluloid over the emulsion of new prints. This in no way impairs the photographic quality of the print, but on the contrary gives it a more brilliant appearance on the screen. The emulsion is so protected that the Duratiized prints will not become "rainy."

Not only the perforations but the joints are greatly reinforced by the thin layer of celluloid.

Duratized film is oilproof and waterresistant, and not extend. It is not necessary to pass the film through a cloth moistened with cleaning fluid between re-winders.

The price charged for Duratiizing prints is $40 per reel. First day's additional run will more than cover this cost. The exchange which has its prints Duratiized by the Addinco Film Co. will satisfy the exhibitor and his audience.

Many Delegates Turn Against Cohen

Finances a Problem

middle excitement and announcement. The Cohen supporters were both surprised and puzzled. They did not seem to know what to do. Cohen watched the retrograde trend with amazement. When he asked if he cared to make a statement regarding the movement he said he would issue one later.

Compromise Efforts Fail

All through the night up to three o'clock efforts were made to straighten out the difficulties. Finally a proposition was made that the convention would solidify its support of the Cohen organization providing Cohen was named chairman of the board. This was rejected by the Michigan people who stated if Cohen was to run the organization he must be left independent as to operations and not be hampered by the board of directors in any way.

One of the primary purposes of having Ritter elected was to insure the raising of the $10,000,000 dollar fund. In the Michigan organization are two men who have proven "wizards" at this and it was hoped to have them operate on the fund and raise the money needed. It is important that this be done inasmuch as the national organization is today in debt to the extent of over $25,000. With the failure of negotiations with Michigan the whole proposition was left up in the air. A meeting was scheduled for ten o'clock yesterday morning in the hope of making an arrangement of some kind but this failed to develop anything. When Cohen opened the situation was practically as it stood after the nominations closed Wednesday.

The session opened with McWilliam withdrawing his name as a candidate. W. W. Whitson, California also withdrew his name as third vice-president and Woodhall as a nominee for the presidency. This left Cohen the only nominee. He asked for recognition and then made a long address going into the reasons for his candidacy declaring he did not want the office and had no idea of being a candidate until leaders of many states on Tuesday petitioned him to run. He said he had offered to support Ritter of Michigan if he would become the president and offered to pay his own expenses and go to Washington and watch the legislation there during the coming session of Congress but he said that when the proposition was put up to Ritter that Ritter's demand were such that the result would stultify many of the state leaders.

Ritter's Demands

After commenting on Theodore Hay's actions an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue, as understood by the writer received from Ritter stating what in the latter's opinion the new president should carry out to bring success to the next administration. Ritter asked that not less than $100,000 be subscribed before the convention closed; that in addition $80,000 more be raised to meet the deficit of this year; that a paid organizer at $15,000 work to reorganize and solidify state organizations and that the national body devote all of its efforts except on extraordinary occasions to organization; that an executive secretary be secured and paid $10,000 annually; that the president is to have a salary of not more than $10,000 annually; that the headquarters be moved to a more central point than New York to aid in organization work and that offices for conventions be maintained in New York and that in addition to the named directors that Cohen, Steffes and a Michigan man be added.

Row Starts Over Vote

This, Cohen commented, was entirely impracticable at this time. He then said that his record during three years was his platform and then the excitement started.

Joe Hopp, Illinois went to question the voting of the Illinois delegation by W. D. Burford to the petition received by Cohen. To this Burford replied that he signed for the vote of the organization and that the roll call be made. W. W. Whitson, California yelled "never mind the constitution" but Shumway, Ohio wanted the vote cast by the secretary just to save time. Finally, however, tellers were appointed and the states were polled. A number of the voting and others were not on hand but the result gave Cohen over 234 votes. Against him were 81 votes but many others did not vote.

The other officers are Joe Mogler, Missouri, first vice-president; Martin G. Smith, Ohio, the second vice-president; W. W. Whitson, California, third vice-president; E. W. Collins, Jonesboro, Ark., fourth vice-president; and William B. Render, Jr.: treasurer.

The convention will come to a close this morning.

Rule or Ruin?

(By wire to THE FILM DAILY)

The Coliseum, Chicago.

Is the M. P. T. O. of A wrecked?

Supporters of Sydney S. Cohen insist it is not; that it is on a stronger foundation than ever before; that, despite fully half of the delegates to the national convention walk out and left the raising of funds sufficient to carry on the work of the body to the remainder. Among those who left the financing to be accomplished by Cohen and his cohorts are Michigan, Wisconsin and many others.

But stick just to Michigan for a moment. Michigan is the best organized state in the union with practically 97% of all Michigan exhibitors enrolled. Michigan paid into the national treasury last year $4,000 of the total of $13,000 collected nationally. Michigan leaders and Wisconsin leaders say they have not withdrawn from the national organization but will not contribute to it under existing conditions.

They might better withdraw because they will only stand in the way of what is left of the national body. But while they can function and will, the grave question arises what will the national organization do?

Immediately following the walk-out about $25,000 was subscribed by the delegates left to carry on the work. Fine. But what of the coming year and its financial needs? Where will that come from?

Everything that has happened is due to nothing but politics and childish, silly, amateurish politics at that. Despite all statements to the contrary everything that has happened could have been avoided. But Cohen listened to his cohorts. The kitchen cabinet got its work and Cohen fell for it. Cohen's followers insist the Ritter demands were ridiculous. Well, what if they were? Many of Cohen's actions have been described in the same language by those opposed to him.

York and this question arises: Did the kitchen cabinet want rule or ruin. If so, why? Could it have been because of the proposed exhibitor distributing company?

Coliseum in Uproar Before Election—Ritter and Steffes Refuse Posts on New Board of Directors—Mike O'Toole, Cohen's Defender

(By DANNY)

The Coliseum, Chicago—"Shall we change the hand clasp on our letter head to a double cross?"

This was the remark hurled from the platform at the Coliseum Wednesday by Theodore Hays, of Minnesota, to the delegates when he withdrew the candidacy of Al Steffes, thus practically making way for the resulting nomination of Sydney Cohen.

In withdrawing Steffes' name, Hays said:

"Apparently we are wrong in believing that this is a democratic convention. Your nomination was made in a room at the Hotel Sherman during the early hours of this morning."

Immediately pandemonium reigned. Cohen's followers yelled to put Hays-out. There were cat-calls and booing and not until Cohen asked that the speaker have all the courtesies of the floor was Hays allowed to continue.
"You gentlemen are going to be well pleased with what I say in conclusion," went on Hays, adding that if Cohen had announced his candidacy that neither Michigan or Minnesota would have put a candidate in the field.

Calls Cohen's Tactics "Unfair"

"Is this honest?" he asked, "No it's dishonest. Aren't we infringing on the slogan that 'an injury to one is the concern of all.' Minnesota's only complaint is that it finds its efforts waved against stacked cards. If we don't get down to facts which will come to Sydney Cohen will be an empty honor. He has been unfair. He went around advocating that the various states should name candidates so that a divided house would result and make it possible for a selected few to name a candidate."

Then he spoke about the double-cross, adding that he was not attacking Cohen for his accomplishments or what he had failed to do, but that his action finds all states and their candidates disarmed. Concluding he said he wished Cohen success during the next year but believed that a greater success could have been accomplished by either Ritter or Steffes.

Schmidt Defends Administration

As Hays left the platform there were cries of "steamroller" and "keep the steam roller going" and "where's the dark horse." Immediately Gus Schmidt who was acting as chairman declared Hays' remark about stacked cards was a reflection against the chairman as well as the delegates and asked if there was any desire of Michigan to be heard to which Claude Cadny replied that Michigan had put a candidate just because of repeated promises of Cohen that he would not be a candidate.

Just as it seemed as if the row was over, during the naming of the board of directors it broke loose again when an effort was made to make Steffes and Ritter on the board.
Both refused to serve. Steffes declaring that after the treatment accorded him he did not care to be affiliated with the organization, declaring Cohen had repeatedly told him he would not be a candidate. He said he would not have been in the field had Cohen told him he would run. To this Cohen made no defense, except to say that he would make a very interesting statement later. Ritter boosted Michigan but begged to be excused from the board declaring that the Michigan people wanted to leave the convention "without having their feathers more ruffled."

O'Toole, Cohen's Champion

Mike O'Toole then took up a defense of Cohen's actions declaring there was no intention to stifle the candidacy of any man and truculently demanded that Michigan and Minnesota put their man in the field. He added that Cohen had no desire to be candidate and only because when a petition signed by state after state was handed to him. He named as signers Kentucky, Pennsylvania, New York and added "many others."

W. S. McLaren of Michigan responded saying that only because Michigan had had the word of Sydney Cohen, repeated often, that he would not be a candidate that Michigan had entered Ritter.

"Today," he said, "we know why there were so many favorite sons, Go ahead, but we will have more money in the Michigan treasury at the end of next year than the national treasury." He pleaded that the delegates give Cohen something to work with—money.

Plea for Harmony

When Steffes opened the convention he pleaded for harmony and said he hoped the Washington fiasco would not be repeated, this year. He slammed several trade papers for their views on certain pictures and declared that these reports were evidently inspired by some one who was paying for it. After the announcement that the board of directors would be increased from 12 to 15, votes the nominations began. There was a surprise when Michigan passed and Hays was cheered when he put Steffes in nomination. Several favorite sons were named and then in an eulogistic address Vincent A. Brennan of Scranton, Pa., nominated Cohen saying that this was no time to experiment with a new man. Joe Rhodes, Wisconsin nominating McWilliams said he believed his man might harmonize the different political factions.

Charge Ford Backed Ritter

A special dispatch from Chicago to the New York Herald yesterday reported that charges were made by some delegates at the M. P. T. O. convention that Henry Ford was backing James Ritter, of Detroit, for presidency of the organization, and that supporters of Sydney Cohen for a fourth term were attributing the alleged support of Ritter by Ford to the latter's desire to secure the chance of the country to advance his presidential aspirations.

Tells of Olean War

Nikita Dipson, Up-State Exhibitor

Give Interesting Testimony About

Theatrical Situation There

Famous Players şirket from the tower and then advised rival exchanges from which he was buying pictures that he was practically "stealing" his product after he had refused to buy Paramount because he thought exorbitant prices were being charged for the product, declared Dipson, exhibitor at Batavia, and Olean, N. Y., who was on the stand yesterday as a Government witness in the Federal Trade Commissions action against Famous Players.

Dipson testified that until the season of 1916-17 he ran a good percentage of Paramount pictures, but believed rentals too high, and failing to secure adjustments began buying pictures from other companies.

He said he was offered the "41" series at an average price of $85 per picture, but considered this the entire "41" program embraced too many pictures for his demand. Endavoring to select a special program, he was quoted prices ranging from $250 to $400, which he said, were out of his reach.

Harry Blackwell, manager of the New York exchange, came to see him, the witness said, he showed him his receipts, reports, and prices he was paying for Goldenwyn and (Continued on page 3)

Exhibitor Convention at an End; Cohen Denies Reported Deflections

Only 50 Delegates at Closing Session—Rochester Seems To Be The Favorite City for 1924 Meeting—Code of Ethics Prepared for Exhibitors

By DANNY

The Coliseum, Chicago—Only a handful of delegates and state leaders attended the closing of the M. P. T. O. conference yesterday morning. Less than 50 all told were on hand. The meeting place for next year's conference will be decided by the officials of the organization at a later date. Invitations were received from Rochester, N. Y., which appears to be the favorite, Kansas City, Atlantic City and Los Angeles.

Julian Brylawski delivered the report of the insurance committee. Resolutions opposing the music taxes and the repeal of all war taxes on admissions of 50 cents and under; opposition to daylight saving; against the length of features; opposing road shows; endorsement to movie chas and Mrs. Wallace Reid for her undertaking in the picture field were passed.

Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, Cinemat Club, Cleveland spoke and later was thanked for her co-operation. Cohen announced an effort would be made to get together with the counsel for the music publishers. He said that applications for new charters had been received from Northern Illinois, East Missouri and the city of Chicago. Despite reports the daily published, Cohen said Minnesota. Wisconsin continued to move in the national organization.

"much to the displeasure of those interested who would like to see this happen otherwise."

R. H. Liggett, Kansas denied the accuracy of the report in THE FILM DAILY, that Kansas delegates had walked out Thursday and asked that this denial be spread throughout the United States in that paper. Cohen said Massachusetts had contributed $3,100 to the national body and other contributions had been pledged. Joseph W. Walsh, East Hartford, Conn., was elected third vice-president (Continued on page 3) the place of W. W. Whitson, Eli W. Collins being elected vice-president then this code of ethics prepared for the industry as far as exhibitors are concerned.

These ethics declared that exhibition managers pledge themselves to run unpatrician immoral or unwholesome films; pledged full co-operation with state civic bodies and to all move- ments to raise the standards of conduct business and bring honor to the industry; to honestly advertise all its actions with no effort to over- praise or surreprietize them for sake of monetary gain; to deal fairly and honestly with our fellow men; to deliver the highest quality of service remembering that any dishonest or dishon- orable act will reflect discredit upon the whole and the motion picture industry "of which I am but a small part."

Sam Bullock declared he would not a thousand of these in Ohio theat- ers and suggested that the trade papers publish these for dis- tribute "why not THE FILM DAILY?" He asked. Immediately the representative of THE FILM DAILY offered to print them. Mike Comerford said he hoped that at the next meeting that difficulties would be ironed out and made a plea for harmony and arbitration.

Harris Davis said exhibitors should pay more for movie chats so that increase of the national organization receiving but $300 or $400 a week from the fee $3,000 or $4,000 should come in. Clarence Cohen, representing Cohen’s brother in the adjustment bureau at nation head- quarters told how the bureau had helped exhibitors chiefly small town operators and in some cases not even a cent has been sent in but has been settled," he said.

Just prior to the closing of the convention it was announced that a director would be elected as a chairman of the board, the next meeting at noon.

Forty More Book Clifton Film

W. W. Hodkinson reports that as a result of the simultaneous showing of Down to the Sea in Ships in 50 theaters in Greater New York last week, the film has been booked by more than 40 additional houses in the metropolitan district and many of the lower sections of Long Island and New Jersey. "Based on attendance records, we have estimated that over three quar- ters of an million dollars has been spent 'Down to the Sea in Ships' during the past week," says Hodkinson. "Its success is directly traceable to the impression which it has been merchandised both to the exhibitor and by the exhibitor to the public."
May asked an article to take the entire block of pictures at the First National Exchange, which Buxbaum flatly turned down.

The witness testified that shortly after his conference with Buxbaum, he visited the offices of the Famous Players of New York, and on the way he recorded in his book that the company had agreed with Buxbaum to May.

The city, at the same time, interviewing various townsmen about him (Dipson), Buxbaum admitted that he had talked to him personally and that he had told Ludwig that he had sold Buxbaum stories merely as a ruse to secure lower rentals.

Charged With "Stealing"

Dipson said that he knew when the Famous Players representative was in town "clocking" his house, and that shortly thereafter he was asked by Tom Brady, Buffalo exchange for Goldwyn, that he said that he was "stealing" Goldwyn pictures and that what business he had done on certain dates, the dates on which Famous representatives had clocked his house and on which he was shown the Goldwyn pictures. Dipson showed Brady his reports for those days and at the latter's suggestion was before a notary, setting forth his receipts for the past three months which Brady took with him, presuming all the adjustments and to prove the main Goldwyn office that he was not "stealing" his pictures as they had been for years.

Not long after his house had been clocked he was visited by Ed Hays, Buffalo exchange manager for First National Exchange, who showed the more pictures at a higher rental, declaring that his business was prosperous enough to justify higher rentals. Dipson subsequently secured the Paramount exchange of the firm. "I was afraid not to take them," he said, "and all the other companies were going sky-rockeet, so I decided to book the Paramount program, if possible."

When Vined, he booked the 41 series and seven from the 1921-22 program at an average price of $50.

The elimination of Paramount pictures from Olean, Dipson said, was soon followed by an influx of letters to the citizens of Olean, principally the newspapers. The Olean theaters were not showing the best pictures and suggesting that they personally ask the managers why they were not showing Paramount pictures. Many people did so, he said, and received the answer that the theaters were only too ready to do so if the prices were not too high. About 3000 of these letters were pouring in Olean each week.

Dipson testified. He took out some of these letters to Moritz at Buffalo, who admitted that they were sent out by Famous and showed him another letter which he said was shortly sent to out the first series. Moritz told him this was a customary practice, and that Famous was doing it to save the theater.

The witness admitted under cross-examination by Robert T. Swaine that Paramount offers exhibits the best consistent program. There is really a big demand by the public for Paramount, he said, because of the great reputation of that organization. It is necessary, he said, for the individual exhibitor to spend considerably more money in locally exploiting a picture than he would have to spend in putting over a Paramount picture. Dipson said he would rather take "Tom Hoof" and "Safety Last!" than the 12 Paramount super-specials at the same money.

The hearing was adjourned yesterday until Monday morning, when it is expected several important witnesses will have returned from the Chicago M.P.O. convention. H. K. Kent, who has been at the Famous sales convention at Los Angeles, is also expected to take the stand next week. The proceedings at Philadelphia could be expected to disclose some "hot stuff!"

Asked by a press representative when Marcus Loew would be placed on the stand as a witness, Attorney Fuller, in charge of the Government side of the case remarked dryly, "the same day we put Zukor on the stand."

Dear Sir:

Have you ever considered how important it is for every man on your staff to be posted every day on what's going on in this business?

Have you ever considered what it is worth in dollars and cents to have every one of your roadmen thoroughly acquainted every day with what is happening, and thus giving them a talking point and easing the contact with your prospective customer?

Have you ever considered how valuable this would really be? Many, almost all of the leading distributing companies subscribe for every one of their offices; and some for every salesman. They have found it "good business.' If it has so proven to them, what would it do for you?

RESUME OF FOURTH

Sydney S. Cohen

While No Open Breach Results, Many Delegates Signify That Presidents Are Being Elected. Future Financing of Exhibiting Compromise Candidate Fail. Cohen Says Require

The fourth national convention of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America was held at the Coliseum, Chicago, beginning Monday, May 21, and terminating officially on Friday, May 25. To all intents and purposes the meetings closed on Thursday with the re-election of Sydney S. Cohen to the presidency for a fourth term.

All through the various sessions it was apparent that the most vital question involved was the election of the new president. Such state units as Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, acting on the apparently firm decision of Cohen not to run for the presidency again, were influenced to launch campaigns of "favorite sons."

It was stated on the floor of the convention that Al Steffes, the Minnesota candidate, had made a special trip to New York to ascertain whether Cohen was firm in his intention not to enter the race again. It was further claimed that it was upon the definite assurance of Cohen that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances that the Steffes boom was fostered. T. L. Hays of Minneapolis on Wednesday scathingly attacked Cohen and charged him with bad faith. Hays charged that the nominations were framed in a room at the Sherman and that the convention was not being conducted in a democratic manner.

The chief topic of the pre-convention discussions was just this: who will be the next president? There were in the field W. A. Steffes of Minnesota, "Jim" Ritter of Michigan, Martin G. Smith of Ohio, F. J. McWilliams of Wisconsin, and among those who were expected to develop strength were "Dinny" Harris of Pittsburgh, C. A. Lick of Arkansas and, despite his declarations that he was not candidate, Sydney S. Cohen.

One of the questions discussed the Saturday and Sunday before the convention was whether Cohen would, under any circumstances be a candidate. When asked regarding this by a Chicago newspaper man, Cohen refused to discuss the matter. When pressed and asked if he would be a candidate if necessary to prevent a split in the organization, he declared that he had heard of nothing to indicate anything but that the convention would be very harmonious. He referred the question to the League of Nations—one of his pet phrases.

It was evident early that much depended, relative to the presidency, on the nature of the committees and how they work. The suggestion was offered that to organize the committees properly that the best thing to do would be to name the president of each state organization on the committee on resolutions; and the vice-president on the committee on rules, and the secretary of each state organization on the committee on credentials. This, it was said, would open the way to a "real" convention.

Before the first session opened it was quite apparent that if "steam roller" tactics were used several state units might be expected to walk out of the gathering.

Monday, May 21

The convention opened with the annual address of Sydney S. Cohen in which he made the following salient points:

"All pictures released today are super features. All exhibitors say the only thing super about them is the prices."

"If something isn't done, thousands of exhibitors in this country will be out of business next year."

"This is not an infant industry. It's an industry that has too many infants in it, in the producing and distributing end of the business."

"The proposed uniform contract is too cumbersome. All that's needed is an order blank and an understanding of an arbitration agreement."

Cohen spoke for nearly two hours, making recommendations and going over the many now well-known phases of the organization's activities.

The absorbing question facing the convention continued to be, who will be the next president? Upon this much depended.

This was especially so, because there was so much matter so much discontent that unless certain developments occur several state units indicated they would break away.

Although Cohen reiterated that he would not be a candidate there was a strong belief that his supporters and friends would not agree upon any of the candidates in the field, and, consequently, the point reached where it would be Cohen or no one. Those in a position to know said Cohen was sincere in his attitude and had tried to find a compromise candidate to meet the situation, but so far had failed.

Al Steffes on Monday was gaining ground and was then said to have about 120 votes. One of the interesting developments of the Steffes candidacy was that some of the New York delegates considered strong Cohen men were wearing Steffes buttons.

Those interested in Ritter made their campaign on the platform what Michigan had done should be carried out nationally. Considering the wonderful accomplishments of that organization, it was expected to develop a lot of votes, but those opposed to Ritter said the job was too big for him, that he hadn't the background to handle an organization of the size contemplated.

During the meeting of the executive committee it developed that for next year's program Cohen had outlined a very comprehensive development calling for an expenditure of a large sum probably in excess of $100,000. One of the interesting ideas was the establishment of six service stations scattered throughout the country to develop "and perfect organization work. One of the members of the committee commenting on this said it was fine to plan such an expenditure, but it was somewhat ironical considering that during the past year only about $13,000 had been paid into the national treasury. He added that the state organizations seemed willing to finance their own operations but evidently did not take much interest in the national body, at least judging from their lack of financial support to the organization.

Tuesday, May 22

The highlight of the Tuesday session was the enthusiastic passage of a resolution authorizing the uniform contract developed by the Hays organization.

The report of the special committee which made the findings was read by W. D. Burford of Illinois, who cited specific objections to the agreement. The objections included the following:

The clause dealing with advance payments and cash deposits.

The clause which denies exhibitors the right to make any eliminations in films except with the written or telegraphic consent of the distributor.

The clause relative to play dates.

The clause bearing on the time limit for the acceptance or the rejection of contracts.

That portion of the contract which includes arbitration as part of the contract and the fixing of penalties by the arbitration board.

The presidential race continued to be the most important topic of the M. P. T. O. convention. Sydney S. Cohen, although having announced repeatedly that he was not a candidate, still had sufficient strength to be elected.

The prediction was made in one quarter that Cohen could and possibly would be elected on the first ballot. Efforts to bring about a caucus of the Steffes and Ritter followers were then started in the hope that a combination might result which might prove sufficiently strong to defeat Cohen.

Cohen's followers and closest friends were informed of the situation which might confront the national organization should Cohen be re-elected. For a time it looked as if A. R. Pramer of Iowa might be named by the Cohen supporters as an offset. Pete Woodhull of New Jersey was also being considered in this connection.

In the morning, George Eastman spoke briefly. Dr. Rush Rhee of the Eastman School of Music told of the importance of music to pictures. Congressman Snyder of Utica, N. Y., told of the fraudulent stock operations within the industry, suggesting that exhibitors do all in their power to check such illegal practices.

Addresses were made by trade papers editors. Robert E. Welsh, editor of the Moving Picture World, extolled the work of Cohen to such an extent that his address was interrupted and for about two minutes there was wild cheering for Cohen. It was the first intimation of what might be expected if Cohen desired re-election.

Wednesday, May 23

It was practically decided to re-elect Cohen at a meeting which terminated at three o'clock Wednesday morning, when one delegation piling up one on the other in Cohen's room at the Sherman, convinced him that he must continue his work.

As it then stood when nominations were made, both Ritter of Michigan and Steffes of Minnesota were to withdraw. As a result, the prediction was made, upon authority, that both Michigan and Minnesota would withdraw from the national organization shortly after the convention ended.

At a caucus between these delegations it was decided not to "walk out" but to remain to the end and then resign from the organization. Apparently the situation then became acute.

Michigan paid in over $4,000 of the $13,000 paid into the national treasury this year. It was admitted that Michigan was the best organized state in the country with practically 97% of the Michigan exhibitors enrolled.

Consequently it seemed practically impossible to form an M. P. T. O. unit in that state. And those familiar with conditions in the Northwest realized how difficult it would be to organize the same sort of a unit in that section. Talk then ensued that other states might join with these two and form a sort of western organization.

There was talk of Wisconsin and Ohio combining to form an organization which would operate regardless of any other national exhibitor organization. Those opposed to the Cohen candidacy worked desperately in an effort to check this.

They made efforts to have Harry Crandall and several others run, but to no avail. Some of the Ritter Michigan men and Wisconsin delegates who were for Steffes insisted that Cohen "double cross" them, declaring that neither of these men would have run had they known that Sydney intended again running. They said they believed what he had been saying—that he was not and would not be a candidate.

Theodore L. Hays, of Minneapolis, a strong Steffes man, bitterly attacked Cohen and called his actions "unfair." This occurred when it became apparent that Cohen was to run again. Hays therefore withdrew Steffes' name, saying:

"Apparently we are wrong in believing that this is a democratic convention. Your nomination was made in a room at the Hotel Sherman during the early hours of this morning."

Immediately pandemonium reigned. Cohen's followers yelled to put Hays out. There were cat-calls and booing, and not until Cohen asked that the speaker have all the courtesies of the floor was Hays allowed to continue.

"You gentlemen are going to be well pleased with what I say in conclusion," went on Hays, adding that if Cohen had announced his candidacy that neither Michigan or Minnesota would have put a candidate in the field.

"Is this honest?" he asked, "No it's dishonest. Aren't we infringing on the slogan that an injury to one is the concern of all." Minnesota's only complaint is that it finds its efforts waved against stacked cards. If we don't get down to facts that which will come to Sydney Cohen will be an empty honor. He has been unfair. He went around advocating that the various states should name candidates so that a divided house would result and make it possible for a selected few to name a candidate."

Another Hollywood Picture With More Humor Than Thrills

"MARY OF THE MOVIES"
Film Booking Offices

DIRECTOR .................. John MacDermott
AUTHOR .................. Louis Lewyn
SCENARIO BY .................. Louis Lewyn
CAMERAMEN .......... George Meehan and Vernon Walker

AS A WHOLE........ A light comedy drama that has appeal for movie fans and should please a good majority

STORY........ Another Hollywood picture that, although not "big," entertains and amuses

DIRECTION .... Has made a pleasant enough little picture, with some good comedy bits and pleasing atmosphere

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Excellent
LIGHTINGS .................. Good
PLAYERS...... Marion Mack, a new addition to the screen, very pretty in title role. Creighton Hale hasn't very much to do opposite her. Quite a number of prominent stars lend atmosphere in bits

EXTERIORS...... Interesting shots of Hollywood and some good desert backgrounds

INTERIORS ................. Satisfactory
DETAIL ..................... Good
CHARACTER OF STORY...... Poor girl goes to film center to break into the movies. Finally gets her chance and becomes successful. Returns home just in time to rescue her family from poverty

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 6,500 feet

Following the success now being achieved by "Souls For Sale" comes this F. B. O. feature that also deals with a girl's struggles to break into the inner portals of stardom in the movie Mecca of Hollywood. Only in 'Mary of the Movies' there is more humor than struggle. There are none of the intensely dramatic moments of the Goldwyn feature, nor is there half as much of the studio stuff, but there is a goodly sprinkling of scenes in which many of Hollywood's brighter lights smile sweetly to the heroine, or sign their autographs in her book, or shake hands obligingly. And this is the sort of thing that movie fans will go a bit out of their way to see.

Director MacDermott maintains a lightness of touch all the way through. Mary's troubles are never taken very seriously, either by Mary or the spectator, and aside from the fact that she waits with many others—including Craig Biddle, Jr.—in the casting agents' offices—and finally has to take a job as a waitress in a lunch room frequented by the stars—she really hasn't much actual struggle. Then, too, she seems to be on friendly terms with so many of the famous ones, the question arises in your mind, "Why don't they help her?"

There are many very pleasing exteriors showing views of the palatial homes of different celebrities and there are also some splendid shots in the desert, showing the movie troupe, costumed as Arabs for a "Sheik" picture riding against the sky-line and galloping across the sands to avoid the approaching sand storm, which incidentally has been well handled. This storm is the one bit of excitement in the picture, and coming as it does along toward the end, it peeps up any interest that may have become slightly jaded during the preceding five reels. Following this is a touch of sure-fire hokum with Mary arriving in her home town and finding her folks auctioning the old home. There are some first rate comedy touches in this final scene that help the finish a lot.

Marion Mack, a really pretty girl, gets the comedy bits over in good shape, and appeals to the eye at all times. Creighton Hale is pleasing as her sweetheart and the rest of the cast is satisfactory. Among the celebrities who lend their charms for a minute or two to incidental but interesting bits are Bryant Washburn, J. Warren Kerrigan, Eva Novak, Wanda Hawley, Miss Dupont and many others.

Should Please Fans and Average Audience Without Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is another Hollywood picture that purports to tell the story of a girl's struggle to get a job in the movies, and while it hasn't any of the "bigness" of the popular "Souls For Sale" it has a certain entertaining and amusing charm about it that should make it a satisfactory evening's entertainment.

Don't promise any big thrills or they may be disappointed. Rather, play up the comedy idea and get the fans interested by telling them that many of their favorites have bits in this. If you don't make too many promises they won't expect too much and will be more satisfied with what they see. And that's better than getting big crowds in who expect another huge production and who may not be satisfied with the pleasing little comedy drama you have to offer them.

Glenn Hunter may be a real "find" on the legitimate stage but if he's going to hold the same position in pictures he'll have to have something more impressive than his latest vehicle, another expose of the modern jazz-crazed girl, which offers at best only an average entertainment. "Youthful Cheaters" deals with the adventures of a rich girl whose indulgent mother permits her to carry on a perpetual house party at their splendid Long Island mansion and consists chiefly in visualizing these affairs generously. It is quite all right at first and serves to give a good idea of the type of girl the heroine is but when this continues and nothing really interesting occurs, the story gradually loses interest instead of gaining it.

The development is slow and even the threatened downfall of the hero fails to create any unusual interest. The story is weak in situations, or at least lacking in situations sufficiently strong for feature purposes. The idea contained in "Youthful Cheaters" is really only fitted for a two reel entertainment and the elaboration provided through the scenario just helps to bring it out to so many reels without sustaining any definite interest. It is difficult to vote such incidents as a lot of modern jazz devotees passing the time away playing leap-frog as entertainment. The trouble with "Youthful Cheaters" is a lack of serious intent and an overindulgence in frivolous incident.

More might have been made of the change in character of the hero. It isn't convincing at all that a seafaring chap could be transposed into a lounge lizard as suddenly and completely as it happens to Glenn Hunter. Nor is the perpetual house party of the heroine's very plausible in spite of the fact that she has her mother's approval.

Glenn Hunter makes the most of a fairly unimpressive role. The star does not, however, show any unusual promises for a screen career if what he does, or is given to do, in "Youthful Cheaters" is taken for an example. He'll have to be given better material. His supporting cast is satisfactory but nothing out of the ordinary.

Story: Tad MacDonald leaves his father's ship and goes to live at the home of his fiancée, Lois Brooke, who makes Tad over from a he-man to a she-man, but eventually they both realize the foolishness of their jazz lives, marry and go back to the ship for a honeymoon.

About an Average Attraction—It's Value May Vary According to Crowd

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Youthful Cheaters" is about an average attraction regarding which you can make the usual comments without resorting to promises. The picture hardly warrants any special exploitation except if you happen to cater to a flapper crowd you might make a little extra fuss about the idea of the modern jazz girl heroine who fell in love with a seafaring fellow and made him over to suit her own ideals.

The atmosphere in connection with the heroine's pursuit of happiness and the various parties that are staged will undoubtedly please a certain crowd and for them the picture will probably prove satisfying. Announce the star's name with the title and if they remember him from "The Cradle Basher" it might serve to bring them in to see "Youthful Cheaters."

CHARACTER OF STORY……..Society couple shanghaied on schooner have many narrow escapes from clutches of huge beast who devours everyone else on board

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .. 5,447 feet

Pictures come and pictures go, but hokum goes on forever, and can always be relied upon to register in satisfactory manner if correctly applied. J. Parker Reade, Jr., has taken advantage of this fact in producing “The Last Moment” with the result that the picture will be considered good entertainment by those who like thrills, a touch of mystery and plenty of horror and creepy stuff.

The first few reels contain a goodly amount of detail that is not necessary to the bare plot as it afterwards develops, but it is interesting and gives an insight into the characters of the players. There are also in these early reels some humorous touches and one free-for-all fight that has plenty of action. The manner in which the society scenes, handled well in themselves, are contrasted with the action taking place at the same time in the water-front bar is effective in building up the story.

The situation on the boat has a good amount of interest and is worked up well during the storm in which the mysterious “thing” in the cage breaks loose and kills most of the crew. The following sequences of the many narrow escapes of the couple from the clutches of the “thing” which proves to be a huge gorilla, hold sufficient suspense to keep the audience interested and is even tense at times, but it would have been even more effective if there were less of this sort of thing.

The under-water fight of hero and ape is well done and brings up the finish in good shape. It was also a good bit of direction to show mostly flashes of the “thing” on board ship, using its shadow whenever possible, and thus heightening the illusion that it is really an animal and not the man in a monkey-suit that it really is.

The three principal players do a great deal to make “The Last Moment” enjoyable. Henry Hull has a role that suits his personality well and is seen to advantage as the bashful, bookish, timid young hero who comes forth in all the glory of his manhood when the heroine tells him of her love. Doris Kenyon’s personality also does much for the good of the film and Louis Wolheim is a typical brutal captain.

Story: “Nap” Cameron and Alice Winthrop, a society girl, visit a dive to bring home a man who has been hurt. Alice is in men’s clothes. The proprietor has them shanghaied. To command their obedience the captain of the schooner shows them a “thing” in a cage. During a storm the “thing,” a huge ape, breaks loose and devours the crew. Nap rescues the girl time and again. Finally she sights land and swims toward it, followed by Nap and the ape. Nap in an under-water fight with the ape wins out.

Depends a Good Deal On Your Crowd

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you know that your crowd enjoys “thrillers” of the creepy type, this is one for you. You have three good names in the principal players. Henry Hull has had this sort of a role in Griffith’s “One Exciting Night” and on the stage in “The Cat and the Canary,” both of which you can mention. Doris Kenyon’s name means something where she is a favorite, and Louis Wolheim is also well known. The fact that it is a Jack Boyle story also has its drawing power.

Of course there is no actual danger undergone by the players. It’s all hokum, but it will be enjoyed by those who like this sort of thing. It all depends on your crowd. A good musical score will help put it over. Advertising and catchlines will interest if you play up the mystery and the horror incident to the escape of the “terrible thing.”

CHARACTER OF STORY.......Mounted Police off-the penalty

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........ 4,944 feet

Probably fearing that picture patrons would forget all about the Canadian Royal Northwest Mounted Police if they didn't see an occasional picture with a story based on the heroism of these men, Universal has gone to the unnecessary trouble of making a picture that only serves to repeat a theme already threadbare from too much usage. "Burning Words" contains the regulation stock situations of the popular formula wherein a mounted is sent to bring in his own brother for murder. Added to it you have a glorious self-sacrifice twist in the attempt of the officer to save his brother by pleading guilty himself.

The only new angle, and probably not a particularly good one since audiences usually prefer a happy ending, is the idea of having the younger man actually pay the death penalty when it is finally proven that he committed the murder. It does get slightly away from the general run in this connection since it more frequently develops that a third party makes a deathbed confession to clear the supposed guilty one. But whether or not this twist, in spite of its originality, adds to the audience appeal is rather doubtful.

Stuart Paton has handled the story satisfactorily, developed it in a manner that sustains the interest evenly and with the exception of allowing the players to overact occasionally and injecting an overdose of sentiment at times, he has probably gotten the best possible re-

Roy Stewart is just a trifle too be-man looking for the soobby, self-sacrificing role of David Darby but he makes the most in spite of the handicap with Harold Goodwin rather well suited as his younger brother.

Stewart and Goodwin contribute some good emotional work in the climax although there is a little too much of it.

Harry Carter, as the dance hall proprietor, never fails to get over his eyebrow acting but his part is not big enough to make it annoying. Laura LaPlante is a pretty lead who, together with the romantic element, is kept too much in the background.

Story: David Darby promises his mother to look out for Ross, a younger brother. Both are in the servise of the Mounted when Ross kills Martin, who holds his I. O. U.'s for gambling debts. David is sent to bring him in, does so, but gives himself up as guilty to save Ross. Nan, a dancer in love with David, gives evidence which puts the blame finally on Ross, who pays the penalty. How David keeps the news from his mother and marries the girl he loves completes the story.

May Satisfy If They Are Not Tired of the Northwest Formula

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Maybe your folks like Northwest Mounted Police stories. You ought to know whether or not you can satisfy them with one and will have to be the judge on this one, "Burning Words," Universal's latest release with Roy Stewart as the star. If you don't think they are tired of this formula, or in case you haven't given them too many pictures dealing with the Mounted Police, you may be able to get it over without a great many kicks.

Where Roy Stewart is a popular favorite you might make special mention of his name and play up the picture with catchlines on the order of: "If you were sent out to bring in your own brother for a murder he had committed what would you do? See how the situation is handled in 'Burning Words,' a Universal picture starring Roy Stewart at the blank theater." Poor Picture But Probably Has Audience Appeal for Certain Crowd

"TEMPTATION"

AS A WHOLE........... Very old order of movie hokum that will probably be termed good audience stuff for certain audiences

STORY............. Improbable situations and familiar; serve adequately for display purposes

DIRECTION............. Average; injects plenty of atmosphere and plays directly to small town audiences

PHOTOGRAPHY ............... Standard
LIGHTINGS ..................... All right
PLAYERS............. Bryant Washburn too good for such material; Eva Novak fair and others Phillips Smalley, June Elvidge and Vernon Steele

EXTERIORS ..................... None
INTERIORS ...................... Adequate
DETAIL ....................... Suffices

CHARACTER OF STORY....... Rich man wagers with friend that luxury will spoil any woman, picks a subject and sees it work out, but she realizes her weakness in time to save happiness

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 6,000 feet

"Temptation" contains the sort of situations generally conceded to supply audience appeal for a good majority of picture patrons and it is true that many of them find agreeable entertainment in just such a theme as that found in this latest C. B. C. feature. There is a general atmosphere of luxury with a lavish display of it, gay parties and other evidences of money squandered to satisfy their taste if it happens to run along these lines.

The story itself is a much worn one with little in the way of genuine situations or meritorious incident. Everything happens along pretty much as you expect and the director never succeeds in arousing anything but average interest in the spending fury of Eva Novak, as the young wife. You know eventually that she will come to her senses, realize her mistake, and retain her husband's love. It all happens along in a more or less humdrum fashion with the parties previously mentioned supplying the only deviation. And they get rather hilarious, particularly the one where Miss Novak drinks more than is good for her and when she discovers her draped gown will not permit of a hula-hula dance, has one of the gentlemen rip up the skirt in ribbons and succumbs after a wild dance.

All of this will appeal to a certain clientele that will just "love" to see how the young wife gets rid of her husband's earnings. Miss Novak lives up to the part adequately and wears numerous attractive costumes and wraps that will win the approval of women patrons. From an acting standpoint she isn't likely to make a startling impression. Phillips Smalley, in the role of the financier who wagers that any woman will be spoiled by too much luxury, has the best acting part and makes the most of it. Bryant Washburn is the get-rich-quick husband.

Story: Marjorie Baldwin, newlywed and happy in a small apartment, makes the acquaintance of Mrs. Martin, who introduces her to Arnold, a financier. Arnold wagers with his friend, Allen Morgan, that simple though she seems, Marjorie, like all other women, can be spoiled by luxury. Arnold makes it possible for Baldwin to increase his income whereupon Marjorie gets the spending fever. Not until her husband becomes attentive to Mrs. Martin and is equally hungry for gay times, does Marjorie realize that too much money has spoiled them both, so they resolve to quit the gay times and settle down, while Arnold loses his bet.

All Depends Upon the Class You Cater To

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It is all a matter of whether or not you have the right crowd for this one. Second and third class houses, or the customary downtown trade, will undoubtedly find it a first rate one for their box offices. It won't do for a family trade, a conservative clientele, or those who prefer a more probable and sincere story.

You have a good title to work with and can play it up readily with catchlines such as: "What is 'Temptation'? In this instance it is luxury. See how it nearly wrecks a home and the lives of two people." Still in the lobby will give an idea of what they are to expect and Bryant Washburn's name can be capitalized on where he is popular. Also use the names of Eva Novak and June Elvidge.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION........4,617 feet

It may be that the variation in atmosphere from regulation westerns to the frozen north will prove acceptable to Jones’ admirers and that they will be satisfied with his latest, “Snowdrift,” even though the picture lacks the pep and action of the usual Jones picture. James B. Hendryx’s story serves for a fair vecicle for the star but requires little of him in the way of real work. It isn’t until the very last reel that Jones has anything very, much to do and then there is a corking fine fight of fairly long duration during which things do happen and it brings the story to a far more exciting finish than you expect, and a wholly welcome one after the previous more or less slow moving business.

The theme consists chiefly of character development with a plot that is rather slight otherwise. You have hero Jones, a gambler, who just can’t be separated from his luck until the “hooch” gets in its deadly work.
There follows a long stretch of incidents in which hardly anything at all happens and the monotony is only broken by long, unnecessary sub-titles that fail to make the picture any more interesting. There is nothing to get excited about until the climax and that is far too long to have to wait for a story to pep up.

Of course you know pretty well in advance of what happens that the ending will be sweet and pretty, for hero and that his Indian love will be happy in the knowledge that she is really a white girl. The continuity holds no illusions and Director Dunlap hasn’t been able to do any more than an ordinary job in the direction. He supplies a satisfactory production with a plentiful amount of realistic atmosphere that gives it a good pictorial appeal. There are numerous fine shots of the north country with the always interesting views of the dog sleds in action.

The romantic element may appeal to the women folks but it won’t do to hold Jones’ men admirers. They want something more thrilling from the star and they don’t get it in “Snowdrift” until the very end. It’s doubtful if they’ll wait that long. The star does well enough and his supporting cast is capable.

Story: The “Ace” goes north to become a man again, meets Snowdrift, a half-breed girl, and falls in love with her. Later she is kidnapped by Claw, a trader and an enemy of the Ace. The Ace follows to the dance hall, a fight follows in which the Ace is victorious and Kitty, in love with him, is killed trying to protect him. The Ace then tells Snowdrift that her Indian foster-mother told him to tell her both her parents were white.

Don’t Make Promises For It Unless Star Can Put It Over

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Where they aren’t too critical and won’t kick because of the lack of action and thrills you may suit them with “Snowdrift.” It is fairly likely, however, that Jones’ admirers will expect more excitement from him but possibly the first rate fight at the finish will do to send them out satisfied. For the benefit of your women patrons tell them about the romantic side of the story in connection with hero’s love for a half-breed girl.

The title should be sufficient to let them know what to expect and stills in the lobby will indicate that the picture is good to look at. Many of the backgrounds are very good to look at and where northern atmosphere appeals to them, you can talk about this point.
Use the star’s name and tell them his latest picture is different from what he usually does.

Probably a Disappointment for Star’s Admirers in “Double Dealing”

Hoot Gibson in “DOUBLE DEALING”
Universal

DIRECTOR .................. Henry Lehrman
AUTHOR .................... Henry Lehrman
SCENARIO BY .............. George C. Hull
CAMERAMAN .............. Dwight Warren
AS A WHOLE.............Far below the average and the poorest Hoot Gibson picture in some time

STORY.............. Might have served for a slap-stick two reeler but never comes near providing for a feature

DIRECTION.............. Couldn’t seem to decide whether to make it a slap-stick or a burlesque and not a good job on either

PHOTOGRAPHY ............ Fair
LIGHTINGS ................ Not given enough attention STAR................. Won’t retain a following with many like this SUPPORT.............. Eddie Gribbon and Otto Hoffman overact; others Betty Francisco, Helen Ferguson, Gertrude Claire

EXTERIORS ................. Ample
INTERIORS ................. All that is required
DETAIL ..................... Fair

CHARACTER OF STORY...... Schemers sell hero land supposed to be phoney but it turns out to be worth thirty thousand

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.... 5,105 feet

Henry Lehrman, erstwhile short reel comedy director, is doubly responsible for this very weak Hoot Gibson feature inasmuch as he is both author and director and has done a fairly poor job in each instance. In the first place Lehrman’s story is far from suitable for feature purposes. It contains no genuine comedy situations and is too far-fetched for serious treatment. In an apparent effort to cover up the shortcomings, Lehrman has combined drama with slap-stick and burlesque—quite a combination to say the least, and with results that fail to make for entertainment.

In two reels it might have done nicely, but to take material with such meager possibilities and try to make a five reel picture of it doesn’t show good judgment in the first place. Secondly, the country boob idea has already been worked to death and with each repetition becomes more exaggerated. Gibson is far more at home on a ranch or in the regulation western atmosphere than he is in an ill-fitting suit and celluloid collar and if he is to retain a following, Universal will have to do better in the way of giving him appropriate vehicles.

The star’s admirers have come to expect certain things of him and after several of his recent releases which have supplied entertainments of a good order, they’ll surely be disappointed with “Double Dealing.” The picture is almost entirely without action except for one fight, the only time when the piece threatens to get interesting, but the interest is short-lived.

Lehrman has only succeeded in dragging his story out to feature length through a lot of unnecessary footage and slap stick stuff that gets laughs not because it is funny but because it is so ridiculous. Eddie Gribbon and Otto Hoffman help consume a lot of time through foolish antics that only impress from the viewpoint of the individual’s overacting. Helen Ferguson and Gertrude Claire represent the serious, or dramatic vein, and Betty Francisco is used alternately for comedy and drama. The cast is fair on the whole.

Story: Hero Ben Slowbell loses his store and is further inveigled by Jobson when he pays him a thousand dollars for property supposed to be worthless. Jobson tries to get back the deed when an out-of-town company offers him $10,000 for it. How Ben discovers the fraud and later sells the deed himself for $30,000 is arrived at after considerable detail that is never funny.

Will Hardly Do Unless You Don’t Have to Worry About Kicks

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Admirers of Hoot Gibson are bound to be disappointed with his latest, “Double Dealing,” a picture wholly unlike anything he has previously appeared in and by far the poorest of his pictures. Gibson’s recent releases have been of a first rate order and provided entertainment for those who like action and excitement. They won’t find it in “Double Dealing” and they’re going to miss it.

Don’t make promises for it and if you want to retain the star as a favorite it might be better to let this one go by and trust that the next will bring him back to where he belongs. The only chance with it is for a double feature day program or with an A1 short reel accompanying program. If you do elect to show it, give them the title and let it go at that.

"Back Stage"—Our Gang—Pathé
Type of production ........................................ 2 reel comedy

Once again the "Gang's" all here and they are first seen this time running a weird and wonderful omnibus that only the kids in this gang could construct. It runs by donkey-power, the donkey being installed in the body of an old flivver, and tempted on by means of a box of oats opened and shut on signal by little Farina, who has a private coop in the otherwise empty hood. It isn't so much what these kids do, as the way they do it, that gets the laughs. They are absolutely natural at all times. The chief riot of this particular comedy occurs when the manager of a show engages the gang to help him run his performance that night, all of his company having deserted him because of his lack of funds. Needless to say to those who have ever seen this bunch of rascals in operation, the show is a riot. One act in particular is a magician who makes rabbits come out of hats and fire jump from a liquid held in his mouth. The little colored kiddie, gets hold of the bottle containing the liquid and goes around scaring folks to death by breathing fire at them. It sure is a laugh. If you're not using these comedies you're missing the best short reeler money can buy.

"The Kid Reporter"—Century—Universal
Type of production ........................................ 2 reel comedy

Once again Baby Peggy scores the high-water mark for being one of the cutest kiddies on the screen. She is a delight, and although the picture is nothing more or less than a vehicle for the Baby, it will be thoroughly enjoyed on her account. This time she is a stenographer on a newspaper. The editor-in-chief offers a promotion to any reporter who discovers the person who stole a society woman's jewels. Peggy, disguised, in moustache and monocle, finally brings back not only the story but the jewels themselves. A very cute two-reeler.

"Sold at Auction"—Hal Roach—Pathé
Type of production ........................................ 2 reel comedy

Seth Pollard certainly lets himself get knocked around and abused in this comedy, in which he is assisted by Marie Mosquini. The basic idea has certain elements of humor and where they like knock-about comedy or where Seth is a favorite this may get over in good shape. Seth is hurt in an accident and is carried into an auctioneer's shop. Being a good business man, the auctioneer uses Seth as a ballyhoo for the sale of first-aid kits. He does so well that he decides to hire Seth and stage an act outside his store everyday another article is put up for sale. Thereafter Seth is knocked out with blackjacks, brass knuckles and various other instruments of torture. It's a good two-reeler of its type.

"Better Than Gold"—"Tales of the Old West"—Universal
Type of production ........................................ 2 reel western drama

This is another of the series of two reel western dramas Universal is releasing under the brand name of Tales of the Old West, starring Roy Stewart. Gertrude Olmstead is the pretty heroine in each of the stories. This one, while it never keeps the audience in much suspense as to the final outcome, provides satisfactory entertainment for those who like westerns of this type. There isn't much excitement, but the story unfolds smoothly and the villain gets his just deserts at the finish. Phil Barton, a surveyor, is in love with Kate Norris, whose father owns the general store at Deer Point. He learns that a man has swindled his mother and simultaneously a stranger comes to Deer Point, buys a half-interest in the store and spreads the news of a gold rush. Ultimately the stranger is found to be the villainous swindler and is punished accordingly.

"Their Love Grewed Cold"—Earl Hurd—Educational
Type of production ........................................ 1 reel novelty

Bobby Bumps and his miniature film company is by this time familiar to many film patrons and they can always be sure of an interesting and amusing reel when you advertise this branch of comedy. This one again deals with the young director's troubles when he attempts to produce a film with the little cut-out cartoon as the leading man. The novelty of the idea and the clever execution makes the film thoroughly enjoyable. There is only one point that might have been a little better and that is the lighting in some of the scenes.

"Amateur Night On the Ark"—Aesop Fable—Pathé
Type of production ........................................ 1 reel cartoon

This is one of the most amusing cartoons of this series yet seen. The animals stage an amateur vaudeville performance in a make-shift theater on the original Ark. There is some humorous business when little Mr. Mouse tries to get by the door-man by hiding behind Mr. Hippo and his wife. The animals all arrive, "two by two," and seem to enjoy the show, until in a wrestling bout one of the animals heads down off to disclose Noah himself inside the skin. Needless to say, he is forced to swim for the rest of the journey.

"Crystal Jewels"—Fox
Type of production ........................................ 1 reel educational

This is a very interesting educational reel dealing with the manner in which New York City is provided with its water supply. The huge tunnel built through the heart of the Catskills to the city is shown both in diagram and in actual photographs, giving a comprehensive idea of the distance the water travels before it reaches its final destination. There is a cute bit at the finish showing three of the city's children sampling a glassful of the "crystal jewels."

"Spook"—Aesop Fable—Pathé
Type of production ........................................ 1 reel animated cartoon

Henry Cat is seen to have mediumistic tendencies and learns how to call departed spirits to him at will. The cartoon is genuinely humorous as are the large majority of this series. Farmer Al Paifa desires to go to the spirit world to recover some money loaned to a departed friend. Henry Cat hits him on the head and he dreams a weird experience in a heaven where the "spirits" hold mass meetings and ride through the air in sail-boats all of which is made plausible by the dream-ending.
RESUME OF FOURTH M. P. T. O. CONVENTION

Immediately Gus Schmidt, who was acting as chairman, declared Hays' remarks about stacked cards was a reflection against the chairman as well as the delegates. Just as it seemed as if the row was over, during the naming of the board of directors it broke loose again when an effort was made to name Steffes and Ritter on the board, both refused to serve. Steffes declaring that after the treatment accorded him he did not care to be affiliated with the organization, declaring Cohen had repeatedly told him he (Cohen) would not be a candidate.

At the banquet at the Sherman Cohen announced that a committee of the national organization would meet with Will H. Hays and also those independents not aligned with the Hays organization and make an effort to straighten out various existing problems. He also announced the possibility of the M. P. T. O. making one picture to be distributed for the benefit of the national organization and suggested that if the organization started a bank patterned along the lines of the Federation of Labor banks that they could use the deposit money advanced to companies as a nucleus and that this would help finance producers and save them from the extortionate rates of money lenders.

Marcus Loew pointed out that something must be done this fall regarding increased admissions in view of high operating costs and increased cost of picture production. The big question he said, was what 'the public would do. He said the Loew organization was now testing out in combined vaudeville and picture houses.

Thursday, May 24

A fiasco resulted at the M. P. T. O. meeting Thursday when following the "massive election" of Sydney S. Cohen to the presidency fully half the delegates marched out of the hall.

While there was no opposition openly to Cohen the action of over half of the delegates in walking out, thus refusing to remain to contribute to the fund desired is an indication of their ideas. In other words, that of an organization practically half wrecked. Cohen's followers must raise $30,000 to meet the deficit of last year as well as provide funds for its operation during the ensuing year.

How this can be accomplished with the numerical strength of what was left of the national organization was a problem, practically insolvable at the moment. When the leading figures among those who walked out were questioned as to their plans, they said they had no idea of quitting the national organization, but also that they had no idea of contributing to its support under existing conditions. In other words they will not pay up while Cohen and his cohorts "run" the national body.

So many state delegations were among those left and there was so much of a mixup as to where delegates were that it was impossible to mention all of the delegations which left. Among them, however, were Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, many of the Illinois and Indiana delegations, some of the Southern and Mid-West delegations and others.

Immediately the delegates started leaving the hall there was tremendous confusion, and the work of electing the vice-presidents proceeded in a middle of excitement and annoyance. The Cohen supporters were both surprised and puzzled. They did not seem to know what to do. Cohen watched the retreating crowd with an expression of amazement.

All during the night up to three o'clock, efforts were made to straighten out the difficulties. Finally a proposition was made that Ritter could have the support of the Cohen organization providing Cohen was named chairman of the board. This was rejected by the Michigan people who said that if Ritter was to run the organization he must be left independent as to operation and not be hampered by the board of directors in any way.

One of the primary purposes of having Ritter elected was to insure the raising of the $100,000 dollar fund. In the Michigan organization are two men who have proven "wizards" at this and it was hoped to have them operate on the floor and raise the money needed. It was important that this be done inasmuch as the national organization is today in debt to the extent of over $25,000. With the failure of negotiations with Michigan the whole proposition was left up in the air. A meeting was scheduled for ten o'clock Wednesday in the hope of making an arrangement of some kind, but this failed to develop anything. When the convention opened the situation was practically as it stood after the nominations closed Wednesday.

The session opened with McWilliams withdrawing his name as a candidate. W. W. Whitson, California, also withdrew his name as third vice-president and Woodall as a nominee for the presidency. This left Cohen the only nominee. He asked for recognition and then made a long address going into the reasons for his candidacy, declaring he did not want the office and had no idea of being a candidate until leaders of many states on Tuesday petitioned him to run. He said he had offered to support Ritter of Michigan if he would take the presidency and offered to pay his own expenses and go to Washington and watch the legislation there during the coming session of Congress, but he said that when the proposition was put up to Ritter that Ritter's demand were such that the result would stultify many of the state leaders.

After commenting on Theodore Hay's actions, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue, as undiplomatic, he read a letter received from Ritter stating what in the latter's opinion the new president should carry out to bring success to the next administration. Ritter asked that no less than $100,000 be subscribed before the convention closed; that, in addition, $30,000 more be raised to meet the deficit of this year; that a paid organizer at $15,000 work to reorganize and solidify the state organizations and that the national body devote all of its efforts except on extraordinary occasions to organizing; that an executive secretary be secured and paid $10,000 annually; that the president is to have a salary of not more than $10,000 annually; that the headquarters be moved to a more central point than New York to aid in organization work and that offices for conferences be maintained in New York and that in addition to the named directors that Cohen, Steffes and a Michigan man be added.

This, Cohen commented, was entirely impracticable at this time. He then said that his record during three years was his platform and then the excitement started. Finally, however, tellers were appointed and the states were polled. A number passed voting and others were not on hand but the results gave Cohen 234 votes. Against him were 81 votes, but many others did not vote.

The other officers are: Joe Mogler, Missouri, first vice-president; Martin G. Smith, Ohio, the second vice-president; W. W. Whitson, California, third vice-president; E. W. Collins, Jonesboro, Ark., fourth vice-president; and William B. Reeder, Jr.; treasurer.

Metro Plans 36
An All-Special Line-up for the Fall Convention Here This Week

The Metro field force, which meets at the Astor on Wednesday, will be acquainted with the details of the company's schedule for the fall. It is planned to release 36 pictures, and each is designed to fit into the attractive fall line-up. One of the new highlights is expected to be "Scaramouche," which Rex Ingram is now producing in Hollywood. The picture has been in work for some time and has been variously hailed as Ingram's most elaborate effort to date. The cast, in part, will include director especials from Ingram, Allan Holubar, and Edward Sloman, and star series from Buster Keaton, Jackie Coogan, and Viola Dana.

Chicago—Chaos
Out of the chaos of Chicago last week comes this as a warning to the exhibitors of this country: when you really get an organization together which will work, see to it that either an outside man of national reputation runs it, or that if an exhibitor has the job, that he be not allowed to hold the honor for more than two years at the most, and preferably one.

By long odds it possible find someone as the producers found in Hays, and let him go the hat for you. Then perhaps you will escape the messy and fumbling results which have developed in the past three years very definitively, and for many years prior to this.

Because, gentlemen exhibitors, you might just as well know this as any other time: you will either organize a real honest to God exhibitors' organization of your own, function, co-operate and work out problems all along the line, or this will happen:
The Hays organization will assemble a lot of exhibitors and if they do, and if they get it started you will never break it, you will never lick it. And it will be the wrong kind of an exhibitor organization, because it will be built and founded by men who themselves naturally look at your problems from another angle.

This isn't intended as a reflection on the possible methods of operation of the Hays organization—when it comes—but you know better the kind of food you like than someone whose appetite isn't so good. You have different ideas, that's all. And the producers cannot be expected to see your problems as you exhibitors do.

But just the same you will have it. And once this is established what are you going to do about it? Orate a lot? Resolate some more? Or won't you just be out of the running so far as your national body is concerned.

Because the Hays organization needs an exhibitors' co-operative to working along, helping along in various ways. Hays made several efforts to work with Cohen, as head of the M. P. T.
O. of A. And Cohen "gave him the air" as one of his close friends classically commented. Yet at the banquet a few weeks ago Cohen had the monumental nerve to declare that upon his return to New York, at the close of the Convention, he intended—with a committee—to await on Hays and try to straighten out some of the problems existing between the two ends of the business. This, despite that two days previously Cohen's hand-picked resolutions committee and hand-picked operators jammed a resolution through the convention condemning the uniform contract which the Hays organization has put into effect throughout the country.

Jammed it through when Cohen knew all the time that the great bulk of his membership would either sign that contract or get no pictures for next fall. Jammed it through when—in all likeliness—he had either signed one himself, or knows that he will—or get no pictures for next season.

The uniform contract is not particularly good in many ways. But the Hays people admit that. They say it's a step in the right direction. And it is. And Cohen must know that. But even so he prevented his organization from lining up with it and trying to improve it.

New Deals On Selznick-American Releasing Transaction Understood To be the First of Several Like It

It is understood that officials of Selznick Distributing have several new deals under advisement, which would increase the product available through that company to a considerable degree.

The deal with American Releasing whereby this company will disband its exchanges and turn over its pictures to Selznick for handling through the Selznick sales force and exchanges is expected to be the first of several others along exactly similar lines.

While no details are available at the moment, a definite announcement may be looked for in the near future.

F. P. Gets Winnipeg Theater
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Winnipeg—The latest acquisition to the chain of theaters operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corp., is the Allen, one of the largest houses in Western Canada. Dominion Films Ltd., sought an injunction restrain-ing Allen Winnipeg Theaters, Ltd., from handling the Allen over to Fa-umous on grounds of priority. Chief Justice Allen ruled that Dominion ever actually had possession of the theater.

What will happen? The contract will be in effect, and the men who seek to improve it will—if any effort is made in this direction—will not include representatives of the only organization that should help—the national exhibitor body of this country.

But that’s the Cohen way of doing things.

For three years this sort of thing has been going on. For three years exhibitors have paid into the national organization something like $100,000—not much, all things considered—but still a lot. Especially when you bear in mind what they have not got for their money.

Take a look. Let’s see. Last year what was accomplished? Take, for instance, the attack on Famous Players made deliberately for but one purpose—to keep the flag waving and get a hurrah into the life of the convention. Because all of those who know what Cohen’s friends had in mind for the Cleveland gathering was something far away from the perils of Mrs. Dodge and like problems.

The national organization has done some things in Washington. It has had its finger in several matters, and at times some clever politics has been played in a manner as an indication has appeared as if it was really doing something fine and great-like, for instance, tying in with Dr. Francis Holley and his Bureau in Washington. Which sounds a lot more official than it really is. (By the way, what has become of Dr. Francis Holley?)

But sum up the big task. Forget the vastness of promise and look straight in the eye as to performance and ask yourself, you exhibitors who have put up—and the record shows few enough of you have put up—whether you have got your money’s worth?

And then figure out—away from the heat of politics—whether the Western folk were smart or wrong, in walking out before putting another dollar into the existing organization. Because they asked themselves just this: “Why?” And “What’s the use?”

In the Courts

Charles H. Peddrick, Jr., filed a default judgment for $3,245 in the Supreme Court yesterday against the Triumph Pictures Corp. for salary due under a contract made last year, by which he was to be general manager for nine months.

When two suits brought by Augustus Thomas against the Arco Prod. were called for trial before Supreme Court Justice Colahan, the defendant confessed judgment in one case for $20,000 and in another for $35,000. Thomas sued for the former sum as his share of the receipts of "The Capitol" and "The Volcano," and in the other action for his share of the receipts of "As a Man Thinks."

A default judgment for $598 has been filed in the City Court by World Film against Rialto Prod., on a note signed by Louis T. Rogers as president and S. J. Seabrook, vice president. The defendant alleged that the note arose out of the leasing of the film, "Nine Seconds from Heaven," and that the claim was settled by the return of all other films the removal of the defendant's office from the plaintiff's quarters, and the payment to plaintiff of all accounts due on the film.

An application for an injunction has been filed in the Supreme Court by Apel Prod., Inc., against the Commercial Traders Cinema Corp., to restrain the defendant from interfering with the plaintiff's films, "The Trail of the Law," "The Man Who Paid," and "The Wolf's Fangs." The plaintiff alleges that it borrowed money from the defendant to finance the films, and assigned to the defendant an interest of 80% in the gross receipts. The papers state that when an agreement between the parties was made last fall, the plaintiff owed $10,922. The Apel Prod. now states that the defendant is threatening to sell the films, and that it has no right to do so.

wick's Two Year Output David P. Howells has closed an important contract with the Selznick Distribution Co. for the entire for-gien rights to "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law." The contact covers all foreign territories ex-cpt. Australia.

Howells has also arranged to handle all Selznick releases for the next two years abroad. It is probable that by virtue of the taking over of the American Releasing Corp. by Selznick, Howells will sell some of that product. The details of this have not as yet been worked out.
American Releasing's product has been sold in some countries abroad, but where it has not, it is very likely that Howells will handle it.

Contract In Work
Distributors Gradually Putting Unif-m dramatics into Actual Operation
Throughout the Country

Distributors who are members of the Hays organization are gradually spreading the use of that agreement throughout the country. While it is to be expected that the contract has not been placed in general operation, the branch managers and sales forces of all the important distributors have explained its workings.

It is understood that one portion of the motion pictures at each of the four territorial sales conventions of Famous Players was devoted to a discussion of the contract and its possible method of operation. Before it becomes generally operative, it will probably undergo several changes, the need for which have developed since the final draft was made.

The settlement of the arbitration problem engaged the attention of the Hays office for a time. Charles C.
Pettyjohn and Lloyd D. Willis then made a tour of the country and succeded in lining up existing F. I. L.
M. Boards of Trade and reviving the organizations where they had become inactive until, at the moment, it is understood the arbitration problem has been settled in practical form in the "fourth" city of the country. This means that the uniform contract will meet with no obstacles in those cities, des\pite the resolution passed by the M. P. T. O. not to support the uniform contract. In each instance where the F. I. L. M. Board of Trade will work under the arbitration system, the exhibitors in that city are represented by representation equal to that of the exchange's organization.

Pearson Finish New Betty
Balfour Film

By ERNEST W. FREEDMAN

The Film Renter and M. P. News
(Special to the Film Daily)

London—When Betty Compson arrived in England she was greeted by a big gathering of exhibitors and the press. Sir Charles Higham was in the chair and many enigmatic speeches were delivered. Miss Compson has already commenced work on "Woman to Woman."

Betty Blythe made a very brief stay in this country leaving at once for Berlin, where Herbert Wilcox is filming "Chu Chin Chow." Reports to hand indicate that it is making fine progress.

"Hunting Big Game" opened for a two-weeks run at the London Pavilion a week ago and is finishing a very successful run.

Horace Judge has settled down to his duties at the Palace after a banquet in his honor which was held three days after his arrival.

Welsh, Pearson have completed a new picture featuring Betty Balfour. It is entitled "Love, Life and Laughter." A picture will be on its way to the United States very soon.

Boston—Harry Browning, former manager of the Palace at Windsor Locks, has arrived here to assume the management of three local houses.

Will Film Carnarvon's Death

(Special to the Film Daily)

Berlin—Cserogy-Film will produce a film shortly based on the death of Lord Carnarvon, who is said to die from the bite of a snake while excavating at Luxor. The picture will be called "The Vengeance of Pharaoh."

Texas Towns Overserved?

(Special to the Film Daily)

Taylor, Tex.—The announcement of a new theater here has caused much comment, inasmuch as the town is already taken care of by Bead & Hole. The same situation has arisen in many other nearby towns that are already overserved.

Operators Stopped From Picketing

(Special to the Film Daily)

Baltimore—Judge Duffy recently stopped operators from picketing front of the Waverly. The operators were a result of a temporary agreement obtained by Ben Cluster, the Crystal Amusement Co. The agreement was reached, allowing the operators to picket, provided they mention on their banners, the name of other theaters not employing union operators.

THE UNITED STATES POST OFFICE EMPLOYES
Here’s an Idea

Want to boost business?
Want to wake things up and get more men interested in coming to your house?

Then give them the right to smoke. You’re shaking your head. Figuring, probably, that you will drive a lot of people away—especially women of a particular type. Maybe you will. But the chances are the increased patronage will far and away offset your loss in this, and you will develop an army of fans that today doesn’t exist.

Smoking is allowed in every moving picture house in England. Not confined to the balcony; not restricted to any part of the house, but men smoke in any part of the house where they happen to have seats.

All of you know this: that the average man attending your show comes only because his wife, or his girl, or his sister or mother wants him to take her. If he could while away the time smoking it would be a lot better for him, and after awhile, when they had acquired the habit of seeing pictures they would be a part of your “regulars,” dependable and constant in their attendance. Men, more than women, are creatures of habit.

Newspaper Opinions

"Garrison's Finish"—Allied Prod. & Dist.—Capitol

AMERICAN—Jack Pickford seen on screen again after two years' absence in jockey story of the old familiar type.

EVENING JOURNAL—The photography has a good deal of interest, and in spots is photographically excellent. Mr. Pickford gives his best effort for complaint and Miss Bellamy is her own radiant best.

EVENING WORLD—Jack, of course, plays the role of the jockey, and plays it well, too—and, take it all in all, "Garrison's Finish" is about as full of thrills and chills as one could ask of any film.

GLOBE—There was apparently not starting amount of originality displayed in the novel from which the picture was made, and the director and adapter have added nothing to it. A more obvious and mechanical plot could hardly have been concocted.

HERALD—"... ancient stuff is the basis situation in "Garrison's Finish."..." [Etta] Harris, who is responsible for the continuity, is a screen writer of high standing and sure salary. He should know better than to sort to this variety of bunk.

MAIL—"Garrison's Finish"—"... is a delightful bit of entertainment telling of racing horses and those who race them. Most of the scenes are in the open and there is no aptness, the climax of course coming with a thrilling race.

That race is one of the best we have seen on the screen.

SUN—But certainly it seems rather bad and obvious on the screen, and while the Derby pictures are quite exciting, as the also a gentle interest in horse racing would occur if the hero, by some almost miraculous intervention of fate, didn't win the race.

TELEGRAM—"... a colorful and thrilling screen transcript of the tale.

TIMES—"... is one of those old-time racing melodrama filled with tears and suspense..." Miss Bellamy is quite good, and Pickford is a capable little actor.

WORLD—It is, of course, the story of the trainer and his horse, and the great deal of atmosphere gives the picture moments of charm.

"Fog Bound"—F. P. L.

EVENING WORLD—Dorothy Dalton, the most unusual and unadulterated movie stuff all the way through. "..."

This picture recalls the old days of the industry—those beloved days of its "fancy"—and for that reason it may be watched with interest. The fog scenes and the night photography are good. About all that can be said for Miss Dalton is that she is up to the standard set by her recent pictures.

EVENING WORLD—Dorothy Dalton, the most unusual and unadulterated movie stuff all the way through.

GLOBE—"... Fog Bound," appears to be one of the annual crop of "weeek Lakers," which is offered for the first signs of hot weather.

MAIL—The photography of the scenes in the fog are perfect. "... The working out of the solution is interesting. ..." Her acting was good.

MORNING TELEGRAM—"... there can be no fault in the minds of the audience thick enough to obscure the outcome of the scenario entanglements, so forced are the dramatic situations. ..."

Dorothy Dalton and David Powell are so completely natural and unheroic in these melodramatic roles that they make the story convincing.

SUN—The chief feature that makes "Fog Bound"..."... is the marvellous photography showing a man through Florida swamps when they are swathed in fog. ...

"Stated frankly, the theme is a mere melodrama, but it is enlivened by numerous thrilling expeditions during the chase.

TRIBUNE—"Fog Bound," with Dorothy Dalton in the lead, seems a pretty good production... at least we do know that the action was well, the direction splendid, and titles so good that we wandered all the time which we afterwards saw.

"Slander The Woman"—1st Nat'l Strand

DAILY NEWS—It is a rather dreadful story, but Miss Eliza, the heroine, is a fine creation, and if the story is cast quite suitable, settings well done and the story runs along easily.

"The Man Next Door"—Vitagraph Cameo

AMERICAN—It is an entertaining story with an interesting presentation and effective acting.

EVENING WORLD—It is a working good story of the East and West. The story... has been done countless times before on and off the screen, but never quite so well as in "The Man Next Door."

SUN—... well done Vitagraph picture.

TELEGRAM—... one of the best of the season.

WORLD—A bulldog named "Peasants" is amusing.

Though good in spots, the picture is rather typical and therefore threadbare film material. It was cut quite improved with vigorous pair of shears.

William P. S. Earle has completed "Tutankhamen."

Ist Nat'l Buys Five Vehicles

First National has purchased the rights to "The Spite Corner" in which Magee Kennedy starred for a run on Broadway. Other new material includes "Rope" by Holsworthy Hall, "Moving Fingers" by Elizabeth Ironson, "Pearls Before Swine" by Charles Brockett and "The Sea Hawk." the purchase of which was exclusively announced in these columns some weeks ago.

31 Joint Boards

Thirty-one exchanges' organizations in all of the principal cities of the country have named representatives to serve on arbitration boards on which exhibitors in those cities will serve equal representatives. In three cities, Des Moines, Butte and Oklahoma City, the exhibitors have not as yet signed who is to represent them, but when the National is organized, the entire system will function nationally.

Distributors will have three members and exhibitors three members on each board. All disputes arising in their particular org. will be settled by them without recourse to the New York headquarters of the distributors. Where exhibitors are not organized to the extent of selecting their three representatives, it is anticipated that the choice will rest with the president of the local chamber of commerce, and where there is no chamber of commerce, the mayor will make the appointments.

In some centers, it has been decided to appoint a seventh man to act as arbitrator when the three exchange and three exhibitors cannot settle a dispute. This seventh man cannot

Rembusch Questions

Wants to Know About the M. P. T. O. of American Cornholing Under Cohen Leadership

Frank Rembusch has written a lengthy letter to J. C. Ritter of Michigan and Al Stiffe of Minnesota congratulating them for their "dignified and manly stand" at Chicago, and incidentally says in part:

"As the matter stands, Mr. Cohen is practically elected for life. His organization 'means nothing' and has accomplished nothing for the independent exhibitor, although during his three years administration he received more financial help than all the presidents before him put together.

be interested in the motion picture industry in any way whatsoever. In order to eliminate all possible inference about the relations of producers and distributors, it has been agreed not to allow the manager of an operator—director—one owner theater to board committee. Where exhibitors are appointed by the residential board, the chamber of commerce or the mayor, this arrangement is to be continued effective until such time as exhibitors in that particular city organize. They will then appoint their own representatives and the original exhibitor appointees will then go out of office.

It is hoped that the arbitration system will work out amicably. Under the contract, distributors have agreed to abide by the decision of the local arbitration board or lose the right of arbitration on all contracts in that particular territory. The arbitration system is closely allied with the operations of the uniform contract in that exhibitors in good standing will sign the contract agree to work under that method of adjustments.

It is interesting to note that in various cities, independent exchanges are almost entirely represented on the arbitration boards as well as exhibitors who are known to be identified with M. P. T. O.—the organization. For example, in San Francisco, Thomas D. Van Osten of the M. P. T. O. of Northern California is on the board; in Hollywood, Harry Crandall is serving; in Indianapolis, E. T. Blum is on that board; in Pittsburgh, the list includes Dennis Harris and in Los Angeles, Glenn Harper.

Carlin E. Wagner is in New York as a special representative of Mrs. Wallace Reid and will succeed Charles Giegerich as eastern representative of the Los Angeles Anti-Nazi League. She will handle the advance publicity on 'Human Wreckage.'

At Broadway Theaters

Cameo

The main attraction for the Cameo this week is "The Man Next Door," a Vitaphone production. The remaining part of the pre-feature consists of "Herman of Yesterday," arranged by Edward Kahn as the overture; "Parke's News," "Daybreak," a pictorial poem, "Yodels," an Alwyn Beck and the Weekly Magazine. The "Dance of the Jockeys" precedes "Germantown," the feature which is followed by a "Hummertonian" finale, played on the piano by Julia Otho, and a Fable Picture, "Springtime." The organ chooses the performance with several selections.

Capitol

Rialto

"Fourth Symphony," by the orchestra, and Rienstfield's classical Jazz, "My Buddy," are among the opening musical numbers, followed by a Vitaphone orchestra, including the Rodolico group, including, "My Buddy," and "Song of Bali," with Emma Russian, soprano and Wendell Harris, bass. "Doubtful" is the feature, the last two acts are "F. B. B." and "Blague, a pictorial poem, "Dance," and "No Luck," a Lloyd Hamilton comedy.

Strand

At Other Houses

"The Covered Wagon" is now in its 12th week at the Criterion. "Romance of Women," has been held over a second week at the Rialto. The Lyric will house "The White Rose" indefinitely.

COVERS THE WORLD
"The Man Next Door" Is a Splendid Picture

It is a big jump from cowpuncher on the western plains to a debutante in New York society, but Miss Alice Calhoun did it with ease and grace last night in a new picture by Emerson Hough, entitled "The Man Next Door" which will run only this week at the Cameo Theatre, in West Forty-second street. It is a Vitagraph production and one of the best this season.

Miss Calhoun, playing the leading role, is the daughter of the richest ranchman in Wyoming and as a cowpuncher she looks just as pretty as she does in evening clothes. Aside from the many stars appearing in the cinema there is also one of the most remarkable dogs on the screen. His name is Peanuts, and he does everything but talk.

To carry out the dying wishes of Mrs. Wright the ranchman, Colonel Wright (David Torrence), desires that his daughter should have an education, which she obtains and then, just as a surprise to her father, she builds one of the most fashionable mansions in this city. But her neighbors refuse to recognize her, despite her father's vast wealth. In the West all persons are neighbors, but the daughter finds this custom does not exist in this city. Heartbroken, she falls in love with Jimmie the gardener (James Morrison), who is merely working as gardener to be close to the beautiful daughter of Colonel Wright. They become fast friends, despite the objections of her father, who wishes her to marry into society.

Following an elopement in which the young couple disappear for several weeks, Colonel Wright decides to go to his neighbor next door to complain against his daughter marrying their gardener. Just then the couple come in and following a little explanation, the gardener is radiantly happy, when her father gives them his blessing. The gardener is almost as rich as the girl with the result that the young girl is not only taken into society but is its favorite.

Frank Sheridan as Curley, foreman of the ranch, and Colonel Wright's best friend, was humorous throughout the picture.

"Personally, I have nothing against Mr. Cohen nor anyone. I am judging his work entirely by what he has accomplished. It is only natural where there is a 'business interest' men will try to get as large a reward as possible. We are inclined to consider the whole affair as 'politics' were it not that there are matters of greater importance in the background covered by a 'smoke screen' that is of very grave concern to every exhibitor."

He declares that because he refused to be agreeable to voting for Cohen "on the first ballot" that he was scratched off the Indiana delegation, and continues:

"I said, 'Mr. Cohen's organization means nothing' on one hand, but it does mean a great deal when you consider that he has the only national organization in the field so whatever protection we might secure by organized efforts he can give or prevent."

"Getting away from general statements, let us consider concretely the condition of the theater owners before and since Mr. Cohen's leadership.

"The advance deposit system has continued and enlarged."

"We are obliged to buy groups of pictures when selection is our right and the only profitable way."

"We are obliged to book as we buy, which is impractical."

"We are not allowed to cancel pictures even though they are unsuitable."

"We have nothing to say as to the production or distribution of pictures."

"It is not possible for all of these things to happen if you have an organization that is functioning. It is not possible for the sellers of pictures to so completely control the market of pictures and the conditions are just if the buyers of pictures were organized."

"Mr. Cohen pays the Music Tax, while the vaudeville organization does not. He did nothing until he found that I was making a fight and so he staged a protest as he stages everything."

"There is one accomplishment Mr. Cohen brings most about. The elimination of the Film Tax. I know that the producers did work and Mr. Cohen took the credits. We still have the setting and admission tax, that is not significant enough."

"I have no quarrel with the producers. They want to deal with us fairly. They know we have to make money or we can not make money, and yet through the record system organized under Mr. Cohen's administration, they know to the last nickel what they can charge us and they take it."

"It may seem a strange paradox that it is the producers who wish to save the exhibitors and the exhibitors who wish to save the producers. That is just as it is, certain pictures use the situation to help their situation."

"You may analyze it very readily. Make up a business that has and put down the names of Mr. Cohen's organization and the men connected with and owned by Mr. Cohen, but the rest and the big boys who run the system and the a c t i o n g o a l s that they lead to certain film interests."

"We can prove that Mr. Cohen's organization is a film organization by its handicap. When he began his activities with a film advertising agency, the Other Convention, owned by his political machine, were afraid to push the film end because of the Hugo Leach organization. Consequently, make the organization go on record as its fundamental purpose; 'producers would go out of theater business and exhibitors would go out of production.'"

"At Minneapolis, they tried to start a film mill or dollar distributing corporation. At Washington last year, it was the same thing. Finally, we got Movie Chats sufficiently to make the company has organized with Cohen as one of the big officials."

"Finally, what is it all about?"

"Just this: I don't want any film company in the theater business."

"But as you can understand, if you have an organization that is functioning, it is not possible for the sellers of pictures to so completely control the market of pictures and the conditions are just if the buyers of pictures were organized."

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Results obtained through printing on Eastman Positive Film justify the painstaking efforts of the camera-man. It reproduces with striking fidelity every tone of the negative from highest light to deepest shadow. It carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Five Sales Sessions

Led by First Natl.—First in New York Then Cleveland, Chicago, Frisco and New Orleans

Starting with a gathering in New York today, there will be a series of conferences of First National managers, salesmen, and bookers, including all of the five districts into which the Nation territory is divided. The purpose of these conferences is to present plans for the coming season.

The Eastern District meeting, which will convene at the Astor, will be in charge of F. M. Brockell and District Manager Ralph H. Clark, assisted by S. W. Hatch and Jay Ake. Brockell is associated with Brockell in the New York office. In the evening entertainment at the Astor, immediately following the close of the New York meeting, Brockell and Clark will leave for the Western District Conference, which will be conducted on Sunday under direction of H. A. Banty, R. C. Seery, and other Western district managers, will also be present. From Cleveland Brockell, Clark, and Banty will go to Chicago for the Mid-Western District conference on Monday to be conducted by Seery, who, as in other conferences, will discuss the next conference will be that of the Western District in San Francisco, June 9, in charge of J. S. Skaggs. This will also be attended by Brockell. Closing the series of meetings will be the Southern District Conference in New Orleans, June 14, under the supervision of W. E. Callan.

King Due Today

Henry King is due in from Europe today on the Berengaria. He has been in Italy for some time directing “The White Sister.” Lillian Gish is here, star Charles H. Duell, president of the Pictures, Inc., and other members of the company sailed last week for home on the Olympic, due in early next week.

Griffith Deal With Jolson

At Jolson is dickering with D. W. Griffith to appear in blackface in the producer’s next picture. The story will probably be one of the series of adventures taking. When the producer was working on “The White Rose” in the South, Griffith, operating the H. B. Film Co., at Edendale, Calif., yesterday signed a contract with Griffith Pictures to make a series of six outdoor pictures which Cliff Smith will direct.

Mediocre Pictures

For Summer Release Worries Owners of Big Houses—What’s the Answer

Part of a conversation in the Middle West:

“For one thing particularly that keeps me worried is the fact that nearly all of the producing companies take out their best pictures and leave nothing but mediocre pictures to be run during the hot months of June, July and August and I want to say to you right now that it is causing me a great deal of grief.

“Take in the case of our theater. We have a cooling plant in our theater which cost us over $50,000. We keep an even temperature in there and a great many patrons come in the afternoon just to be comfortable. It seems a crime I have to show mediocre pictures during the warm months.

Hays Sees Ford

And Acquaints Him With What the Industry Is Trying to Do—Discusses Pedagogic Films

Will H. Hays has returned to New York from Detroit, where on Monday, he paid Henry Ford a visit and discussed with him the problems of the motion picture in the industrial, moral and social fabric of the nation.

Mr. Hays’ trip was made especially to see that the Ford plant was one of the conferences he either has aid or will hold with important industrial leaders so that he can acquaint them with the purposes and ideals of the industry as represented by the important producers and distributors who are members of this organization. It is understood that Hays considers this part of his work very seriously, and that he holds a proper understanding of the industry’s aims by nationally known industrialists of prime importance.

In his talk with Ford, the topics covered were pictures of all characters, particularly educational, which the Ford organization has been making for some time. The conference touched upon pedagogic films which, as noted the Hays organization intend developing in a definite manner and for the production of which an initial sum of $5,000 has been pledged by the members.

Hays also conferred with members of the Detroit Board of Education, whom the use of pedagogic films has been developed more intensively perhaps than any other educational body in the country.

which is at the time when I need the very best to hold the patrons in doors.

"I believe this is some food for thought and I would think it would be a very good subject to start a discussion in your paper. If the producers will not assist the exhibitors in giving them some productions worthwhile in the summer, then they should close all the motion pictures in the summer and open them up in the fall as the legitimate houses do. It seems to me to hold all the poor pictures and release them during the hot months.

"It is not only doing the industry a harm but it will also be a means of putting a great many exhibitors to the wall. I have talked to any number of exhibitors and they have expressed themselves that they would rather pay a big price for a good picture and just break even or make very little money than to run poor pictures and show a terrible loss."

A First National Picture
Yours for a Prosperous Summer—

BELLA DONNA

Wonderful settings, excellent acting in this feature. Played to very good business for week. (Middle West.)

THE RUSTLE OF SILK

This picture did very good, although it was the beginning of the first pleasant weather to be outdoors. Everyone seemed to like it and the funny part was the women liked Miss Compson better than Conway Tearle. (Middle West.)

ADAM'S RIB

An entertaining picture. Business good, so picture was held over for a second week. (West.)

THE NE'ER DO WELL

Played to good crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Barlett Resigns
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Randolph Barlett who occupied an important post in the Fleischhacker and scenario department of Famous Players resigned. Among his final duties was the outcome of the contract with Eddie Borden.

Lenore Ulric Guest at Lunch
Lenore Ulric was the guest of honor at a lunch given by Warner Bros. yesterday. Miss Ulric leaves for the coast on Monday to star in "Tiger Rose." Daniel Belasco was attending and illness prevented him from doing so. If he is well enough he will travel West with Miss Ulric, if not, he will go later.

Independent Pictures Increase Capital
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Albany—By a certificate filed in the Secretary of State's office the Independent Pictures Corp., of which Jesse J. Goldburg is president, has increased its capital stock from $1000 to $200,000.

Goldburg stated yesterday when his company was originally formed with a nominal capitalization of $1,000. It was contemplated at that time increasing the capital dependent upon certain contracts, and that the increased capitalization now is to provide for enlarged activities. Two contracts were signed this week for the production of four specials.

197 In Tournament
Record Breaking Crowd to Attend at Belclaire Next Tuesday—The Complete Roster

Entires for the Spring Golf Tournament came in thick and fast this week bringing the total to date at 197—golfers, golfers, diners, and the like all thrown in.

The day is near and the committee in charge reports everything is in shape for the grand event. And a grand, glorious event it bids fair to be.

P. A. Powers, who is the winner of one leg on THE FILM DAILY cup, has returned from the coast just in time to play on Tuesday. The course is a good one. A real crowd is expected. A great evening's entertainment is all set. Everybody's keen for the event. And so it looks like a winner.

All that each and everyone of those long list of 197 entries has to do now is this:

PRAY FOR GOOD WEATHER.

Booby Prizes
Net the least interesting of the Spring Golf Tournament prizes will be the trophies offered for the booby—the birds who slaughter the fairway and hit around the 200 mark.

The booby prize of the Fall tournament was a full breed goat.

None other better will be the booby prize for next Tuesday. But it's a secret.

And in addition, the Ritchey Lithographing Co. yesterday offered up a booby prize also a humdinga. It's worth winning.

Don't forget—Tuesday, Belclaire Golf Club, Bayside, Long Island.

1st Nat'l Sales Meeting Held
About 40 members of the sales force of Eastern exchanges of First National held a meeting yesterday at the Astor with which terminated the dinner there last night. Fall distributing plans were discussed. It was the first of a series of similar meetings, the next to be held in Cleveland tomorrow.

Off for Europe
Departures for Europe today include:

Dr. A. H. Giannini who plans a two months' vacation tour of the continent; J. Robert Rubin, of the Louis M. Mayer Prod. Co.; and Al Feinman who goes to England to handle special exploitation for Warner Bros.

Ray to Expand Plays Two Additional Producing Units on Coast—"Miles Standish" for Associated?
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Charles Ray has purchased the Courvoisier Studio, a plant that will give him considerable more space for production purposes. He plans to “revolve” property in a number of ways and for this purpose, has set aside quite a sum of money.

Ray, it is learned, does not intend confining his activities to his own pictures, but will organize two other units of which he will be the owner.

His contract with United Artists called for two pictures and these, "A Tailor-Made Man" and "The Girl I Loved" have been delivered. "The Courtship of Miles Standish" has been finished and is about ready for release. It is reported that it will go through Associated Exhibitors, Inc., of which Arthur S. Kane is president, Kane is now here.

When Arthur S. Kane left for the coast some weeks ago, it was generally understood in New York that his trip concerned distributing arrangements for "The Courtship of Miles Standish" as well as Ray's future affiliation. That "Miles Standish" may go through Associated Exhibitors is not surprising. Whether it would come as a distinct surprise will depend much on the policy followed by Ray's future pictures would be handled by the same organization.

Grainger and Bonne on Trip
James R. Grainger and Eddie Bonne of Goldwyn leave tomorrow on a country-wide trip that will take them as far west as Los Angeles.

Dahnken Buys Salt Lake House
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Salt Lake—Fred Dahnken and Co. Inc., have purchased the American Theater from the Swanson Theater Co. Inc.

Tilley Coming Here
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
London—Frank Tilley, editor of Kinematograph Weekly, sails on the Aquitania for New York on the 2nd. He will go to the coast to watch American production.

Bert Adler and other American friends of Tilley plan to meet him at the boat when the Aquitania docks on the 8th.

A Unique Fashion Show Presented

Portland, Ore.—The manager of Jensen and Von Herberg's Liberty Theatre, in order to show off the recent run of "Poor Men's Wives." The show was used to introduce spring fashions and served as a unique follow-up for a similar display staged at the Liberty in connection with "Rich Men's Wives" some months ago, when the new fall models were shown to their patrons.

Big Campaign For Coast Showing

Los Angeles—The dedication of the Isle of Lost Ships next week on the Pacific Fleet of the U. S. N., the advance showing of the picture before Admiral Eberle on board the fleet, and a gala opening of the Los Angeles Morning Star Theatre in the Regent's Square which was closed during the showing of "Night at the Cinderella Roof dancing pavilion including a treasure hunt, a newspaper and billboard campaign, a magnificent air stopping of the ships, this produc-

Distributes Harold Lloyd Goggles

Kingston, N. Y.—A new idea was spryed by the Leader, with the cooperation of Mr. Gildersleeve of the Kenny, when "Safety Last" played the house. The Leader carried a story, to the boys and girls of the town, requesting them to call at the office and receive free, a pair of Harold Lloyd goggles. The kiddies stormed the office, and in less than a week, 1000 goggles had been distributed.

Unique Envelope Advertiser

Dayton—Howard Lichtenstein, manager of the Leader, used a unique envelope teaser in exploiting "A Friendly Husband." On one side of a card was printed: "I am looking for a 'Friendly Husband.'" And on the other: "I understand Lipino Lane in 'A Friendly Husband,' will be at the Theatre all week starting next Sunday. What—say—do you think of Herberg's Hurry?"

Using Pola's Brother for "Bella Donna"

Rockford, Ill. — Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiter, wired Charles Lamb of the Palm theatre, that Pola Negri was looking for her brother, Ilan Chalpuze, who left Poland in 1909. The last she heard of him was working as a translator in a Chicago export house, and it is understood that he later came to Rockford in a similar capacity. When the news was said that Chalpuze was old and greatly resembled his beautiful sister, the telegram went on to say that Pola would appear in "Bella Donna" at the Palm Theatre next week.

Lamb took this telegram to the newspaper, and had no trouble getting on the front page.

Real Treasure Chest For "Plunder"

Gadsen, Ala.—One week before the showing of "Plunder," at the Imperial theatre, Manager A. L. Snell plastered the town with strips of paper reading—"Plunder" lettered in red ink.

Later a plunger box was installed in the lobby of the theatre. A series of teaser slides were run on the screen telling of the various gifts that could be had, and were tie-up donations. The Saturday of the opening episode, 500 patrons received keys to the lock on the back of the box. The key was to open the chest. The following Saturday, a chance was given to all possessing keys to open the plunger chest. The holder of the lucky key received gifts amounting to $150, presented to him the following Monday night at the Imperial by the mayor of the town.

C. B. C. Announces Seven

SHORT FEATURES
in the Industry!

PRESENTED BY CARL LAEMMLE

UNIVERSAL SHORT FEATURES
CHADWICK PICTURES CORP.

Presents

JIMMY AUBREY

IN a series of two reel comedies designed to play the finest theatres throughout the world.

Jimmy Aubrey comedies will employ the best comedy artists to support the star. A corps of trained comedy writers and "gag" inventors of note will provide laugh material and action to make each individual comedy stand on its merits.

These greater Jimmy Aubrey comedies will be produced as if each one were a super feature—as we will truly make each one a super-comedy.

The first of the NEW Jimmy Aubrey comedies will be ready in July—then one each month thereafter.

POST IMPRESSIONS

A series of pictorial visits abroad. Post Impressions are not scenic or travel pictures in the ordinary sense of the word.

They present the garb, mannerisms customs of foreign peoples—unique camera studies of lands everyone wishes to see, and done so well that a visit becomes unnecessary, but the desire to see for oneself is intensified.

The finest theatres are arranging to present Post Impressions exclusively to their patrons. Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld, has arranged for the exclusive first run exhibition of this series at the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres.

Correspondence regarding distribution is invited

Summer Shows and Short Subjects

What are you planning to do this Summer with your short subjects? You know, or you should, if you’re any sort of a showman at all that the average human being is especially restless during the warm months of the Summer. He does not want to be tied down to anything too long or tiresome. With the great outdoors calling, he is not nearly as likely to tie himself down to a single performance of an hour and a half or two hours as he would be in the cold Winter evenings.

You wish to appeal to this average human being you must offer him variety entertainment. You must give him a program that will offer frequent changes in story and general treatment.

Proof of this is to be found in the vaudeville field. Vaudeville is the only form of stage entertainment that runs consistently year in and year out—right through the hot summer months. Drama, musical comedy, farce comedy, opera and all other forms of entertainment where one long performance makes up the entire show, will almost always close for at least part of the summer, but vaudeville goes right on. Why? Because it is ever-changing entertainment that usually sends every one away pleased with part of the program at least.

How can the exhibitor take advantage of this lesson? Only by making greater use of Short Subjects, which provide the same kind of frequent change in subject and varied entertainment that is to be found in vaudeville.

Too many exhibitors still give their whole advertising space over to the feature alone. There is a fine opportunity for the wide awake exhibitor to take a big jump ahead of his competitor by starting NOW to advertise the fact that his house will be, throughout the summer, the home of varied entertainment, where a whole evening’s entertainment can always be counted upon. He can make a much bigger appeal in his advertising by showing his patrons that they can come to his theater any time during the evening and see several good pictures, none of which will be too long, then he can by telling them of only one feature. Here is a suggestion for a standing “ad,” in which only the program units would need to be changed.

In the preceding Short Subject Quarterly important exhibitors, voicing their ideas as to the value of short subjects, commented vigorously against the length of feature films. More opinions on this line will be found elsewhere in this issue. General condemnation of excessive footage is today heard through the industry. But there are many so-called “big” pictures out, and you may have an idea of running them during the summer. You may have them booked. If so, think it over. Because they will have to be mighty good, mighty interesting, to combat that natural feeling which develops with warm weather and the call of the outdoors.

DANNY.
The “Industry that is still in its infancy,” has reached another milestone. I stood by when the baby was born—in fact I was god-father at the christening. I have watched the youngster take on weight, develop its little muscles, creep around on the floor and finally walk “all alone.”
Mumpys, measles, whooping cough and all the other kid-diseases came and went. And still the little rascal prospered! As usual, a lot of well-meaning but poorly advised friends and relatives offered scores of suggestions on the bringing up of the child.
but the boy survived! It wasn’t long before he could lick any kid in school. Later on he fought his way through college in rec-time, and the day he graduated he went out on his own with the plaudits of the world ringing in his ears.

Naturally, he sought the quickest, the surest road to fame and fortune. First he tried the one and two reelers—but was soon troubled with growing pains and craved new fields to conquer. He chose the Feature Film. He developed it until today the Feature ranks with the best efforts of the spoken stage, with most ambitious novel, the oil paintings of a master, the score of a world-famed opera and the pride of a sculptor’s heart. In brief, the Feature Film has ARRIVED. It has reached the highest point in its development. It occupies an enviable position in the lives of the Twentyith Century public.

Not content with this achievement, our virile son is again seeking new fields. His thoughts are reverting to his First Love—Feature’s young brother, Shorty!

Shorty is taking his cue from his old pal—Johnny Vaudeville. It isn’t so long ago that Johnny was in ill repute. He held forth mainly in cheap concert halls—he depended on men folks who were out kicking over the traces for his patronage. The ladies didn’t know he was alive. Even if they did, they would not have appreciated his suggestive “cracks” or his off-color, smutty jokes. It looked very much as if Johnny was going to get himself into a load of trouble—when along came a crowd of good

Samaritans who took the boy away from his bad companions and made a man of him.
Johnny can thank men like Tony Pastor,
B. F. Keith, E. F. Proctor, E. F. Albee, Marcus Loew, William Morris and a few others for showing him the light. Today, he stands erect—a credit to his sponsors and a power in the Amusement World. Beautiful theaters have been erected and dedicated to his name, the finest type of man and woman and the best boys and girls of the country are numbered among his friends.

But stop—this analogy is a little unfair to Shorty. His troubles has not been the company he has kept. Not at all. It’s simply that he has been neglected. His big brother, feature, was too busy making his own way in the world to pay much attention to the rest of the family. While Feature travelled in the very best society, Shorty had to stay home and earn his living as best he could with the lesser lights.

Now, another milestone has been reached. Feature has attained a position where he is enabled to hold out a helping hand to his brother, he can afford to share some of the spot light with him—to spend more money on him—TO SEND HIM TO COLLEGE!

That’s the kind of a family we are. Every individual member willing to make sacrifices for the good of the cause!

So the stage is all set for Shorty to come back into his own! Once these boys get started—they grow up like wildfire. Shorty already has three new suits of clothes—he is studying “Etiquette for All Occasions,” and the first thing you know he will blossom out in a silk hat, evening suits and a cane.

His one strong point is that he breezes in, does his stuff and then breezes out again. He doesn’t bore you with details, he doesn’t try to stretch a three bagger into a home run.
He doesn’t outlive his welcome. He knows when to go home. He is a snappy, peppy young fellow, well spoken, polished and in every sense—a gentlemen. He has outgrown his fighting days—that is, he won’t show his fists on the slightest provocation.
but there is still enough rough and ready

Regional Trade Paper Editors on the Short Subject

ART MEYER, Motion Picture Bulletin of California: Have you ever stopped to consider the importance of the short reel subject to your program? What picture program would be complete without the comedy, news chapter play, two-reel western or scenic? Why, to offer your patrons a show without one of these would be as absurd as serving a meal without seasoning. The short subject is the "seasoning" to the program. It should be used in theaters to relax the mind of the audience; to prepare them for the heavy feature which is to follow. You perhaps have noticed just as I have how impossible it is to enter a picture show after the feature has started and become interested. This is not due to the fact that you have missed part of the feature, but it is a physical impossibility to enter a theater from the street and have your mind clear enough to enjoy a long subject. You must be attuned for the occasion.

The selection of the correct short subject to be shown with the feature is most vital. To some exhibitors, a short subject is a short subject—simply a filler. But to the showman who has made a study of his business, the short subject is as important as the feature. The best proof of this is the fact that critics all over the country are devoting, in many instances, as much space to short subjects as to features. Your best judgment should tell you how ridiculous it is to show a western or a serial before the main feature or a short subject comedy for a comedy feature. Yet in many instances, exhibitors unthinkingly do this. The sooner you realize the psychological effect of the short subject upon your patrons the greater will be the results obtained. If you have failed to give SHORT SUBJECTS REAL consideration, here is some food for thought, and a possible solution to a leakage at your box office.

JACOB SMITH, Michigan Film Review: The exhibitor here is very lacking in getting the results that he should out of his short subjects. They fail to advertise and exploit them properly. This applies to most of the first-run houses as well as the neighborhood and state theaters.

The features that run longer than seven reels have materially cut down the demand for short subjects. It has been particularly noticeable this year. I should say that it has made a dent of at least 25 per cent in the bookings of short subjects, if not more.

The shipping of short subject film in this territory seems to be entirely satisfactory. No complaint on this score.

The comedy short subject is naturally the most popular. Then comes the news weekly, and then the educational, such as travel or scenic.

S. G. HOWELL, Motion Picture Journal, Dallas, Texas: Exhibitors through the Southwest have not generally made any particular effort to market short subjects, selling efforts generally being devoted to the features.

There has been no general complaint either from the exchanges or from the exhibitors on the length of features annulling the use of short subjects.

Short subject films are shipped in as good condition from our exchanges as all other films.

Serials and comedies have always been very strong in the Southwest. There has been somewhat of a slackening of demand for serials. The demand for quality short reel comedies is in excess of the supply.

GEORGE W. COLE, Interstate Film News, Cleveland: There is no perceptible evidence that exhibitors in this vicinity over-exert themselves in exploiting short subjects—or even the features.

Prints ordinarily good. Occasionally one falls down. Must be expected.

Two reel comedies seem to predominate and as a whole are most popular. Slapstick goes strong in some localities.

DAVID BARRIST, The Exhibitor, Philadelphia: Excepting in the instances of feature short subjects like The Message of Emile Coue, Sawing a Lady in Half, a series like The Leather Pushers, serials, or feature comedies like Chaplin and Keaton, little prominence is given by the exhibitors in their advertising to the one and two reel subjects.

My discussion with various exhibitors leads me to the conclusion that six reels would be the ideal length for a feature. This would permit the use of a two reel comedy and a single reel non-story subject which exhibitors feel are necessary to complete a program. Features five reels in length, no matter what their quality, are still regarded by the exhibitors as ordinary program pictures, whereas the features which are seven reels and upwards in length are too cumbersome to permit the proper building of a nicely balanced program.

Another objection to the long feature is that the theaters of smaller capacity frequently run three shows an evening at an expensive picture, starting at 6:30, which the super length features make very difficult. Thus, frequently, the exhibitor running a three show schedule with a long feature is compelled to confine himself to a single reel comedy to balance his show, which is insufficient.

I have heard no general complaint on the condition of the short subject prints.

The two reel star and feature brand comedies seem to be the most popular.
Ben Shlyen, The Reel Journal, Kansas City, Mo.: “The average exhibitor in this territory makes no special effort to produce real results with his short subjects. He considers them “fillers.” If he has a 6-reel feature, he wants a 1-reel comedy, or novelty, and if his feature is a 5-reeler, he wants a 2-reel comedy.

“I believe the length of feature productions has materially affected the showing of short subjects. Most exhibitors try to give their public a variety program, but at the same time, keep it within a certain length. They do not like to run over eight or nine reels of pictures, and with the many features of this length, or of even greater length, that have been on the market of late, they have hardly been able to give shorter pictures as great a representation on their programs as they deserve.

“The exchanges here maintain a very good inspection and film renovating service. There have been very few complaints of the condition of prints, and these only in cases of old features being foisted upon the exhibitor without careful inspection. Little or no complaint in this regard has been made about short subjects.

“It is hard to say just what short subject is most popular in this territory. Of course, Movie Chats has a very great representation here, and the news reels also seem to be very popular. Some exhibitors run a news every night in the week, with as many changes as their program calls for. I think Universal Century Comedies are very popular, and also Educational’s Hamilton and Christie Comedies. Of course, there may be many others, but I believe these are in the first rank.”

LAWRENCE A. URBACH, Motion Picture Journal, New York: The average exhibitor in the territory covered by Motion Picture Journal (Greater New York, New York State and Northern New Jersey) must of necessity bend every effort to make his short subjects stand out as prominently as possible in all of his advertising and display matter, in order to be successful. Exhibitors realize the importance of offering a varied program, and the public has come to expect, in addition to the feature, a good assortment of news topics; a short (this may be educational), and also a short hilarious comedy.

There is no question in my mind that the exhibitors in this territory, as, doubtless, in other territories, are unanimous upon one point, and that is, that some of the biggest, most widely advertised pictures, pictures that best lend themselves to exploitation, are too long. I feel that I would be uttering something of a bromide in saying that ten and eleven and twelve-reel pictures are of little use to the average exhibitor, here or elsewhere. In order for the exhibitor to make a profit on his booking, the feature he buys should not, in my judgment, exceed the six or seven-reel length. The audience “turn-over” is seriously disrupted by the so-called colossal film, be the subject what it may or the director whom he may be. I would not be understood as saying that these “big” pictures are not welcome in special theaters and big first run houses. You have asked concerning “the average exhibitor.”

In a field so extremely cosmopolitan as that served by our publication, it would be unfair, in my judgment, to specify what type of short subject would seem to be most popular. Ours is a field which welcomes the widest variety.

I do not feel that I am wholly competent to go into a discussion of exhibitor complaints with regard to the delivery of film. I believe that the distributors responsible for the physical handling of these short subjects are resorting to the most modern methods of delivery, and if any complaint would hold, I would rather feel that the fault would be due more to carelessness on the part of the exhibitor in failing to “order his show” sufficiently far in advance to give the distributor a fair opportunity to deliver.

In conclusion, I feel that the upward and onward trend toward “better pictures” would suffer greatly were it not for such admirable productions as “Way Down East,” “Orphans of the Storm,” “Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood,” Miss Pickford’s new “Tess,” “When Knighthood Was in Flower,” “The Covered Wagon,” “The White Rose,” “The Four Horsemen,” etc., etc. But it would be a fatal innovation if this practice were to become the order of the day. It would spell, in my opinion, ruin to “the average exhibitor.” In my judgment nothing must stop the increasing production of “shorts” to meet the ever-increasing demand. So long as producers will make six and seven-reel pictures (not longer) “the average exhibitor” will prosper. But he should not be called upon too often to book colossal pictures.

Overlong Features the Curse of the Program

Last February The Film Daily pointed out the need of feature films being made shorter both for entertainment value and to give short subjects a greater opportunity to build a program varied and interesting.

At that time, in the February quarterly issue of the Program Building and Short Subject issue, some notable exhibitors commented on the value of short subjects as program builders and a number pointed out that the chief difficulty was the overlong features which blocked the program. Among these were Jules E. Mastbaum of the Stanley Co., Philadelphia; Samuel Katz of Balaban & Katz, Chicago; H. M. Thoms, then with Famous Players Canadian Corp., and now with Abe Blank; Dan Michaelove of Southern Enterprises, Atlanta; William Brandt of New York; Milton H. Feld of Frank Newman’s organization, Kansas City; Herschel Stuart, Missouri Theatre, St. Louis; John H. Kunsky, Detroit; Charles M. Olson, Indianapolis; Harry Bernstein, Richmond, Va.; Samuel Goldstein, Goldstein Bros., Springfield, Mass.; Eugene H. Roth, San Francisco; Frank J. Rembusch, Indiana; Aaron Jones, Jones, Linick & Schnefer, Chicago; Leo F. Keiler, Strand Amusement Co., Paducah, Ky.; Oscar Ginn, Ginn-Topkis Interests, Wilmington, Del.; J. J. McGuiness, Boston; Tom Moore, Washington; Phil Gleichman, Detroit; Sid Grauman, Los Angeles; J. von Herberg, Jensen & Von Herberg, Seattle, and many others.

Below will be found expressions from other important exhibitors regarding the extreme length of features forwarded both to this publication and The Motion Picture News, which editorially is opposing the great length of feature productions.

Salt Lake City: George E. Carpenter, Paramount-Empress: “More power to you if you can induce the producer to concentrate, condense and generally give us shorter feature pictures. Six reels is ample; with this number of reels it is possible to present an ideal motion picture show. If you turn to the Good Book and count the number of words it took to tell of the creation of the world and then recall the footage some of these directors give us on mundane things of lesser import—but what’s the use!

“I have, in my feeble way, been trying to demonstrate to some distributors that both they and we have lost hundreds of dollars owing to the fact that during the peak of business we have turned them away in droves incident to the show being too long and the turnover accordingly curtailed. * * *

“Variety is the keynote of successful programs. With but mighty few exceptions no feature should be over six reels in length. If you can get the producer to see this, you will be rendering the exhibitor of from 500 to 1,500 seating capacity untold service.”

Toronto—Charles C. Branham, director of theatres, Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd.: “Having just screened six new features representing the product of three of the leading distributors, I am more thoroughly convinced than ever that the producers are making the pictures too long. All of the pictures I have just seen have been in seven or eight reels; any one of them could have been made in five or six, and would have been much better entertainment in the shorter length.

“Practically every one of the managers in the forty theatres operated by this company have voiced their protest against the unnecessarily long features. * * * The public is demanding variety, and you cannot provide this if you have to run seven, eight and nine reel features.”

Butte, Mont.—M. J. Sullivan, Rialto: “I am heartily in accord with your views that eight-, nine- and ten-reel features are hurting the box office. It is the hardest thing in the world to put over a long feature successfully. * * * Give me six-reel features. We can build short subjects around it which gives us a balanced program. Movie fans are satisfied and we are in a much better position to get a much bigger play at the box office.”

Geneva, N. Y.—Ross A. McAvoy, Temple: “I sincerely believe that in the regular motion picture theatre, or vaudeville-picture theatre, 6,000 feet should be the maximum length of any feature.”

Fort Worth, Texas—J. M. Edgar Hart, city manager, Ft. Worth Palace and Hippodrome: “If concrete opinion of the exhibitors of the United States can bring about, in their earnest recommendation, the production of shorter feature films, six and seven reels at the most, your campaign, in this direction, will have been one of the most progressive steps ever taken by a leading publication of the motion thing in the world to build a program around a long feature.

“Personally, and after extended experience in the field, I favor five reels. I have advocated it and urged it as suggestions to several directors.”

Kansas City, Mo.—Frank L. Newman: “I have harped on this subject of long features for the past year along the line that features are entirely too long. Time and again a production has been ruined by stretching it to 8, 9, and 10 reels whereas if it were put into 5½ or 6, the action would be snappier and more entertaining.

“Then again, the large motion picture theatres throughout the country are expected to show more than just a feature and when you have a two-reel comedy, news, and scenic, an overture and generally one or two other musical numbers, the show is so long that you wear the patrons out.

"I have talked to hundreds of exhibitors in my territory and I do not know of one who has not been in favor of shorter length features."

Coudersport, Pa.—H. E. Cane: "Five reels are enough for ninety per cent. of the features produced. When you can get features in five or at most six reels, there is more action and less repetition. Frequently, my patrons will say: 'Oh, the picture was all right, but too long.'

"Occasionally, a feature like 'Robin Hood' will stand length, but the erroneous impression that any intelligent exhibitor buys film by the yard should be eliminated."

Spokane, Wash.—Ray Grombacher: "Producers are ruining the business by making eight-reel productions. Six-reel pictures are ideal. With few exceptions, every eight-reel production last year and this year could be absolutely improved by cutting it to six reels. The mere fact that the picture is eight reels does not, in our estimation, increase its value."

Dover, N. J.—R. F. Woodhull, Baker: "Long pictures have been one of my biggest problems. In order to properly diversify your program, comedy and instructional reels are absolutely necessary. This means that when you have a seven reel feature the whole program must be sent through your machines at a speed that is injurious to the mechanism, but of still greater importance, disgusting to an intelligent audience. And it does not stop there! That other department of tremendous import in the retailing of motion pictures—the orchestra—is compelled to render heavy or ballad-type music continuously when the comedy would permit the use of lighter melodies which would supply relief to the ear.

"I had an exhibitor tell me recently that when he finds his show running too long he lifts a reel or two out of his feature attraction and in most cases it is never missed by his audience. However, I do not believe that many of us have the nerve to try that method even though we firmly believe that most of the superspecials will kindly lend themselves to the idea."

Anniston, Ala.—Roy G. Smart: "Two years of agitation for shorter features seems to have brought definite results—longer ones. The sequence was natural and the producers were not to be blamed. Exhibitors developed a growing habit of biting hard at long features; the more footage the harder they bit. But now their pig-iron stomachs are full, their appetites satisfied and experience has shown that shorter menus bring longer life, and, more patrons.

"The real answer is found in the theatre lobby. Just listen, and watch the yawning, sleepy-eyed, restless and helpless patrons. They all can't like the same thing. There must be variety in the bill. Put your ear to the ground and you will hear, over and over, 'It was a good show, but too long.'"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Edward L. Hyman, Mark Strand: "I take this occasion to agree with the opinion in several quarters that many feature pictures are too long, and that longer length features are hurting the box office. You might have added, too, that the over-long features are not pleasing the public any more than the shorter features, thus they have no definite reason or excuse for being longer than the average feature film. In my opinion, the producer would make no mistake in considering these two things—the public and the box office. The former is the ultimate consumer, who always has the last word and whose opinion must always be respected, and the latter is the barometer by which the producer figures in terms of dollars and cents in distributing his product.

"We get some of the best pictures made, from various sources, and the shortest ones give the most satisfaction, to public and to us. Short features mean there is no wasted footage; we can give with them a variety program of shorter reels and music not possible with the longer features: monotony is eliminated or minimized; the turnover is more frequent and more steady—but why name more reasons for short features when those are the principal ones?"

Wichita, Kan.—Stanley N. Chambers, Miller Theatrical Enterprises: "You are touching upon the industry's worst evil; long padded pictures. The production of stories far past the necessary length is driving patrons from our doors. The public does not know exactly why pictures fail to entertain them as they once did, but experienced exhibitors are able to put their fingers upon the fault; the pictures are too long, draggy and tiresome. Aside from the tiresomeness of the individual feature attraction, long pictures in addition to certain other necessary and expected units of a program make the entire show too long and sends patrons away dissatisfied and disgruntled.

"Confronted by this serious problem many exhibitors try to remedy the evil by doing their own cutting and not being skilled in this highly specialized work they butcher the film at the expense of the Producer's reputation.

"Other exhibitors, who do not resort to cutting film, speed it through their machines giving the characters an unnatural animation and injuring the story value of the picture thereby bringing discredit to all persons associated with it from the star and producer down to the exhibitor."

New Orleans—E. V. Richards, Jr., General Manager Saenger Amusement Co.: "If variety is to remain the keynote of unit presentation producers should and must co-operate with exhibitors to keep their feature length dramas within reason. A theatre’s policy today sells a show not a feature. Give the fellow who owns it some credit for selling his wares instead of a trademark.

“If Brisbane can tell in two paragraphs what it takes a reporter to say in a column, it behooves the industry to search for directors who can make features for the length the story demands and not by the foot. These dog days of summer particularly demand one hour and forty minutes as maximum presentation for a diversified program whether it be Broadway or Main Street.”

Fort Worth, Texas—Barry Burke, Palace: “Thank the Lord that the long-drawn-out, padded and otherwise over-done features will begin to get panned. Who wants them? I surely do not know. The public does not, and surely the exhibitor does not.

“My patrons do not care to spend the entire evening in a theatre, no matter how comfortable you may make them, and my patrons are no different from any other patrons.”

San Francisco—J. A. Partington: “There is only one side to the over-long features question. With the exception of a few pictures for long run exhibition, the maximum length should be sixty-five hundred feet. Ninety per cent of pictures would be improved by keeping them within this length and a diversified program, the life blood of the business, could be maintained.

“If producers do not remedy this condition soon they will discourage entirely the making of comedies and short subjects, without which the country’s great houses will be unable to present variety of attractions which have been mainly instrumental in establishing a regular clientele.”

Ithaca, N. Y.—W. A. Dillon, Strand: “Extra long features are keeping patrons away from theatres, people are shopping for entertainment and are not falling for increased admission because of a few more reels any more than the exhibitor is. They are all wise. * * * Motto: It’s better to have your patrons and not need them than it is to need them and not have them.”

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—A. C. Hayman, Cataract Theatre Corp.: “It is hard for an exhibitor who is catering to the public daily and receiving hundreds of complaints that the feature was so long that it tired, to understand why the producers insist upon this enormous padding of features, and I assure you that many a good picture has lost its box-office value on account of being too long. * * * Over-long features are a menace to the box-office, as they help to keep the people from coming to motion pictures.”

Detroit—Phil Gleichman, Broadway Strand: “The ideal length of a motion picture feature, from the standpoint of a theatre manager, is 5,000 feet. This is because the modern theatre program must satisfy the public and the public expects a feature, a comedy, a news reel or other film, special orchestra numbers and a soloist or prologue on every program.

“When one gets a feature, 7,000 or more feet long, we must cut out most of the added attractions, and if it’s like Tess there isn’t time for anything else. The result is that the public goes to the box office and asks why we are not showing a comedy and other pictures as well.

“On every long feature the theatre loses money because the house capacity is less. A good percentage, possible 40 per cent., will not care for anything but the feature. This allows a good let out at the end of the feature so we can take care of the waiting lines. Not so many persons are held outside. If the feature occupies the entire program, the waiting crowd for the second show at night, is so large that hundreds will walk away with the result that when the first show is over the crowd is not large enough to fill the house again.”

Des Moines, Iowa—A. G. Stolte, Booking Manager for A. H. Blank: “The lengthy feature is tiresome and often is injurious as a box office attraction. * * * We have found in building up a program on a two-hour basis that the proper length for a feature should be from five to six thousand feet.”

Youngstown, Ohio—C. W. Deibel, Liberty: “My frank opinion is that features should not exceed six reels, except with unusual subjects where the continuity would be broken by endeavoring to make the picture shorter.

“The average theatre-goer does not want to see more than a two-hour show, and besides the feature, a comedy and another short subject should be introduced.”

Omaha, Neb.—H. B. Watts: “A ‘super’ can be any number of reels. Too many program pictures, called supers, rob theatre of variety. My patrons kick because I can’t show high class scenes often. The ideal program is news events, a scenic novelty and a comedy feature. Anybody can make a meal on turkey, but pork chops need potatoes, soup and dessert.”

Minneapolis—Theodore L. Hays, General Manager of Finkelstein & Ruben, calls attention to a resolution on Feature Lengths passed at the recent convention of the Minnesota M. P. T. O. This resolution, which represented the unanimous views of the delegates, urgently requested producers “to use every effort to confine the length of all features to 5 reels if possible, and in no case to permit them to exceed 7 reels in length, to the end that we may regain much of the patronage which has been weaned away from this form of entertainment through the monotony which necessarily accompanies the viewing of extra reels which in fact detract from the entertainment value of such pictures."

A WESTERN VIEW
Harry T. Nolan, Denver

Sometimes pretty good, at times they have excelled the program film. Wouldn’t call the kind we get fillers except when we got a strong feature.

WOULD STARVE WITHOUT THEM
G. W. Bays, Crane Theater Carthage, Mo.

You do me a great honor in asking me to write my opinion in regards to short subjects. I would starve without them so they must be good, for they have saved me a many a so-called feature.

I have used short subjects since features came in style, but have always selected them when I could.

The reason I do is that they draw a certain class that would not come unless they could see a comedy. It pays to run them, I believe.

Have two dailies, must go home now and read them.

THE IDEAL PROGRAM
E. H. Bingham, Colonial Theater, Indianapolis

We do not get one hundred per-cent out of short subjects as while a necessary and integral part of the program we present—the box-office value is lacking—however you connect them up to the feature in your advertising. It is only occasionally a short subject stands out to the point one gets acknowledgements for it from the patrons.

We use a news reel, fable, feature and comedy-editing the news reel to give room for the fable, and on occasions of features of extra long footage make the fable stand the comedy portion.

If we could but make the producer realize that bigger and better pictures does not mean longer footage and could get a feature five thousand feet or a little under our idea of a satisfying program would be the news reel, fable or other cartoon comedy—educational—the feature—and a one reel comedy. The makers of comedies should realize that a continuity of laughs can be carried in one thousand feet for more than dull stuff to make up footage.

Eight thousand feet of film is sufficient for any man to offer his patrons. If the exhibitor has a capacity of from 1200 to 3000 seats and he desires a more lengthy program he can use prologues and other features, but I regard the program I have outlined as the best variety to be offered in houses of 1200 and less capacity.

A KICK FROM THE SOUTH
Marvin Wise, Birmingham, Ala.

Feature productions are entirely too long as a majority, for when a theater plays a seven or eight reeler picture and uses a scenic and cartoon or news reel, it forces the people to sit in too long, which is tiresome, and also limits the earning capacity of the theater where the seating capacity is limited.

KEEP ‘EM DOWN
Capitol Amusement Co., Superior, Wis.

We are convinced that is in the interests of the entire industry to limit length of features to five or six reels whenever the story will permit.

MORE OF THE DIFFICULTIES
By Leo Brecher, New York

On account of the excessive length of features it is impossible to form a definite policy or to create much public interest in short subjects. As a result short subjects seldom occupy a position better than “just a filler.” Of course, there are exceptions—“Wonders of the Sea”—for instance, or the “Wilderness Tales.” But the value of a good short subject would be greatly enhanced if it could be played on schedule like a serial. A following could be developed for each series with a campaign launched at the outset which would gain momentum with each succeeding number in the series.

OF VITAL IMPORTANCE
Skouras Bros. Circuit, St. Louis, Missouri

We consider short subjects of vital importance to our program, and for that reason are supporting the fight for feature productions not to exceed six reels in length. Any time a feature is more than six reels, it hurts our short show, and we feel that the program is weakened thereby.

We like to give our patrons a strong news every week, running at least twelve minutes and so selected as to make the music effective. The topics are also a regular unit and are featured by the playing of a popular tune as an accompaniment. The fables are also shown with special effects that have them one of the bright spots of our program.

We are fortunate in having good comedies and it is an unwritten law that we always play a two-reeler and advertise it extensively. Then of course, we have a stage presentation of some kind every week as well as an overture and possibly an organ solo.

With this variety of units in a program, you can readily see that a picture of eight, nine or ten reels handicaps us a great deal and in many cases hurts our business because of the slow turnover.
ANOTHER ANGLE
John S. Evans, Manheim Theater, Philadelphia

Regarding short stuff, will say that I have never seen any of it that has been an extra prayer to the box-office. Even Harold Lloyd in his four reels would not hold up, unless you booked and played a feature picture with it.

Of course the best that can be had in short stuff would be preferable, and I try as much as possible to get it, but when it is all summed up, it means nothing extraordinary to the box-office receipts.

ANOTHER KICK REGISTERED
Hay & Nicholas, Strand, Fairmount, Minn.

We want to register our kick on the elongated feature. Five thousand feet ought to be the limit.

The popularity of this business was created during the days when we built up our programs out of short subjects, there weren't any others to be had. Then we had a chance to diversify the program that everybody found something on it that they liked. Today we are shackled to a routine program of a feature and a comedy.

If we could cut out all the features to 5,000 feet, and then add enough of the good shorts to make a real program, we would bring back a lot of the old patrons who have been weaned away.

LONG SUPERS AND FLOPS
David Seymour, The Pontiac, Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Want to put my approval on your "features too long" stuff—it's a crime—for the little fellow—here I am up in the Adirondack Mountains among "health seekers and tourists" and I run each show an hundred minutes—can't make it longer, have to get them in, and home to bed.

But these long specials—put me in bad—I can't run more than one show a night and do justice to the film and then I get a squawk on increased prices.

Rather play them at more reasonable rates—but can't do otherwise with the pictures coming to me in these 8 and 9 reel lengths.

Keep up the good work—it's all right maybe now and then on pictures like the "Birth of a Nation" and a couple of others I might mention, but what in the name of God! did Charlie Ray make his "Tailor Made Man" in Eight thousand four hundred and sixty-nine feet (this is what my footage indicator showed) and there I was prevented from giving but one performance on each night and the patrons squawked their heads off, and the film did an awful stomp on business. That picture could have been made in 6 reels easy and then I would have had time to put in a couple of single reels and give variety to my show.

Keep at this—it's a crime—the length of these pictures, and it's harmful if you hurt us little jokers in the sticks, you're hurting the backbone of the game.

Let those who do the producing—do a little more thinking and we'll all benefit.

Pardon my taking up your time but the moment I saw your editorial just had to cut in and tell you how much it hit home with me.

MORE KICK IN LONG FEATURES
By Blair McElroy, Chicago

On account of the long features which have been in the market for the past two or three years, it has been absolutely necessary for us to place not only the purchasing but the booking of short subjects in the hands of our managers, in order that they may place the high priced short subjects beside low priced features and where an attraction runs into eight, nine or ten reels, we of course use the cheaper short subjects or single reels instead of multiple-reel subjects.

We, however, find that good short subjects are of practically as much value as a good attraction and have had a great deal of success along this line. When we find a good one, we hit it hard.

NOT USED AS FILLERS
L. A. DeHoff, The Century, Baltimore

We use quite a number of short subjects in our various theaters, and do not look upon them as "fillers", screening practically every subject before placing same on the various programs.

The next being to require the Musical Director to accompany same with a most suitable music setting, trying to obtain one hundred percent from the exhibition.

JOINING THE HOLLER
Wm. Fait, Jr., Eastman Theater, Rochester

I don't know. It seems to me to be a matter to take up with Will Hayes. Everybody is passing the buck to him nowadays and he ought to know how to fix the Post Office. It's an idea, anyhow, isn't it, Danny?

I want to join in the chorus on the holler about features being too long. We are having a terrible time in making up a program when we get features from eight to twelve reels. The fact is, it just can't be done. Give the producers another kick on the subject. May they'll wake up.

CROWDED OUT IN AUSTRALIA AS WELL
Says W. A. Robbins, of the Co-operative Film Exchange of Australia:

In Australasia the short subject is rather crowded out there at the present time and has been for some years past, by the system of using two features on nearly all programs.
This came about largely by the shortage of suitable short subjects and the excess of feature subjects available in Australia, so that it became easier for the showman to just put a second feature on his program, instead of hunting around for enough short items to make an attractive balance. Competition also brought the price of second features within his reach at about the same figure he would have paid for the short items and that was the commencement of a system which has lasted to this day.

Whether it will ever revert to the properly and sanely balanced program, it is hard to say. It would seem to depend mainly on the restriction of the number of available features, the "fewer and better" policy would seem to be the logical solution, but some of our showmen rather sarcastically remark—"the fewer the better," in regard to some of the product sent down to Australia under this heading.

THE OVERLONG FEATURE
By Elmer Pearson, Pathe

We have persistently refrained from entering the discussion about the prevailing disposition of features to get longer and longer for the reason that both exhibitor and distributor might have occasion to feel that we were opposed to the long feature for selfish reasons.

When hundreds and hundreds of exhibitors are constantly telling us that they would like to use more of our output for the sake of necessary variety in their entertainments, but cannot do so because of the extraordinary length of various features, it becomes very evident that the great majority of exhibitors sincerely regret the tendency of features ever to increase in length.

This is, however, having an effect not entirely prejudicial to the short subject in that if the exhibitor cannot with his feature give his patrons what they demand in the way of variety, he is finding it necessary and incidentally profitable to book programs exclusively of short subjects.

Thus, so far as Pathe, is concerned, what looked at the beginning as a menace to its business is actually affording its product an opportunity of getting before the public strictly on its own merits alone and may easily be the means of convincing every exhibitor that he should have one exclusive short subject program out of every three or four. In the meantime, however, there can be no mistake about the exhibitors looking upon the extremely long feature with disfavor.

The Development of Short Subjects
By HAL ROACH

It is not such a far cry since we made our first successful one-reeler, called "Just Nuts" in which Harold Lloyd began his career as a film comedian.

Its a matter of about eight or nine years.

Yet many changes have occurred in the motion picture industry, and always for the better.

In those days anything went.

Today only the best goes.

Producers who have tried to palm off anything but the best on their public have found this out.

It is our intention to make the best pictures we possibly can produce, with the best stars and best directors available to us. This has been our policy in the past, and we owe a sincere debt to the exhibitors of the United States for appreciating the fact with their support of our efforts.

We have outlined a program for the coming season which should meet every demand, and the demand certainly is growing. First run theaters which in the past have looked down on comedies are now featuring them. In one city alone—(known as the "toughest" in the country for short subjects,) three big downtown first run theaters are featuring our single reel comedies.

In addition to this we are now producing a ten episode serial, which we hope to make different from any other serial the screen has seen. While having the 'pull-em-back' appeal of the average serial, a complete story will be related in each of the various episodes. One chapter will be related to the other, however, with Edna Murphy, the star, running throughout the entire story. This will be directed by Roy Clements.

I think we have assembled the best group of comedy directors in the industry.

Charles Parrott, who will direct Will Rogers, in the first of his two reeles, has made more than a hundred successful comedies with "Snub" Pollard. We have signed him under a long term contract.

Bob McGowan and Tom McNamara, directors of the "Our Gang" comedies have demonstrated their capabilities for this particular brand of comedy. I do not think there is any one in the industry who can surpass them working with youngsters.

“THAT’S THAT”

If you ordered an expensive turkey dinner in a restaurant and they gave you mush and milk for dessert you would be sore—

And that’s that.

If you were served a meal that retained its excellence from soup to nuts you would become a regular patron, although there were many other cheaper restaurants around it—

And that’s that.

If a motion picture audience is served with an excellent feature, why not give them a comedy of equal standard—

And that’s that.

We are building comedies that will leave any audience in a happy frame of mind (whether presented as appetizer or dessert), on a scale to run with the greatest features and give satisfaction.

And that’s that.

Killing off the Stars of To-morrow

By AL CHRISTIE
President, Christie Film Co., Inc.

The star makers of yesterday were the two reel comedies and dramas, but the star makers of today are—Lord knows what! All because the short film—the medium which has made the big stars of today and of the past—is being slighted as never before.

Miss Pickford, Chaplin, Lloyd—all came from the humble beginnings of the two reel film. There is a host of others—Gloria Swanson, Wally Beery, Clara Kimball Young, Norma Talmadge, Tom Mix, Bryant Washburn, Anita Stewart, Kathlyn Williams, Earl Williams, and more too numerous to mention.

In fact, as it has been stated before, the backbone of the entire motion picture industry was in the short film—a diversified program of short numbers. Comedies and dramas in digestible lengths were the whole thing in the picture business up to a few short years ago. It was those numbers which developed the public taste for motion picture entertainment. We are not now developing these stars, frequently appearing before the public because we are paying too little attention to any film which doesn’t happen to come in seven reels or more.

The people who became well known and popular were the people who appeared FREQUENTLY before their moving picture audiences. The fans knew them, or felt they knew them, as intimate friends. We used to go to the picture shows—several of them in a night in the old days—and those were the days out of which grew the names and faces of the big screen personalities.

Today your stars in the two-reelers are getting out in front of the people often enough to be known to every boy and girl in the town who goes to movies regularly on Friday night when the school week is over, and more than likely much oftener. Your big stars in big super-special productions are getting too big to be subjects of household conversation. The people the kids are talking about around dinner time in the evening are the people they see often.

That is why Harold Lloyd has been such a tremendous draw; he has been on the screen in enough theaters and often enough that every movie-goer knows him. The younger generation of movie fans know all of the people whom they see in the present-day comedies. They see these people more often in the neighborhood and the small town theaters than they do in the movie palaces of the cities because in the latter it is very often the case that the program is so filled up with big acts that the short numbers are omitted.

In view of these facts, it remains a mystery to me why theater managers and advertising men so often slight the comedy offerings on their bills, why they very frequently fail to include it in their newspaper ads, and why it is still rare that no more than one of the offerings is advertised in the signs out in front.

Educational Film Exchanges recently commented on newspaper reviewers who have frequently admitted that the short subjects were the best part of the show, and at the same time did so in a bare line, going on for a half-column or more to give the harrowing details about the feature and why it was bad or why it was mediocre.

But the newspaper man’s attitude is thoroughly explainable. He is naturally going to take his lead from what the theater does. If the theater doesn’t think enough of its comedy or its scenic, or its other film novelty to include it on the printed program and in the display ad., the reviewer merely lets it go at that and follows the time-honored custom of reviewing the feature picture thoroughly and critically, merely giving passing notice to the rest of the bill.

Time and again we can pick up theater advertising which displays this hide-bound policy. The management has started off a week, not knowing how the feature is going to take with the public. But he does know that he has certain short subjects and novelties which are pretty sure-fire entertainment. Yet he goes right on devoting 90% or more of the advertising space to THE picture, hoping its title or its “names” will bring them in, and counting on the bill as a whole to give satisfaction.

From England this week comes an article written by “C. A. L.” in the Manchester Guardian, one of the old conservatives, and one of the recognized leading newspapers of the world, the subject matter of which gives credit to the comedies, their makers and their players.

The article is meat all the way through and I should like to quote it in part:

“...The comedy makers! How much we owe to them and how faintly, how very faintly, we acknowledge the debt! They have been too long with us, chasing and jostling and rib-tickling since the earliest days of motion pictures, and we have come to take their existence for granted, have almost ceased to be aware of it as a matter for criticism or applause.

“Actually in the comedy fold one meets the masters. Here are great technicians of the screen. Here are the workers and the thinkers, the serious men of the industry. . . . As craftsmen they would be appalled by the careless construction of the average ‘serious’ film, and as artists they would be shocked by its crude sentiment, its conventionality, its complete inability to ring true. Better, at the worst a pad of whitewash and a custard pie well thrown than a unawkish little child in a nightdress reheating father and mother in the last reel. For excellence in serious drama we must go to Europe; in England and America the comedians reign
"Humor or fantasy, farce, burlesque, knockabout—a screen 'comedy' may be any one of these. There is room for all, and each has its individual virtue. . . . The slapstick comedians have filled the front rows of seats for many a year gone by. And comedy in general has made serious drama possible, has provided contrast and whetted appetite, has blunted criticism and kept tempers sweet. To every maker of comedy, from Chaplin down to Snooky the chimpanzee, the cinema owes a debt of gratitude and a need of applause."

The above is indeed, a mighty tribute to the efforts of those who have created good will and laughter, and I for one appreciate it deeply. But it still remains for American theaters to recognize what this English writer has pointed out. In the last few years conditions under which comedy (short comedy) has been slighted have forced some of the leading comedy entertainers into competition in feature-length films. Some of this transition has been done with success, but there have been more failures.

I have talked to two-reel comedy producers who have been utterly discouraged with the outlook. One of them said the other day, "We are in the wrong end of this business. It seems you can nowadays turn out any old sort of bunk in a 'feature' and it gets by. But if you put your best efforts into two-reelers, all you get is the leavings."

I shouldn't like to be as pessimistic as that, because I believe that thinking exhibitors, and there are thousands of them in this country, realize what the two-reel comedy means to their audiences, and that they will save the comedy from oblivion by giving it its proper place on the bill—and on the billboard.

The Importance of the Short Subject

By HAROLD B. FRANKLIN

Famous Players Theater Department

A theater can be judged by the short subjects shown. Here can be determined the showmanship of the Exhibitor. A good showman will devote the same effort in the buying and presentation of the short subjects as he does to the best picture, and that is what distinguishes the better grade theaters from the "grind" variety.

A wealth of material is available amongst short subjects that can be of great help in balancing and building a program, giving it variety, dignity and entertaining value. The importance of short subjects therefore cannot be overlooked.

The character of the short subjects has kept step with the development of the motion picture, judging from the many fine and varied subjects produced recently.

Short subjects lend themselves admirably for presentation, and particularly to musical interpretation. Frequently leading newspapers comment most favorably on certain short subjects showing they are being recognized as a vital part of the program.

A short subject good enough to be booked, should be screened with the same care as the feature and appropriate music selected.

A good news weekly and comedy ought to find a place on every program, with the rare exception when a lengthy, big super picture is shown. Everyone enjoys a good news reel—and as to comedies, we all know that there cannot be too much of laughter. A good "scenic" can be beautiful, interesting and at the same time fascinating—and this class of subject appeals—particularly to the better grade audiences. Many feel that the motion picture theater should contribute some portion of its program to educational purposes—and in the selection of this kind of subject, exhibitors can accomplish this without sacrificing entertaining value.

Rapid strides have been made in the short subject we know of today as compared to some years back. Many of the scenes are really travelogues edited with personality and wit. The "scientific" subjects are prepared by persons who are very familiar with their subject, and they have acquired the knack of throwing their subject on the screen so it is not only interesting but frequently good entertainment.

Recently we showed "The Einstein Theory of Relativity"—what might ordinarily be termed a scientific subject, yet at special morning matinees it was surprising to note the splendid support given by the public.

In conclusion it is comparatively an easy matter for an exhibitor to select a box office feature, but it is the creative exhibitor who appreciates the value of the short subject.

Keep 'Em Human

By BOB McGOWAN

(Alternating director with Tom McNamara of the Hal Roach "Our Gang" comedies.)

"Keep them human."

This is the only instruction Hal Roach gave me a year and a half ago when he engaged me as one of the directors of his "Our Gang" comedies. And I think that is the very secret of the success of these two reeers.

Humanness is the greatest of all dramatic or comic elements.

The youngsters who appear in these comedies are real. They are not stage kids. They are just everyday youngsters who can be found in any gang anywhere in the United States.

The element which we have to watch most in the making of these pictures is to keep the youngsters
A Message To Exhibitors:

In offering three series of twelve each, two reel topnotch comedies in which will star Monty Banks, Sid Smith and Joe Rock, I wish to state that these comedies are being produced at the Grand Studio, Hollywood, Cal., with every facility for the most modern production; that they are designed to fill a crying (I should say, a "laughing") need on the part of exhibitors.

The many lengthy features of heavy dramatic character demand relief in the shape of short subjects of a light nature. These must, however, be clean, clever and well made. They must be well written, well directed and cast, and they must be fast, funny and snappy.

There are not enough such pictures. In our eighteen years' experience, Mr. Harry Asher and myself, have learned the needs of the film showman perfectly. In a wide experience in exchange matters, we know the problem that continually confronts the exhibitor—where to get the material to balance and fill out a program.

That is why I am now producing comedies. I can guarantee their quality from my judgment based on the experience I have just mentioned.

Several of these comedies are now completed. I have seen them and can vouch for the fact that they are not only screamingly funny but out of the ordinary in every way. These comedy stars need no introduction because all are established, but their new vehicles are superior to anything they have ever done in the past.

Samuel V. Grand
natural and unaffected. For that reason we have assembled a group of kids who, with one or two exceptions, had no screen experience before they came on the Roach lot.

Probably the greatest mistake we could have made with these children was to have taught them how to act.

As they are today they go about their work actually unconscious that they are working. They take their efforts more as play. And that is the way we want to keep them.

We never rehearse them, nor do we ever show them what they are to do.

They are smart enough to be told what they are expected to portray before the camera, and then go ahead and do it without any rehearsing.

This system keeps them real. It does not permit them to become affected.

They are unspoiled by pampering or petting.

Our stories are written around human incidents. We never ask the children to do anything that we feel they would not do themselves if they were placed in the same situation.

Frequently we have let the little ones work out the situation themselves.

They are placed in a certain atmosphere, and given a general idea of what is expected of them. They seldom have any trouble solving their problems without our aid.

Grown up minds do not always conceive what youngsters would do in certain situations, and the moment you put the thoughts of the adult on the screen you spoil the reality and the appeal of your action.

Sincerity is always paramount in these pictures. It keeps them out of the rut of trite motion picture stuff.

"They must be human," Mr. Roach said of the youngsters and the stories, and his judgment is verified by the success of this series.

The Formula for the New Comedy

By HARRY POLLARD

Directors of "The Leather Pushers"

There was a time when comedy of the stage consisted of Gilbert and Sullivan’s lifting lyrics and syllabic puzzlements—when audiences saw the humor of the billiard sharp, for instance, doomed to the cell where

"There he plays extravagant matches
And Countless finger stalls,
On a cloth untrue with a twisty cue
And elliptical balliard balls!"

That time passed,—and comedy came to consist of "gags" as raw as the steak that’s supposed to cure a black eye. And now the pendulum has veered back again. On the stage the old-time comic operas are coming once more into their own, and the comedies of today are modeled on their subtle wit and whimsical humor.

In motion pictures the same thing applies. Once comedy was strenuous, and raised the price of eggs. It was—‘Break, Break, Break!

On a fat man’s face, O Pie!
’Tis thus that we garner our laughter,
And our comedy films get by!’

But the custard pie, in the films, has gone into the discard, just as has the "Hokum" musical comedy—and with it have vanished from the film comedies such former side-splitters as the chase by the comedy cops, the dropping of a safe from a third-story window on the comedian’s cranium, and others of the ilk.

Comedy today, in the pictures, is an art, just as comedy of the stage has come to be.

Who is to blame? Not the actor—not the director—not the author. The worker of this miracle is—the public! The public is our master;—we have to give audiences what they want—and audiences want logical laughs.

As an instance—"The Leather Pushers," being produced at Universal City with Reginald Denny. I mention this because, as director, I am perhaps more familiar with it than other comedies here.

H. C. Witwer’s stories are irresistibly funny in print, and as film comedies are equally funny. Still, there is not a line of "hokum" in the printed tales, nor in the filmed action. They carry a healthful message of clean sport and American manliness—their fun is the pure fun of pleasant human personalities in whimsical situations, lifelike episodes, and clever sayings. Wit replaces custard pies. Human interest replaces grotesque makeup. After all, the greatest comedian—and the greatest tragedian—is life.

We don’t make a comedy all comedy nowadays, either. We create all the laughs we can—clean, reasonable laughs—but we put a few thrills in—and a bit of love interest. A comedy all laughs ceases to be laughable—just as superabundance of sugar will spoil a dessert. Laughter must be governed by sense—or the public will not accept it, nowadays.

Reginald Denny’s realistic fights are exceptionally thrilling, and at times his acting in the love scenes is the highest art. But it’s all clean—and carries always the ideal of clean American sport. The laughs seem incidental—that’s why, taking one by surprise as they do, they’re remembered—and they’re more successful laughs.

Take another instance—Hoot Gibson in the new Universal production of "Blinky," which Edward Sedgwick has made a bit of rare artistry. Fundamentally the story is not funny—it is a rather pathetic struggle of a young chap, raised in the lap of luxury and suddenly handed an army commission and forced to undergo the grueling test of army training. One sympathizes with his troubles—with his love affair, and his earnest desire to make good.

But—his mishaps are so ludicrous that one laughs almost every minute of the film. But one is not laughing at the poor youth who falls into the caustic and mounts the horse wrong-end-to. There's a sympathy underneath the laughs—and we feel pride in his ultimate success. We are thrilled at the wild race with bandits—the spectacular cavalry dashes,—and then roar at the funny glasses of the ultimate hero. There's not a line of "hokum"—not a bit of slapstick: not a suggestion of the vulgar—and still how infinitely funnier the story is, and how infinitely more hilarious are the mishaps of the budding officer than the old time bombardment of custard pie, of the comedian's well-aimed quid of tobacco striking the knothole in the floor of the grocery store!

These are the new comedies—the comedies that the public demands nowadays and that we are giving, as per the public's order, at Universal City. Here Hoot Gibson, Reginald Denny, and other real artists—actors primarily and comedians through the nature of their material, are pioneering the new sort of laugh-producers. Not pioneering, either—I speak in a comparative picture sense only, for the stage has pioneered them—and revived the old classics, so old they are new, to lead the children of comedy out of the wilderness of hobum. The films have already succeeded in it—for Witwer's "Leather Pushers," Gene Markey's story of "Blinky," and Edward Sedgwick's "Out of Luck." Hoot Gibson's new story of the navy, are established successes.

After all, the secret of any play's or any film's success is the box-office. The new brand of comedy, on stage and in celluloid, is successful—because it pays. The public, our master, pays better money for the new comedy—the kind of comedy that same public wants.

The old formula was—"Hit 'em on the head and make laughs."

The new formula is—"Appeal to their brains; give them comedy they don't see with their eyes, but with their brains. And with it—give 'em thrills—give 'em heart interest—and make 'em wait!"

Dramatic suspense is a great thing—make 'em wait for the denouement—but let 'em laugh while waiting—just as the dentist hands the patient a comic paper to beguile the moments preceding his entrance into the chair of torture!

The public has brains—and the public likes to use 'em. Hence the new comedy—of logical laughs. They're the best market commodity in filmmdom, and they're here to stay.

Comedy Necessary to Successful Program

By JULIUS STERN, CENTURY COMEDIES

It is an undisputed fact that comedy acts as the dessert of a good program, just as ice cream or a demitasse acts as the dessert of a fine dinner. Theatergoers usually feel something is missing if the comedy is not forthcoming, just as the banquet-goer feels something is lacking when the dessert is not forthcoming. I place these comparisons in the same category only because they are attended to last, although many a comedy has saved a show. For this reason, although a two reel comedy may or may not be called the dessert of a good show, I do contend that comedy can be used the most effectively as a drawing card—if properly advertised and exploited. A good instance is Baby Peggy, our little four year old comedienne. Many theaters are advertising her above the feature, which shows the dessert can sometimes be the whole dinner.

Since my very first picture, I have always contended—and my statement has been backed up by such showmen as Sid Grauman, Hugo Reisenfeld and Samuel Rothafield—that comedy is absolutely a necessity. It is necessary not only to relieve the tension of two hours of drama or comedy-drama, but to give to the movie goer something light and digestible. By that I mean the theme and action of a two reel comedy are not problematic or liable to be misunderstood. It is a light theme—told with comedic situations, so that adult and child may see and understand.

Take the largest theaters in the country as a concrete example. Notice how the comedy, be it in two or in three reels, is advertised as part of the entertainment they offer to the movie-going public. A recent count of theater patrons who entered the theater solely to see the comedy averaged 25% of the total number of tickets sold. This is identical all over the country.

Not so long ago I had luncheon with a man who is reputed to be the biggest exhibitor in the United States. He told me, in answer to my question on comedies, that he would no more think of jumping out of the window than running his show, except on rare occasions, without short comedies. His ads and electric light advertising stand behind his statement.

This may not be true with all exhibitors, but it is the consensus of opinion all over the country. Since it is our duty to give the cheerful side of life to our patron, and since two reel comedies portray only the happy side of life—it is inevitable that comedy must be presented to the American audience.

How Good Short Subjects Help in Summer Season

By ELMER PEARSON Vice-President and General Manager, Pathe Exch., Inc.

There are many indications that this Summer will not present such troublesome problems for the exhibitor or distributor as have marked the last two—however, since it is a recognized difficulty, even at best, there usually evolves considerable discussion about it in advance until a psychological condition is created whereby the difficulty is aggravated.

Most exhibitors know that a given year consists of a number of bad weather days, besides seasonal slumps. They are, of course, ever hopeful that the particular approaching summer will not be as bad as usual, yet summer comes around once a year, and the more we talk about it, the more we worry about it, and the more we worry about it the less we are likely to put forth real efforts to resist it.

The bigger the theater and the bigger the exhibitor, the more helpless he seems to be in the face of bad weather. The smaller exhibitor, on the other hand, appears to weather summer the best.

Some of these smaller exhibitors are inured to difficulties, because they have them very largely the year round, thus probably are more capable of dealing with them.

However, a study of their methods might be beneficial to all of us.

In the first place, such exhibitors invariably run continuously about two serials per week, and since they are past masters at getting an unusually large percent-age of their customers out the first night of a serial, they have solidified themselves with liberal patronage for that particular night or nights of their week during the life of that serial, and it will be observed that such exhibitors plan far in advance for the starting dates of their serials so they will carry through any slump period they anticipate.

Again, having only a limited clientele to draw from, they perforce must get each one out as often each week as possible, thus an exceedingly varied program each week is imperative, and will be found on the small exhibitor's schedule.

If variety gets results where it is thus imperative, surely variety will increase box office receipts during dull periods, at least in localities where, in good season, the exhibitor may not be forced to consider it necessary.

A locality that offers as many as four dramatic entertainments per week, surely cannot be said to be offering very much in the way of variety, especially when such dramatic entertainment is made up largely of feature pictures ranging in length from six to ten reels.

The short subject supply offers real variety, and if combined into programs in a way that affords an opportunity of exploitation as such, and according to its just deserts, will help very materially in overcoming the summer bogy.

Why Short Subjects Are 100 Per Cent

WILLIAM FAIT, JR.,
Eastman Theater, Rochester

In complaining upon the length of features I do not consider the short subjects one hit less than 100%. The man who is using short subjects as fillers is kidding nobody but himself. They are as vital a part of a program as is the feature itself or as the music, and when the opportunity presents itself to run short subjects in this house they are as carefully presented as any other part of the program.

Recently we tried the presentation of a short piece of scenic film with special music and special setting, and the very fact that it met with some adverse criticism and some commendation is complete evidence that the public not only were interested in it but that they considered it a vital part of the program.

The News Weekly in this house is compiled from three news weeklies and a magazine subject. There is never a week passes that we do not get comments "The news was not so good this week," "Gee! what a snappy news," or "The news was fine" or "I did not like the news," again proving conclusively that the public are interested in this feature.

Cartoon subjects are not only entertaining to the public, but are a source of great wonderment and curiosity as to "how it is done."

The fact that Harold Lloyd's latest release is breaking box office records all over the country is again proof that the public, old and young, want good, clean comedy. How can we then afford to neglect or underestimate the value of comedies on our bills?

In this house we have our own ballet corps, which is meeting with marked success, but we do not feel that it is any more important part of the program than is the weekly, the magazine, the cartoon, the comedy or the scenic. To us the program with a feature so long that it has pushed everything else off the bill is like a banquet without soup, without relishes, without dessert, cigars and coffee and with a human phonograph for an after-dinner speaker.

All of this, however, does not mean that any old weekly, scenic, magazine or comedy slapped into a program makes a bill. All of these short subjects must be as carefully selected as the feature itself, not only for production values but for subject matter as well.

In my opinion, the continued success of motion picture exhibition depends solely on diversified program and, therefore, short subjects.

Summer and the Short Subject

By E. W. HAMMONS
President, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

It is encouraging to see the first signs of response by producers and directors to the growing demands of exhibitors everywhere for drastic curtailment in the length of feature productions.

With showmen in all parts of the country registering their emphatic protests against the tendency for longer feature pictures that were making it absolutely impossible for an exhibitor to build up a 100 per cent program, a few feature producers and directors are beginning to see the handwriting on the wall and are promising shorter features.

But this is only a start, and this campaign of protest by the exhibitors must be continued and continued vigorously if worthwhile results are to be obtained.

It is quite obvious that it will be some time before the reforms now taking place in a few of the studios will be seen on the screen, and the exhibitor who is going to keep his business going profitably during the coming warm months must take steps now to insure his summer business by more than usually judicious selection of the feature pictures which go into his summer programs.

If the exhibitor will be especially cautious now in avoiding the too-long feature picture for his summer evening programs, selecting in their place the five-reel subjects around which he can build a well-rounded program of diversified entertainment, he will be killing two birds with one stone. He will be putting his summer business on a sounder footing, and at the same time he will be serving notice on the producer of long features that he means what he says when he declares that the average feature subject must be of a more reasonable length or it will not be shown.

For many years vandeville—varied entertainment, with many different subjects that assure pleasure for all—has been the only kind of stage production that has been able to run consistently throughout the summer. The same human nature that makes this light, constantly changing entertainment, the only successful summer stage performance, assures the cream of the motion picture box-office returns during the warm weather to the showman who shuns the over-long, tiresome feature and gives his patrons a light, cheerful, varied program with plenty of comedy and novelty subjects, scenic stories, news reels, etc.

One of the best informed editors in the motion picture field has recently stated some figures that are absolutely convincing and must open the eyes of the exhibitor who has not been thoroughly awake to the danger to his box-office and his very existence in the growing length of program features. These figures showed that the few truly big pictures which were admittedly an entire show in themselves had brought in, in spite of their unquestioned success, only three per cent of the total box-office gross in this country during the year.

"And in many and many an instance," this editor adds, referring to the average picture show, "it is the short subject that saves the bacon.

With these figures before him no thoughtful exhibitor can doubt for a moment that it is THE SHOW—the entire, balanced program—for which the motion picture patron pays his money at the box office.

Now, with summer coming on, the exhibitor ought to give especially serious thought to this truth, and manage his bookings and advertising so as to make a good bid for the ninety-seven per cent of the box-office money that is paid for an entire evening's entertainment rather than for one picture.

Good Comedies Essential and Scarce

By MILES GIBBONS
Short Subject Sales Manager, Pathé

Comedy has been essential to the theater ever since the days when the Greeks first laid out their "air-domes."

The public has always had troubles of its own and goes to the theaters now, as in the old days, to forget them.

Probably that's why the average audience speaks right out and shows its approval of a good comedy by roaring with laughter.

Give them laughs! An audience watching a corking good comedy forgets all about the good or bad points of the rest of the show, bursts into laughter and leaves the theater making a mental note to come again.

Unfortunately, the production of motion picture comedies is a most difficult matter. At the present time there are at least two score successful feature producers, but the men who are able to turn out consistently good comedies can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

This being the case, the wise exhibitor realizes that it is just as necessary to "line up" his supply of comedies as it is to make sure of his supply of dramas. He knows that the supply is very limited—in fact, that there are not enough really good comedies to fill the demand.
Unusual Presentations for Short Subjects Successful Yet Inexpensive

By Rutgers Neilson

When special presentations for films are mentioned, your mind immediately pictures prologues for feature length subjects. But, exhibitor correspondence has informed Pathe Exchange of a number of instances where inexpensive presentations have been used with "Topics of the Day" and "Aesop's Film Fables," both short subjects, with excellent results. These ideas can be adapted and used advantageously by other exhibitors.

"Topics of the Day" was featured by the Chicago and Tivoli Theatres, in Chicago, with an unusual and effective presentation. A jazz orchestra of ten men played snappy selections behind a scrim drop in the center of the stage. Suddenly the musicians softened their tones and lights were dimmed. Then, a singer rendered a popular number simultaneously with the showing of the "Topics of the Day" newspaper humor upon the transparent screen. Of course, the soloist sang in subdued voice, so as not to detract attention from the jokes. Yet he sang loud enough to supply a novel musical accompaniment to the humor reel.

Smaller houses not having orchestras at their command can adapt this idea. A pianist placed behind a scrim screen can play lively music or otherwise and thus register a departure from the usual presentation of "Topics of the Day" at the particular theater. In Chicago, audiences responded to the novelty presentation with hearty applause.

Again many theater managers have found that "Topics" registers very effectively without musical accompaniment. These managers declare that music distracts attention from the screen as audiences are bound to be swayed by the rhythm and often hum the tune. Thus they cannot concentrate upon the screen as they can in a silent house. Without music a joke is placed upon its own merits. If it is good it gets laughs which can be heard. Laughter is contagious and those patrons who are a little slow in getting the point of some jokes are tickled by the merriment of others.

So, it seems a toss-up whether or not to use music with "Topics of the Day." But at any rate all audiences seem to enjoy the humor from the press of the world.

B. F. Keith's Colonial Theater in New York City gave a novel presentation to one of "Aesop's Film Fables" and scored a hit. While the audience was still laughing at a comedy act, the screen was lowered, the lights dimmed and "The Alley Cat" one of Paul Terry's funniest pen pictures was shown. The opening scenes showed mice scampering about the home of Farmer Al Falfa. Suddenly several of the comedians appearing on the bill rushed up to the screen and attempted to swat the mice. The surprise of seeing the actors in the flesh chasing the screen mice touched a popular chord of humor. Laughter resounded throughout the theater as the audience gave vent to their amusement. The actors continued their efforts until the scene changed. Next, a close-up of a mouse was pictured and one of the comedians scampered up to the screen and attempted to bait the mouse with a red rose. During the rest of the screening, the actors added other appropriate bits of by-play which accentuated the humor in the film. The idea will probably be used in other Keith vaudeville houses.

Any exhibitor can use this little stunt to give a presentation effect to his showing of the "Fables." These comics always have some scenes which offer opportunities for play-up in the manner done at the Colonial. It is not necessary to have trained actors to do the bits of comedy by-play. The ushers or other attachés will be glad to enter into the fun of the screening. A rehearsal might be held but impromptu actions will prove almost as effective.

On Broadway the Capitol and Strand use specially cued jazz music to play-up the "Fables," and accentuate the funny gags with various laugh-making effects. Jazz music accompaniment should not be played too loud or it will drown out the sounds of laughter.

The Grand Central, in St. Louis uses musical effects advantageously for both "Topics" and "Fables." Before screening the newspaper humor reel, a slide announces a message similar to this: "Listen to our orchestra play 'Happy Days' while you laugh at 'Topics.'" The curiosity of the audience as to what selection is being played is gratified and they can give their attention to the screen rather than stopping to ask their friends sitting nearby what selection the orchestra is playing.

This theater also uses music to add enjoyment to the "Fables." The musical director prepares a special cue sheet for each subject. This cueing of the "Fables" has proved so successful that the producers of the film are having cue sheets prepared for all releases. With these sheets any exhibitor can provide correct musical accompaniment for the pictures.

a FILM GUILD production

THE jazziest picture of the Age of Jazz written by a member of New York’s "400" and played by some of the best known young social leaders of the city as supporters of Glenn Hunter.

The best hot weather picture you will find this year, in which the youthful star of "Merton of the Movies" finds one of his greatest roles.
FOR BETTER BUSINESS

CHARLES URBAN
GREAT AMERICAN AUTHORS

Composed of twelve one-reel dramas picturizing some of the well known works of such men as HAWTHORNE, WHIT- TIER, LONGFELLOW, POE, and others.

"I consider it a privilege to recommend Urban's Great American Authors Series to every theatre manager," writes Joseph Plunkett, Managing Director of the New York Strand Theatre.

A great tonic for any program.

TRIARTS

This great series of two-reel subjects has received more praise from press, public and exhibitors than any other two-reel subject ever released. They feature Mary Astor, the beautiful young actress, who has stepped into the front ranks of stardom over night.

"These two-reelers are worth seeing," says the Milwaukee Journal.

"Let them go on and make more," says the New York Times.

"A contribution to the screen," says the National Board of Review.

Get "THE BEGGAR MAID," "THE BASHFUL SUITOR," "THE YOUNG PAINTER" and "HOPE" on your program now!

DAYS AFIELD with ROD and GUN

In these days of big game pictures, and the great success they are enjoying; considering the perfectly astounding box office records that are being established by Hodkinson's "Down To The Sea In Ships," this series of six one-reel sport pictures should go over like a million dollars in your theatre. They are little wonders. They have been prepared under the supervision of Eltinge F. Warner, publisher of Field and Stream, the greatest sport magazine of its kind in the world, and show the hunting of duck, wild turkey, and also some very thrilling fishing expeditions. Just the thing for the summer program.

Probably no one-reel subject has ever received the wide distribution and praise that has been accorded the OFFICIAL URBAN MOVIE CHATS of the MOVIE CHATS OF THE MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS OF AMERICA. Movie Chats is the voice of the Screen interpreting events of national importance in a manner never heretofore attempted. It is the one and only film yet produced to impart a personality to the motion picture exhibitor.

The EX-KAISER in EXILE

Millions of Americans want to see this picture.
This film shows the ex-Kaiser in his day-by-day life behind the barred gates of Huiss Doorn, a virtual prisoner in his twenty-acre empire. The value of these unusual pictures are enhanced by the fact that the ex-Kaiser, unconscious that he was being photographed, was entirely off his guard, hence some very remarkable shots were obtained. It is without doubt one of the most sensational short subjects ever released.

BRAY COMEDIES

Nothing is as funny on the screen as a good animated cartoon, and when you get a combination of cartoon and photographic reproduction you have comedies that cannot be beat.
The Bray series telling of the new adventures of “Col. Heeza Liar,” are by far the funniest comedies of their type ever produced for the screen. This is borne out by the fact that the best theatres in the country are booking them. Especially do we urge that you get for your theatre at once, “Col. Heeza Liar in the African Jungle,” because it is one of the funniest travesties on the Big Game pictures that could possibly be made.

BRAY ROMANCES

In addition to the Bray Comedies here is another series that is certainly taking the country by storm. Bray Romances are a series of remarkable technical one-reel subjects that visualize the most recent and startling discoveries of science.
One can easily judge the worth of this series by reviewing the tremendous success of “The Mystery Box,” which explains the whole principle of radio. This subject has received more advertising and exploitation from exhibitors than any short subject ever released.
If you have not been fortunate enough to have played one of this series as yet now is the time to do it.

the wit and humor of the world compiled by one of America’s greatest weeklies, “The Literary Digest.” Week after week this reel goes out filled with the cream of the funny sayings of the press of the world, and considering the way in which they are received we feel more than justified in saying that never has there been a reel of its kind produced that could touch it for real entertainment.
Incidentally, this is the only reel sponsored by this periodical.
How Canadian Showmen Regard Short Subjects

Toronto—That short subjects of merit are to be more prominently featured in the programs of Canada’s leading theaters than they ever have been is indicated in the announcement of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., that the two-reel Cone subject, “The Message of Emile Cone,” was given a day-and-date release in many of the company’s biggest theaters and will have the attention of a “super de luxe” attraction. Special advertising, publicity and billboard exploitation campaigns have been mapped out in the company’s home office and every manager on the circuit has been instructed to “Put ’er over like the biggest of the big ones.”

While all of the Canadian theaters are keenly interested in their “little pictures,” perhaps none is giving the matter as much consideration as the Famous Players chain. The Cone pictures are not the first short subjects that have been handled in an elaborate way. When Famous Players-Lasky put out “A Trip to Paramount” the subject was featured in the billing and in the programs in all of the Famous Players Canadian theaters and is credited with making a big hit both at the box offices and with the fans.

Whenever a short subject is worth it, this company gives the single or two-reeler equal prominence with the feature in the advertising, and the company’s managers now freely admit that many a mediocre feature has been put over by the extra short stuff on the program.

The single reel Harold Lloyd re-issues have been played in many of the Dominion’s leading houses and have proved outstanding attractions wherever used.

But not today. Now the community exhibitor who keeps a little ahead of his competitors leads the parade by the manner in which he presents his program and by the screen novelties which he incorporates in his particular style of entertainment.

The past year has brought the animated cartoon far to the front. Our old friend and schoolmate, “Felix the Cat,” has done more to bring about this condition than any other subject of the kind, unless, perhaps, Mister Bobby Bumps. In many theaters—and this goes for most of the big ones—“Felix” has been one of the old standbys, ranking in appeal especially to the youngsters with the other favorites of the screen. “Felix” has come in for his full share of advertising and publicity in Canada, and should a nation-wide popularity contest be held today, this celebrity certainly would win his share of the votes. More than one manager will vouch for the statement that the cartoon comedy has kept close on the heels of the two-reel comedy. Most showmen say they would rather present a snappy cartoon than a silly two-reeler.

Such subjects as “Aesop’s Fables” and the Tony Sarg’s have been given deserved prominence in the better theaters. The topical reels have enjoyed a wide popularity and still would be going strong nearly everywhere were it not for the stale material that the editors permitted to creep in all too frequently.

The demand for serials has held up in spite of the fact that some of those released during the current season have not been up to the distributor’s standard. The exchanges that really have something in this line have had little difficulty in selling at excellent prices. The typical serial house continues to draw business with this sort of entertainment. Even those houses that decided not to run serials at all week-end performances have kept to these reels for Saturday matinees and special programs. Some of the bigger theaters have accepted the serial idea for the first time and have shown them at matinees only. In this way they have increased their afternoon’s receipts.

Looking at it from all angles, the current season has been one of the best for the short subjects, which have grown both in popularity with the public and the exhibitor.

The Famous Players Canadian Corp., gives as much consideration to the buying of these reels as it does to the purchasing of the big pictures. Circuit buys frequently are made, but more often the singles and two reeulers are bought to fill the needs of certain theaters, the buyers having familiarized themselves with what the various managers have found the best money getters.

Bull Montana’s new comedy, “Rob ‘Em Good,” is to have a run in nearly all of the big theaters here. This, too, will be given additional advertising, Stan Laurel’s comedy, “Mud and Sand,” is having a big run throughout the Dominion and also is getting top position in all theater announcements.

The news weeklies are growing in popularity. Canadian and British events are featured. When the producers have a special reel it always is in marked demand.

Scenics and travels have “arrived.” Since the days when Lyman Howe came through Canada with his own shows, pictures of this type have received the greatest consideration by the exhibitors. Of course, this country possesses the exhibitor who says, “My patrons won’t sit through a scenic,” but the booking sheets at the exchanges show that the “Educational” reels are in greater demand today than ever before.

The Pathé Review, acknowledged one of the finest single reels in the market, has the call among those showmen who have come to realize the importance and necessity of a well-selected program. This subject provides a number of highly entertaining little featurettes each week and their use in even the smaller theaters is an interesting development of the past year. The desire of the neighborhood house manager to give variety to his program by “splitting up the show” with material from the Review and other reels of the type is noticeable. Time was when the neighborhood man would slap on his feature, a comedy and a weekly—an occasionally but not often—a scenic or travel and let it go at that.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of this circuit, receives a report on all short subjects in the Canadian market. Each subject offered for sale is screened by Mr. Nathansons personal board of review, which is composed of theater managers, bookers and publicity men. The board members report on the box office and entertainment values of the subjects screened and their suitability for certain houses. These reports then are turned over to the buyers who negotiate the best possible purchase.

All short subjects selected for the Nathanson theaters—now numbering forty from Montreal to Vancouver—have to meet a high standard of entertainment value before they are given consideration. Any subject that verges on the suggestive or may be deemed unfit for the eyes of children is promptly eliminated even though it may have been reported as possessing the required box office timber.

The Filler

By TOM GIBSON

Writing and Directing CRESCENT COMEDIES.

Russell Studios, Hollywood, Cal.

The making of a comedy is a mighty serious business. So serious that I doubt if in any other line of endeavor a group of makers of any product can be found to be more studious, more alert to detect the trend of the public’s likes and dislikes, more eager to make their work stand for something better than the rank and file of the-makers of “Custard-Pie Drama.” Yep, it’s a great life if one doesn’t weaken.

Gags, more gags, new situations, pretty sets, “swell” gowns, clever people and then more clever people. Keep the cost down and the quality up, and then—keep the film going through the laboratory, you’re working on a schedule y’know. You bet it’s a great life. No chance for the old bean to get atrophied; little chance for there to be any inactive corpuses in that, reputed to be vacant, button button bobbing around on top of the old spine. Art, Medicine, Music, Engineering, Science, Literature. Psychology, Physiology, Physics, Metaphysics, Phrenology, Statistics are just a few of the main “isms” the average maker of comedy has to be on speaking terms with. Yea, you’d be surprised.

High brow bunk? Mebbe, but just to prove yourself open to conviction or me a liar, take a good under-the-skin slant at the next comedy you look at. Forget the hokum. Strip it of the funny clothes and the grotesque action. Eliminate the gags and the forced situations and see what you’ve got. A drama of the first water. One that DeMille or Niblo, or Ince or a lot of the other top-notchers would “knock you off your seat” with. Don’t think for a second that that strong dramatic back-bone just happened to crawl in there between the dark-room and the shipping can. It was put there by some lad that knew his “isms”; knew ‘em so well he could mix the elements he needed to produce the effect or the result he wanted, like a chemist would put up a prescription. Then he had to be a human being. Had to know what you and I and the other fellow likes and dislikes. The deep-down-under-the-skin, things that we never say anything about, even to our closest friends and wives.

Caricature is a high type of art. The cartoonist has ideals. In his medium he expresses them with a line. The brush artist requires a whole canvas and a couple of pounds of color. Comedy is the caricature of the drama. As the cartoon has a vital place in the publishing field, so the comedy has a value in the cinema.

When one can laugh at the other fellow’s mishaps, he is learning to be able to laugh at his own. When one fits oneself into his rightful place in this grand comedy called life and is able to look at it as though it were a big film in which he was taking part he will have fewer wrinkles and less grey hair when it comes his time to “check out,” and he will have had a whale of a lot more fun. The lowly comedy, when considered from this angle, will “do it’s stuff.”

When you see the strutting Shiek get it where the ostrich had his sore throat, you smile because deep under your skin you hate a strutter, a poseur, and being reminded of it, you are less liable to unconsciously let yourself become one. The comedy is an educator. It drives its points home with sledge-hammer blows as no other sugar-coated medium can. Slapstick or otherwise to the “bono publico” and that doesn’t mean “bone-headed public” either.

It may be only a “filler.” It may not be attributed with audience-drawing power. It may be the dog-eared deuce in the shiney deck of “super productions.” But the day of its appreciated value is dawning. It’s up to you, Mr. Exhibitor, to pull off a quiet little campaign of subtle education. Give the comedy a chance to stand on it’s own not just something that the “big feature” dragged in to fill up the program.
Some Thrills in Picture Making

HE HAD A REASON
By Bert Roach

I got a thrill the other day—but I'd have furnished a greater one if I hadn't been bashful.

They took me out from Universal City to the Mathewson Ranch to play a role in Hobart Henley's "Lady of Quality," and just naturally stuck me on a decidedly skittish horse with an English saddle.

Now, I never rode an English saddle before. And my silk trousers were very, very tight. And I weigh 250—as the horse knows mighty well.

Well, that horse bounced me all around and I lost all interest in the charm of the beautiful forest and the joys of the old English fox-hunt. As I said—I never rode an English saddle before—and my silk trousers were very tight.

"Fine!" said Henley. "Now, Bert, you can get off the horse."

And I longed to—oh! How I longed to. But I didn't.

"What's the matter?" asked Henley. "You don't have to stay on that horse any more."

"I can't get off until Miss Valli leaves!" I said.

For as I remarked—it was an English saddle—and I'm fat—and the trousers were tight—and the horse bumped up an down.

Need I explain?

I can't;—Miss Valli might read this!

GETTING A THRILL
By Fred Thomson

During the war I was assigned as chaplain at Camp Kearney, with the 143rd Artillery, and, because of my athletic record, I was also made football coach and athletic director. Incidentally I played my old position of right end in the artillery team.

Well, we prepared a big practice game in honor of Mary Pickford, honorary colonel of the regiment, who was coming to pay a visit the next day. I got through the first half all right, and in the second half an opposing player jumped on the leg. There was a crack—and I passed out. The leg had broken at the weak place.

When I came to, in the hospital I found that Mary Pickford was there, holding my hand—and on the other side was Frances Marion, who had come to the camp with Miss Pickford, holding the other.

Frances Marion is Mrs. Fred Thomson now.

One of the liveliest thrills I ever had in line with picture work was a few weeks ago in "The Eagles' Talons." I was supposed to drop over the eaves of a building in Los Angeles, and of course a net was set for me. But by some mistake it was set wrong—and I did not find it out until over the edge. I hung to a cornice that overlapped and then dropped to the end of a rope. I got a sprained ankle for my pains—but that cornice saved my life.

HIS GREATEST THRILL
By Jack Daugherty

My most thrilling moment? It happened just a few days ago—and tomorrow I start for Europe with Mrs. Daugherty—the world knows her as Barbara La Marr—on our honeymoon.

I had been paying assiduous court to Barbara—and was so deeply in love I couldn't even think of the plays I was doing—and was desperately trying to marshal up enough courage to propose. Then I picked up a newspaper—last Saturday, that was—and read headlines like this:

"I'M THROUGH WITH MEN SAYS..... BARBARA LA MARR.

"Film star won't wed again—ever—she says."

I thought it would be no use—and believe me I was some blue hombre. Then, in the evening, I went to call on Barbara. Finally I veered the subject around to the interview in the paper.

"Foolish boy!" she said. "Just to show you that it was only a press-agent story—I'll marry you right away!"

That was the greatest thrill I ever got in my life—in pictures or out of it—and I'm glad that press agents don't always tell the truth. Anyhow—we're on our way to Europe.

FLAGPOLE RELIEF
By Jay Marchant

We were over in Cuba a few years ago, camping in the old fortress of Morro Castle, filming location stuff for "Do or Die," a famous old Universal, when we had the scare of our lives. The Cuban soldiers brought in one of their fellows who'd just killed another soldier in a drunken fight, and locked him in a cell overlooking us picture folk in the courtyard. The fellow howled threats at us from the window, and promised to kill us all on his release, but we didn't pay much attention. The bars looked strong. Finally he disappeared, and we found he'd been released.

Well, in a few hours he came back, boiling drunk, and brandishing a big machete. He announced that he'd kill me first—he took a dislike to me for some reason, or maybe he thought all assistant directors ought to be killed;—I don't know. Anyhow we took to cover, and he ran around brandishing his knife until the soldiers came and tried to recapture him. He put up a fight—and they had to shoot him. Believe me we breathed a sigh of relief when that episode was over—and I climbed down from the top of a flagpole. I may not be a hero, but I’ve got good common sense when I see a soused Cuban soldier with a knife as long as a serial script.

BREAKING IN BY DIVING
By Jack Mower

I landed in San Francisco from Honolulu with the Outriggers’ Club swimming team, due to give a swimming exhibition, and incidentally won the fifty yard Pacific Coast championship. There was a big crowd out, and I attracted some little attention.

Finally two prosperous-looking strangers approached me, and asked if I’d entertain a theatrical engagement.

Would I? I fairly jumped at it—with visions of the Follies or the Keith Circuit or something big like that, name in the lights on Broadway, and so forth. I repaired to an office with them—and signed a long and elaborate contract.

Horrors! I found I’d signed up to do a dive from a seventy foot platform twice a day, into a six foot tank, for the Ringling Circus.

It was too late to back out, so all summer I traveled with the big show and got two thrills a day, diving into that canvas tank affair and hoping it was good and full—for it’s a tough dive at best in that depth, and the canvas usually leaks a bit.

Thence I gravitated into the pictures—and Carl Laemmle gave me my big chance at Universal. Since then I’ve tried to merit his confidence in me.

LION STUFF
By Ruth Royce

The most thrilling experience I remember, and I only remember a part of it, was in one of the animal plays we made at Universal City. The scene was the jungles of Africa, and we had a camp set up in the shooting arena. William Craft, the director, told me I was to stand by a tent, pretend to faint when the lions approached, and they’d jump over my prostrate body into their cages. Sounded fine—but I was terribly frightened.

Well, I stood by the tent and the cameras ground away. The lions were let out of one cage and I dutifully fainted as they bounded my way.

“You did it beautifully!” said Mr. Craft, after the lions were safely locked up. “Get up—it’s all over!”

But I didn’t get up. For, you see, I’d really fainted! I came to in the Universal City Hospital, and even though Curly Stecker, the tamer, says the lions are gentle as kittens I don’t want to do any more animal scenes. I don’t like lions—gentle or otherwise.

I guess the director got a bigger thrill out of the scene than I did, though, when he found me unconscious after the bit was shot.

DANGLING IN THE AIR
By Duke Worne

The biggest thrill I ever had I got out of Al Wilson, the stunt aviator. It’s said that new actors usually make a triumphal appearance on a lot in a big limousine and chauffeur;—well, Al did more than that. There was a host of visitors on the lot; Carl Laemmle, Mary Pickford, and others, and Al came overhead in his plane, dropped to another, then clung by one hand while we gasped.

Then he seemed to tire, struggled desperately to raise himself to the wing, failed miserably—and finally dropped!

Well, our hearts were in our mouths—and then we saw he was dangling apparently in the air. He had fastened a piano wire cable to the wing, and attached it to a stout belt, and the fake fall was just a thriller for us.

He’s going to do the same thing today at the Rogers Flying Field in Los Angeles to celebrate the opening of “The Eagles’ Talons. So the crowds can get the same thrill I got.

Al doesn’t get any thrill out of it. He’s so used to the air that these things are just routine to him—but the watcher gets it!

GOING SOME
By Albert J. Smith

The biggest thrill of my picture experience was at Fort Bragg, during the filming of a Universal thriller. It seems that they load lumber onto ships there by a conveyor borne on a cable slung from the high cliffs to the ships in the cove some five hundred feet away and one hundred feet down.

Roy Stewart and I were slated to pull off a fight on a pile of lumber on the conveyor as it flew downward to the ship.

Well, the load started down at about 60 miles an hour, we struggling and fighting. After we had traveled some 300 feet he knocked me off, to drop 60 feet into the cove, and then dived after me.

It was a thrilling experience. I will never forget those few seconds dropping through the air to the water—they seemed an eternity. But we made it safely—and after it was all over Roy Stewart assured me that we were never in any actual danger.

But I don’t know—I wouldn’t do it again for all the money in the picture business, I think.
The Development of New Comedy Stars
By LOU ANGER
(General Manager of Buster Keaton Comedies)

Personality is perhaps the greatest factor in the success of a comedian. All the ingenuity of high-priced "gag" men and comedy scenarists, the erection of great sets, the expenditure of large sums and hard work will not get a comedian "over," if the latter lacks that indefinite appeal to the public which cannot be described.

I contend that the making of a successful comedy is infinitely more difficult than the building up of a drama. In making a serious photoplay the director works from a carefully planned scenario. There is less room for the director to use his imagination and inventive spirit in producing the ordinary photoplay which has been mapped out in every detail by experts in the scenario department.

The making of a comedy today, just as it was ten years ago, is largely a matter of extemporaneous improvisation. It is true that a vast amount of work is done before a single scene is shot and a skeleton of a story that has been pretty well "meated-out" is given the comedian when he starts work. But the completed comedy seldom bears anything but a general family resemblance to the original comedy scenario. Most of the best stuff is "thought up on the spot" during the making of the comedy.

That is where the comedian himself makes or breaks a picture. If he has a brain. If he is inventive. If he can pass instantly on what is funny and what is not. If his brain kinks are as funny as his bodily contortions the results will show in the finished film. After all, the comedian who stars in the picture is the boss. He makes what he wants to make. And he thumbs down what he doesn't want to make. This holds goods while the picture is being shot as well as during the elimination work in the cutting room.

Yes, a comedy star must have more personality even than a dramatic star. A good director sometimes can "make" a dramatic star. All the directors in the world cannot "make" a comedian. Buster Keaton made himself. Charlie Chaplin made himself. Harold Lloyd did likewise.

The comedian's role is more difficult, too, than the dramatic star's. For the comedian must portray an infinitely greater number of characterizations in the course of his career than does a dramatic star. Making the public laugh is the highest paid work in the film world because it is the most difficult.

There are a thousand well-paid actors who portray serious roles in Hollywood. But there are but few among them who could hold a job in a comedy studio of the first rank. There's a reason. The gift which enables an actor to make others laugh is a rare one.

The number of comedians in the photoplay field who are "sure fire" can be counted on the thumb and fingers of one hand—and I'm not so sure about the thumb.

The greatest comedians are those whose humor is unconscious. Buster Keaton is one of those rarities in the comedy field. His humor is spontaneous. It is logical. It is true to life. It is often unconscious.

A comedian must be able to get into "pickles" quickly. And he must know how to get out of them. And both in the getting in and the getting out he must have the sympathy of the public.

"Gags" must be consistent with the plot. They must belong in the picture. Each must be funny and their connection with the foregoing and following "gags" should be such that the elimination of one "gag" would destroy the continuity of the picture.

Formerly "gags" were thrown into comedies just because they would get a laugh. Some of them did. But comedies have improved since then. Nowadays the public wants a consistent comedy plot or theme. I can best compare the comedy of ten years ago with that of today by using the comparison of a necklace and a chain. In the old days "gags" were strung along like beads on a necklace. If one of the beads fell off or was lost in the shuffle no one missed it. Nowadays if a gag link is lost from the chain the comedy becomes disjointed.

Today if we think of a good gag during the making of a picture we do not twist the plot to work it in where that course would contort the comedy. Instead we have a stenographer type out the gag and file it away until it can be used in a legitimate manner at some future date.

By HUNT STROMBERG
(Producer of the Bull Montana Comedies)

The old fallacy that it was possible to take a player of undetermined popularity and make him a star by dint of publicity, electric lights and the size of the type in which his name is displayed, has long since been disproved.

It is true that the public is ever seeking new faces and personalities, but unless the possessor of such requirements is developed carefully and logically, the public will not long accept him as a star.

The first picture with which I was connected as a producer was "The Foolish Age," starring Doris May. I engaged Bull Montana for one of the character parts that he had already made famous. The manner in which he made his role one of the outstanding ones of the production convinced me that he was a comedian of undeniable ability. An analytical canvas of the country’s leading exhibitors proved that Bull Montana was also a name with a genuine box-office value.

I do not believe it wise to give the public too much of any star. It is far better to have them leave the theater with a desire to see more of the star, for then they will be eagerly looking forward to his next release. The producer owes it to his star to protect him. By handling him carefully he can lengthen the term of his popularity.

EXPLOITING SHORT SUBJECTS
By Victor M. Shapiro, Pathe

Short Subject exploitation presents an entirely different problem to the showman, than exploiting features.

To many exhibitors, the length of the picture determines the amount of exploitation given to it. Should it?

If mere footage is the yardstick by which the exhibitor measures drawing power, then many opportunities are passed up to exploit Short Subjects which have great appeal and are of a fine quality.

The problem of exploiting quality Short Subjects is one both of presentation and continuous advertising.
The wise showman will hammer and hammer away on the slant that no matter what the feature is, his audience will always see a good show. How often do the critics make the comment, “Even though the feature was weak, the rest of the bill was excellent.”

As a means of making the Short Subjects act as a business stimulator, successful showmen have found their best allies to be their lobby, their presentation and persistent advertising that “the public is always sure to see a good show at ——— Theater.”

Some showmen have even featured some out-of-the-ordinary Short Subject over the feature. This happened time and time again with Lloyd when he produced two-reelers.

Ballyhoo exploitation has not entered strongly into the Short Subject field. One striking exception to this, however, was a parade staged by a Los Angeles exhibitor on the “Our Gang” Comedies. He had the advantage of having the original “Our Gang” from the Roach Studios parade through the streets with a sign, “Our Gang is on its way to see ‘Our Gang’ at the ——— Theater.”

Serials, however, particularly Westerns, make excellent ballyhoo material, giving ample opportunity for poster cut-outs, atmosphere lobby displays, stunts, street parades and novelty distribution.

THE SHORT LENGTH SUBJECT ABROAD

By William M. Vogel

The feature length production and short length subject differ materially in salability throughout foreign film markets. This is chiefly due to the varying grad-atons of development of motion picture exhibition and exploitation abroad. Such is the wide range of progress of the film business that we can go from the high level of England where next to the United States the short subject is sold for its intrinsic worth to many Latin speaking territories or such territories where native populations far outnumber the colonies of whites in which the short subject (and then almost exclusively the comedy, regardless of quality) is thrown in by the exchange without charge to give length to the exhibi-tor’s program beyond that which the feature provides.

Of short length product, two reels is most popular and salable. The market for two reel comedies in most foreign countries is good. The prices obtainable are dependent upon the quality of any given series. A genuinely interesting two reel novelty subject also finds a prompt sale in most of the foreign markets.
Star value is an important factor at all times. There are however, still too many foreign markets where the sale of worthwhile two reel productions drags un-justifiably. On the other hand, there are too many two reel subjects of insufficient merit on the market today which because of being sold at lower prices hold back the development of the genuinely meritorious two reeler.

The one reel subject comes next in popularity and salability but there is a wide gap between the demand for the one reel and the two reel subject. Yet, one reel comedies of good quality or with star value usually do not lack buyers. In some territories comedies must be simple and elementary enough to be understood and appreciated to have commercial value.

Scenics, cartoons, instructional and ordinary novelties in one reel usually find a good market in England, Australia, Scandinavia and South Africa. In other territories the demand for these subjects varies according to the supply of cheap reels manufactured in Europe. On account of the low printing prices in France, a large number of these one reel subjects are sold at a little more than American printing cost.

The three and four reel subjects meet with varying indifference abroad unless there is real star value or some special appeal.

All in all, the development of the short subject abroad is not keeping pace with the development of the feature, quite duplicating the history of the short subject in the United States where it did not come into its own until long after the feature.

BETTER TYPE OF SERIAL POPULAR

By Edgar Oswald Brooks

The Serial Sales Manager, Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The drawing power of the right kind of serial, and the value of the serial episode in the category of short subjects, never were more forcibly demonstrated than at the present time. For many years Pathe has led the world in the field of motion picture continued story product, and has always endeavored to look far ahead and thus anticipate the public demand.

Time was when ultra-sensational, ultra-melodramatic, episodic claptrap appeared to be ideal material upon which to build motion picture serials. At that time the public did not seem to care whether the story had any consistency of plot or any proper continuity of action; just so long as it was filled with thrills and stunts, murders and crimes of all kinds, that type of serial made a lot of money both the exhibitor and the producer.

Then came a natural reaction: in keeping with the trend for better motion picture entertainment of all kinds, the serial came in for its share of improvement; so we had an era of motion picture serials in which the chief attractions were dare-devil stunts, with melodramatic physical action, yet still without much regard being paid to the probabilities or possibilities or even to proper consecutive arrangement of scenes. In other words, that type of serial was built around a series of “thrills,” one or more to each episode, and the story was entirely secondary in importance. That phase of the serial also had its day.

But as the public became more and more sophisticated, demanding better and more logical and consistent story material in its motion picture serials, it has become evident that the producers of serials can do no better than emulate the example of the very successful magazine publishers, who rely to a large extent for their millions of circulation, monthly and weekly, upon good, sterling melodramatic serials.

Looking sufficiently into the future, Pathe was able to line up stories of that identical type and for over two years past has been concentrating its serial energy upon that class of material. Hence we have been able to adapt to the uses of PATHESERIALS stories by such world famous authors and dramatists as Robert W. Chambers, Emerson Hough, Johnston McCulley, George B. Seitz, Gilson Willets, and others.

Our serial of today is therefore a very close approximation on the screen of the fiction serial read by millions every week and every month, hence makes it a very powerful appeal to that identical class. The character of its reception by exhibitors and their patrons is the best argument in its favor.
AN INNOVATION FOR THE PROGRAM
By Fred E. Baer

There was a telegraphic despatch printed in The Film Daily recently quoting Wallace Worsley that "unless the public is enlightened about pictures, there will be none in ten years."

That is a wild guess, of course, but even if Mr. Worsley did have cause to worry on account of styles and conditions as they have been all along, that cause would disappear on account of one of the newest developments in motion pictures.

I refer to the development of the Phonofilm by Lee DeForest, famous radio pioneer, inventor of the Audion, which has made modern radio and broadcasting possible.

In my opinion, the DeForest Phonofilm is going to be one of the most helpful business-getters that the motion picture theatre has ever had.

Probably by this time, exhibitors are pretty well informed on what the Phonofilm is, even though they have not yet had any experience with it.

It is ordinary standard film, but contains in addition to the picture an actual accompaniment either in words or music or song or whatever sound the picture calls for.

The synchronization is perfect, because both the picture and the sound are on the film. If the film breaks and needs to be patched, as every film does sooner or later, synchronization is not affected.

Only 2-32nds of an inch in width are used for the sound accompaniment, so it is easily seen that the picture is not much reduced in size. Yet this narrow strip of sound record is enough to produce a sound that will fill any theatre or auditorium.

The Phonofilm has its first try-out this spring under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld at the Rivoli in New York.

This new invention lends itself wonderfully to diversified entertainment in theatres. According to the plans now being worked out, service will be available nationally by the middle of next September. A weekly service will be rendered, probably one reel a week. On this reel there will be as many as three, four or even five numbers; dance numbers, song numbers, monologues, dialogues and here and there an ambitious ensemble. These various numbers will run from two to five minutes each.

The exhibitor will be able to take this reel, separate it into its various parts according to the number of acts on the reel, and sprinkle them through his program. Thus any theatre will be able to give what amounts to a vaudeville show for the price of film. The production cost will be determined, of course, by the value of artists employed, but the time necessary for production is so brief that the amount cannot run into many figures. To record for the Phonofilm takes hardly more than an hour in any instance. As an example, take any vaudeville act—Pat Rooney and Marian Bent for instance. They can taxi to the studio in New York, do their stuff, and be off again all within 30 minutes. Yet those 30 minutes will suffice to record both the picture and their songs on to the negative, from which prints can be struck in ordinary manner and distributed.

The newspapers in New York recently gave a great deal of attention to the fact that Florenz Ziegfeld intends to have the Ziegfeld Follies Phono filmed in their entirety. Much could be said about that, but this is a short subject number, and we must stick to short subjects.

The writer simply wants to leave this thought. The Phonofilms will prove to be one of the most helpful aids to all programs that has ever been devised. It will carry filmed vaudeville, filmed concert numbers, filmed opera into every theatre, carrying the sound as well as the picture. Moreover, it will be available to every theatre, no matter how small, because it has been designed to work wherever standard equipment is installed. Therefore, if a theatre has the Powers or Simplex projector, that theatre can use the Phonofilm. All that is necessary is an attachment, and the theatre, so I understand, will not have to buy this, but will lease it for a nominal sum.

THE PLEDGE OF CONFIDENCE
By Samuel V. Grand

In two things I have supreme confidence—one is, that I know the problems of the exhibitor; the other, that in Monty Banks, Sid Smith, and Joe Rock pictures, we have three of the greatest short subject offerings for exhibitors that could be secured.

Today the public is demanding comedy as a relief from the eternal heavy dramatic offerings. There are not enough short comedies of quality to supply this demand. Even the former comedy stars are reaching out for the future length film, and as consequence, the exhibitor is hard put to fill out his program with worth while material.

Knowing this, realizing the necessity of strengthening our own programs and feeling that the public will welcome the advent of these pictures, the contract has been entered into whereby the three comedy stars mentioned are each to make a series of twelve two reelers, directed by experts and produced as perfectly as possible.

Our directors include Alf Goulding, Harry Edwards, Hugh Fay, Archie Mayo, Gil Pratt, Grover Jones, and Herman Raymaker, and the casts will include Billie Rhodes, Duane Thompson, Jack Henderson, and many others.

I believe that exhibitors throughout the country know that Harry Asher and myself are familiar with their needs and have their interests at heart. Thus, a pledge of confidence on my part assumes a guarantee that exhibitor will be given the benefit of our experience and a square deal in every case.

Further announcements may be expected from time to time, of decidedly interesting nature. In our new studio in Hollywood, we have every facility for making fine pictures; a well equipped stage, one of the largest on the coast; a competent staff and all the essentials to modern production.

It is the habit of most exhibitors to put the comedy on at the start of the bill. Try the experiment of running one of these comedies last—and watch for the result. They leave a good taste in the mouth and send the folks away happy. In which event they are more than likely to come back the next night—ready for more laughs.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SHORT SUBJECT
By W. E. SHALLENBERGER
President of Arrow Film Corporation

Too much importance can not be placed upon the relation of the short subject to the box office. There can be no question of the fact that thousands of people attend motion picture theaters throughout the country solely for the purpose of seeing the short subjects, which give them an insight into the customs of foreign nations, supplied by the scenics and travel, a digest of the world’s news, supplied by the various weeklies, the world’s best humor, brought to them by the cleverest comedians in the comedies; and real drama of thrills, love and adventure, by the serials.

That the public insist upon the short subject is proved by the fact that no motion picture theatre, no matter where it is located, or to what class of patronage it caters, ever dreams of presenting a show without including the short subjects. No matter what the feature is, the short subject forms an integral part of the show.

This fact alone should show the important part that the short subject plays with every exchange, for there is a steady and consistent demand for short subjects which it is up to the exchange to supply.

I, personally, have checked up the records and receipts of a great many exchanges, and I know that if it were not for the short subjects which they handle, they could not possibly remain open and do business.

It would be very interesting if every independent exchange would check up their records on the business they have done on short reels. I am sure that they would find that they have never taken a loss on a short reel subject, that eventually these subjects have worked themselves out to a point where they have not only paid for themselves, but show a healthy profit on each one. In the meantime the volume of business and immediate bookings done in the short subject field go a long way toward defraying the operating expense of the exchange. An exhibitor may find difficulty in giving dates for big features and special productions, but he always has room for the short subject, with the result that he is keenly interested in this department and is on the lookout for pictures which will round out his program and give it the necessary balance to make the show complete. The short subject may be compared to the seasoning in a meal. A chef may cook the finest food, but if it is not seasoned it will be flat and tasteless. Just so with the exhibitor if he serves a feature to his audience without adequately seasoning it with short subjects. The bill will be flat and less enjoyable than it would otherwise be.

I would say to exhibitors: “Don’t forget what put you in business and what gave you the standing that was the start of your real success.” The motion picture industry was founded on short subjects, and it grew to its present powerful position on the short subject. As the industry progressed and advanced, the drama developed more fully and it became possible to prepare feature subjects of greater length, but the public, who had learned to like motion pictures through the one and two reel subjects, never lost their taste for them. And a good short subject today often turns what would be defeat into success for the exhibitor who may have a poor feature, but who pleases his audience with his shorter reel subjects.

I look forward to the short reel subject’s playing a much more important part in the motion picture industry in the future than it is at present, for exhibitors everywhere are beginning to realize just how important the shorter length pictures are to them, and are selecting their shorter features more carefully, and the producer, always alive to the requirements of the exchange and the exhibitors, is preparing better short subjects today than ever before in the history of the industry.

Probably the greatest difficulty of the comedy producer is to find directors who can make one reels funny. We have assembled a group for Stan Laurel and “Paul” Parrott who have been batting well over $300 in their league, and who have been developing a very consistent comedy product.
J. A. Kitty” Howe, George Jeske, and Ralph Cedar, have been hitting a consistent average in all their latest works, and we have outlined plans for them which should maintain their efforts at the highest efficiency.

Len Powers who has directed the distinctly novel ‘Dippy-Doo-Dad” series will continue his excellent work.

“Bigger and Better” is almost a standing joke slogan with the industry and outside of it, for that matter. You can hardly make one reeler bigger, but you can make them better. And that’s what we intend to do, if it is humanly possible.

Our single reeler is costing us much more today than two reelers in the past. We have endeavored, and will continue to do so, to set our comedy in surroundings that look as though money was spent on them. Many of our sets rival feature productions.

A good example is “The Uncovered Wagon,” a burlesque on “The Covered Wagon” which “Kitty” Howe has just finished with “Paul” Parrott starring. This is probably the costliest one reeler that ever was put in the market, but it looks it, and when we can get the results we are after the exhibitors of the United States can be assured that we are willing to spend any amount.

“The Uncovered Wagon” I believe will be one of the comedy sensations of the year, and is probably the best example I can cite of the type of production we hope to have ready for the Fall season.

We are always open to suggestion or criticism. If there is any exhibitor who has something to suggest or criticize regarding our product, we will be mighty happy to have him let us know about it.

If we can please the exhibitor we can please the public, for there is no one with a closer contact with the public than the man who exhibits motion pictures.

HANDLING KIDS
By BOB McGowan.

(Alternating Director Hal Roach’s “Our Gang” Comedies.)

Handling a collection of youngsters such as we have in these “Our Gang” comedies, one naturally has many experiences, some trying, many very humorous. The only thing to do is to take them all humorously.

The youngest of our troupe, little Farina, was hardly more than a year old when he came to us. This little pickaninny, incidentally, is developing into one of our best bets.

He is subject to frequent temperamental spells, however, and has to be petted and pampered when he gets that way.

I think he is responsible for my funniest experience in motion pictures. It is funny now, but was rather aggravating then.

We were making a comedy in which the colored tot had to take a whipped-cream laden cake in the face. Mickey Daniels was to throw it.

Everything was set, when I gave Mickey instructions to fire. He did, but the cake just glanced Farina’s face.

We had to have a retake.

Mickey fired a second time, but again missed what we were after.

With the second miss, Farina started walking off the set.

Suddenly he turned around, and waving his hand indicating he was disgusted, he yelled:

“That’s all, Gowan, that’s all.”

Off the set he walked.

For two days we coaxed him to go through the scene, but always he refused.

So we never got it.

HOW I BROKE INTO THE MOVIES
By Ben Turpin

“I want everybody to know that I was not a poor, bawd-foot, cock-eyed newsboy, as so many of my other millionaire friends of today were. I never sold papers. The only reason I ever had for the possession of a newspaper was to use it to wrap something in.

“I entered the picture business because I had to either work or go hungry, and when I was broke it happened that the old Essanay Film Co., Chicago, was the only place I could find that was in need of unskilled help. What I did is nobody’s business, but I made up my mind that I would be before the camera some day, and waited my chance.

“From a menial position around the studio, I was advanced to the prop room one day after I had showed some initiative. A director called to me to get some flowers for a table, but did not tell me where to get them, and I never thought of the prop room, but I did remember seeing fresh cut flowers decorating a grave in a cemetery behind the studio, and jumped the fence and got them. When I told the director where I had found the fresh flowers, he bawled me out but kept me on the job.

“My next opportunity came when they wanted somebody to make-up as a court jester for a scene. I was called for the part and with the Punch and Judy outfit and ball and bauble in my hand, approached the set. The star would have nothing to do with me, claiming that I made him sick to look at. So I was out again. So I left the Essanay Company and took my private car to the coast. When I crawled out from under it Mack Sennett was there with open arms, to greet me several months later, and I went to work with Sennett’s comedies and have been there ever since.

Belasco Stage Play Looks Like Box Office Bet Under Carewe's Direction

Edwin Carewe presents
"THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST"
Assoc. First Nat'l Pict.

DIRECTOR ....................... Edwin Carewe
AUTHOR .......................... David Belasco
SCENARIO BY ...................... Adelaide Heilbron
CAMERAMAN ........................ Sol Polito
AS A WHOLE ......... A splendid entertainment with genuine box office qualities to make it a popular with exhibitors STORY ........ From the well known Belasco stage play; out and out meller but serves for fine screen vehicle as such

DIRECTION ........ Very good; provides excellent production, first rate cast and handles story always to best advantage

PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Very fine

LIGHTINGS ........................ Excellent

PLAYERS ........ Sylvia Breamer, in title role, the best she has ever done; J. Warren Kerrigan well suited and does good work; Rosemary Theby also very good; Russell Simpson only other of importance

EXTERIORS .................... Always attractive

INTERIORS .......................... Good

DETAIL ............................. Satisfactory

CHARACTER OF STORY ........ Girl gambles for life of man she loves even after she learns he was notorious outlaw before her love reformed him

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ........... 6,800 feet

Several people who contributed to the success of this picturization of David Belasco's celebrated stage play are to be congratulated for the very pleasing entertainment which it offers. To Edwin Carewe goes the bulk of the credit for his splendid handling of the story and the rest to the cast, the scenario writer and the cameraman.

"The Girl of the Golden West," as a picture, offers exhibitors another box office number for it has all the requisites of one and its various elements that go toward making up its audience appeal are of no shabby order either. Belasco's theme is of an out and out melodramatic nature but since this seems to be a season of melodrama when films of this kind are meeting with the approval of the picture going public, nothing could be more appropriate, nor is this statement to be construed as meaning that "The Girl of the Golden West" is a wild west show of the shoot-'em-dead-in-every-scene order. Rather the story is melodramatic in its development, in the climaxes where the popular brand of suspense is used but for very definite reasons—it's what the public likes.

The story is really in two parts, with the first and second made up of similar situations though with the development handled in such a way as to threaten a tragic ending. Of course there is a good deal of more or less movie suspense, but it furnishes good action and the happy finish brought home right at the last minute always serves to send them out happy.

Carewe has supplied an excellent production besides manipulating the story to hold the interest all the way, even in spite of the anti-climax which, ordinarily, would tend to cause a break in it. The exteriors are very fine and the photography of a high order.

Sylvia Breamer does the best work of her career in the title role. Her performance is interesting and always convincing. J. Warren Kerrigan is well suited and capable as her outlaw lover and Rosemary Theby a fiery Nina. The whole cast is good.

Story: "The Girl" learns that her lover is none other than the outlaw, Ramerez, but her love saves his life when he is captured by the sheriff. Later Nina, a jealous dance hall girl, tells his hiding place and once more Ramerez is taken but his life spared by the sheriff, whose honor forces him to respect the bargain previously made with the girl. The lovers then marry.

Likely to Prove a Popular Favorite and Should Be Easy to Exploit

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The majority of exhibitors in the country cater to a class that wants pictures on the order of "The Girl of the Golden West." It contains sure-fire audience appeal and thereby ranks as a box office number. The picture should bring in very attractive returns and is worthy of the best exploitation you can give it. You can make plenty of promises and feel sure the picture will back you up.

The title alone is a big selling point. Nearly everyone is familiar with it and the fact that it represents one of the Belasco stage successes is another attraction. Tell them about J. Warren Kerrigan's comeback in this. (They haven't yet had the chance to see him in "The Covered Wagon"). Use Sylvia Breamer's name and that of Rosemary Theby. Secure a suitable musical program and use the song "The Girl of the Golden West." Tell them it is an Edwin Carewe production and recall his recent "Mighty Lak' a Rose" if you played it.
Dorothy Dalton in Appropriate Vehicle and Does Good Work

Dorothy Dalton in "FOG BOUND"
Paramount

DIRECTOR ...................... Irvin Willat
AUTHOR ........................ Jack Bechdolt SCENARIO BY .................. Paul Dickey
CAMERAMAN .................... Henry Cronjager
AS A WHOLE......... Murder melodrama with some good dramatic moments but for the most part rather familiar

STORY.......Will hold the attention fairly well and probably satisfy the average audience
DIRECTION.......Satisfactory; might have held a little more suspense for climax but otherwise all right

PHOTOGRAPHY .......................... Good
LIGHTINGS . . .Fog effect in night scenes attractive STAR.......Does very well in appropriate role SUPPORT.......David Powell first rate lead; Martha Mansfield attractive in a blond wig; Maurice Costello only other of prominence in cast

EXTERIORS .......................... Good
INTERIORS .......................... All right
DETAIL .............................. Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY.......After helping him to escape girl learns man killed her father but later guilty one is found

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.........5,692 feet

Dorothy Dalton's admirers will like this one. It presents the star in a role especially well suited to her personality and well within her ability to make it convincing. As Gail Brenon she is a rather serious but always interesting heroine with a faculty for having her audience agree with her except perhaps in the one instance where she learns that the man she helped to escape and whom she loves, is the murderer of her father. The objection to the development in this instance is that the girl, wholly unwomanlike, fails to inquire who it was that was murdered in the first place. Nor does the supposed murderer ask for whose murder he is held. The alleged guilty party should at least be anxious enough to know who he has been accused of killing, but David Powell is negligent and doesn't learn the identity of the dead man until the climax.

Of course this is all for the purpose of holding off the various points of the climax until the real murderer is accused and his guilt established. However, it is obvious that this incident does not ring true in the development and it would seem that it might have been gotten around in some more logical way and still maintained the suspense. As far as the audience is concerned there would have been a bigger surprise in the climax if Director Willat didn't give a hint as to the real murderer when the shooting actually occurred. Maurice Costello, a deputy sheriff, later proven to be the guilty one, is shown changing revolvers with the dead man immediately following the shooting. This might have been omitted and disclosed in the flashback with the remainder of the denouement as disclosed by a witness.

Otherwise Willat has done very well with the story and maintained the interest evenly throughout. Production is good and the photography first rate. The night fog scenes are very good. The cast is also well suited and capable.

Story: Gail Brenon's father is killed while raiding the casino for liquor. Brenon is shot by a deputy when he tries to prevent him for collecting from the proprietor for the tip-off. Roger Wainwright, a wealthy neighbor, and in love with Gail, is held. How Roger is cleared, the deputy found guilty and Gail happy in her marriage to Roger completes the story.

Star's Following Will Like It and Probably the Average Patron

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Fog Bound" will undoubtedly please the average audience and where Dorothy Dalton is a favorite you can make a little extra fuss about it telling them she plays the part of an orange grower's daughter who aids the man she loves to escape from the law when he is accused of murder and later learns it is her own father who was killed. You might hold the denouement from them and get them interested enough to come in and find it out for themselves.

The title displayed with stills in the lobby should attract attention. You can tell them the story contains rather good dramatic moments and mention David Powell as the star's leading man. Your customary methods of exploitation should be sufficient for this attraction unless you think the star is strong enough to do extra business.
Story Lacks Originality and Drags From Start to Finish

THE MAN NEXT DOOR
Vitagraph

DIRECTOR .................. Victor Schertzinger
AUTHOR ....................... Emerson Hough
SCENARIO BY ................. C. Graham Baker
CAMERAMAN .................. Steve Smith
AS A WHOLE ................. Commonplace material that suffers from poor continuity; will hardly satisfy STORY .................. Drags along interminably; trite in the first place but made even less interesting with over-footage DIRECTION .................. Could have speeded it up and in many ways improved upon continuity
PHOTOGRAPHY ................. Good
LIGHTINGS ................. All right
PLAYERS ................. A satisfactory cast but all very much handicapped by roles that don’t give them many opportunities; includes David Torrence, James Morrison, Alice Calhoun and Frank Sheridan
EXTERIORS .......... Suitable
INTERIORS .......... Suitable
DETAIL .......... Drags the picture
CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Social position and other barriers overcome in marriage of ranchman’s daughter to rich man’s son
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 6,937 feet

With such hackneyed material in the first place it would have been difficult to make a particularly attractive entertainment of “The Man Next Door,” but it could have been made a great deal more interesting than this. The continuity is the biggest handicap and drags the story along in a decidedly dull fashion, develops it without any effort to increase the interest and is so absurd in its final sequence that it becomes tiresome to watch the slow procedure of bringing about the usual reconciliation between the ranchman and the daughter who has married his enemy’s son.

Possibly Emerson Hough’s story made first rate reading but it could never be proven by the adaptation given it. Certainly the continuity lacks many things that it should contain and Victor Schertzinger hasn’t used good judgment in following it as closely as he apparently has. The development is slow, and drags along at such a monotonously lagging pace that it is impossible to feel any interest in the characters or what they have to do, which really consists of an overwhelming of standing around while nothing actually happens. This hum-drum atmosphere exists throughout and not even in what should be the climax has there been the slightest increase of interest.

And no doubt a good many will vote the situations in the latter reels fairly absurd. The idea of a girl yielding to her father’s demand that she cease her friendship with the hired man next door merely because the man’s employer is her father’s enemy doesn’t ring true, and the pussy-footing “Curly,” a friend of the father’s ranch days, is a most aggravating person who is given equally absurd things to do such as going out to kill the fellow when it is discovered the girl has gone away with him. This sequence is absolutely without common sense and so terribly dragged out that it is enough to send them out without waiting for the finish.

If “The Man Next Door” could be relieved of about two reels of unnecessary and tedious footage it might get by as a fair entertainment, but in its present draggy state it will hardly hold them. The cast is adequate and with capable players, all considerably handicapped by a poor story and none too careful direction.

Might Be Greatly Improved by Liberal Cutting—Can’t Please Like This

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It isn’t likely that you can satisfy them with this one unless you happen to cater to a crowd noted for its endurance or great patience. And they’ll have to be patient to wait for the ending of “The Man Next Door.” In the event that the picture is cut, you might look at it yourself and see if you think it will satisfy. It would be hard to recommend it as it is if your clientele is at all critical.

The fact that Emerson Hough, the author of this, is also the author of “The Covered Wagon,” now enjoying a long Broadway run, might easily serve to bring them in, but would probably be better to just announce the title and whatever other exploitation is customary. But don’t make promises or they will undoubtedly let you know that they are not fulfilled. Of the players you can mention Alice Calhoun and James Morrison.
Western That Gets So Wild It Furnishes Amusement

Jack Hoxie in “DON QUICKSHOT OF THE RIO GRANDE”
Universal

DIRECTOR .................. Geo. E. Marshall
AUTHOR .................... Stephen Chalmers
SCENARIO BY .............. George Hively
CAMERAMAN ................ Charles Kaufman

AS A WHOLE...... Excitement in action consisting almost entirely of chases; gets pretty wild toward the end.

STORY...... Old fashioned western hokum may please some but there’s not much to it.

DIRECTION...... Has supplied many good chases with some thrills; a little too strenuous on knock-outs.

PHOTOGRAPHY .................... Good
LIGHTINGS ........................ All right
STAR...... Is kept on the jump and is suited to this sort of material SUPPORT........ Usual western types and Elinor Field, the girl

INTERIORS ...................... Good long shots
DETAIL ........................ Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY...... Hero saves girl and rounds up hold-up gang with the girl’s love his reward.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION....... 4,894 feet

This type of entertainment may still be satisfying them and where they haven’t lost their taste for real western hokum and knock-'em-dead stuff, “Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande” will probably be right in order. But for the majority of present day picture patrons it is to be feared that Jack Hoxie’s mad chase through the five reels consumed will prove more amusing than thrilling. And the comedy isn’t intentional but accidental. It gets so wild toward the close that instead of getting exciting it becomes funny and the final ridiculous stunt is the position taken by Hoxie when he knocks each one of his pursuers on the head just like taking so many whacks at a golf ball.

There is other nonsensical business of this order that greatly detracts from the good action provided by the numerous chases early in the picture. The camera work in connection with these chases is very good. The cameraman has secured some fine panorama shots and it looks as though he had to take some risks to get a few of them.

The story is of the regulation order with the cowboy hero providing a series of knock-outs that starts right off with a prologue in which he dreams he is Don Quixote and puts his sword through every one that comes in his way. The plot is of a familiar variety and with no new twists. Besides the many chases the action offers a train hold-up and a rescue that furnishes a pretty fair thrill. Hero’s daring feats get well beyond probabilities in many instances with his breaking through the walls of a jail, through the roof of a barn and other bits that make the picture smack strongly of very old movie hokum.

Jack Hoxie endures the excitement very well and is kept on the jump. He rides well and takes some chances but his acting ability isn’t anything to boast of. Elinor Fair is the girl in the case and the customary western types make up the rest of the cast.

Story: “Pep” Pepper rescues Tulip Hellier from a train hold-up not knowing that the girl’s father staged it as a sort of exciting welcome home for her. This act leads to a mass of complications in which Pepper figures prominently and is pursued by a real band of outlaws headed by Black Mike. How Pepper once more saves the girl when she is kidnapped by Mike, turns the outlaw over to the sheriff and wins Tulip’s hand as a reward, completes the story.

May Do For Certain Audiences But Appeal Is Limited

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Probably if you cater to a majority of men and boys you can use this one to advantage. It is the sort of picture that your younger crowd will undoubtedly find thoroughly thrilling and for imaginative youngsters, there is a lot in “Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande” that will appeal. It all depends upon what pleases them best and what they can be satisfied with so probably you had better look at this yourself to judge correctly.

Let them know that Jack Hoxie is a cowboy star and in case they have seen him in serials they may be attracted by his name. Where they are not familiar with the star’s name you had better use catchlines and whatever other exploitation you think necessary to get them interested. You might let them know Elinor Fair is the star’s leading lady.
Familiar Brand of Movie Hokum But Good Audience Stuff Nevertheless

"GARRISON'S FINISH"
Allied Producers and Distributors

DIRECTOR ....................... Arthur Rosson
AUTHOR ........................ W. B. M. Ferguson
SCENARIO BY .................... Elmer Harris
CAMERAMAN ...................... Harold Rosson
AS A WHOLE...... Race track meller with conventional movie situations but has good amount of audience appeal.

STORY...... Of a fairly familiar brand although nicely handled and likely to please a good many.

DIRECTION...... Provides very good production and supplies some nice touches that get over very well

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. First rate
LIGHTINGS ...................... All right

PLAYERS...... Jack Pickford a likeable jockey-hero; Madge Bellamy a pleasing heroine; Clarence Burton good villain and others Chas. Stevenson, Ethel Grey Terry and Lydia Knott

EXTERIORS ..................... Good
INTERIORS ...................... Not many DETAIL ......................... Includes good atmosphere
CHARACTER OF STORY...... Jockey, doped by stable man, is disqualified but girl's love and effort clear his name and reinstate him

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION .......... 8,184 feet

There hasn't been so many race track stories lately that "Garrison's Finish" should suffer from competition and even though the story is of a conventional order with some fairly trite situations that consist of pretty outright movie hokum, it contains a certain amount of audience appeal that will undoubtedly make it a satisfying number. W. B. M. Ferguson's theme is comprised of more or less stock situations with the development including a variety of elements that usually go for an entertainment of this kind.

Of course all the troubles that hero encounters go to make up the action, thrills, suspense, romance and all the rest that the theme embraces. But in spite of all the unfortunate set-backs, and regardless of director Rosson's every effort to threaten an unhappy ending, hero's victory is always assured. It couldn't be otherwise and be good audience stuff.

The plot progresses at a good pace and even though the development is slightly anti-climactic the interest has been well sustained and the climax with the customary race gives it a rather thrilling finish. The camera work in this sequence is very good and views of the last derby supply the excitement with hero supposed to be riding the winner. This has been nicely handled, however, and the substitution hardly obvious. The picture is still too long and would be much the better for still further cutting bringing it down to at least seven reels.

Jack Pickford who hasn't appeared in a picture in over a year, appears to advantage as Garrison. Pickford is well suited and does good work. Madge Bellamy is a pleasing heroine who does wonderful things to bring about hero's re-instatement. Clarence Burton is the villain and a convincing one. Lydia Knott as Garrison's mother evidently didn't read the newspapers or she would have known what happened to her jockey son and would not have lost all her money by giving it to the villain who said her son wanted it. Of course there are other improbabilities that creep in but they don't matter a whole lot.

Story: Crimmins dopes Garrison, a jockey, and when the latter loses the race he is disqualified. Sue Desha, a spectator, is confident of Garrison's innocence. Later she gives him a chance to ride her father's horse Rogue but when his true identity is discovered, the father orders him off. How Sue tricks Crimmins and proves Garrison's innocence, is followed by his winning the race on Rogue, and his marriage to Sue.

Will Undoubtedly Please a "Fan" Crowd or the Average Crowd

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Garrison's Finish," while a conventional type of melodrama, has enough good instances of audience appeal to make it a suitable offering for the majority of exhibitors. Most of the audience at the Capitol seemed pleased with it in spite of some improbabilities and the more or less movie hokum which it contains. If you think your folks will like it you have enough to talk about and a trailer of the race should arouse their interest.

You should know pretty well whether or not it will appeal to them and in case you decide to show it, it might be well to talk about Jack Pickford's appearance and give it your usual exploitation. "Garrison's Finish" has already been distributed around the country although this is the first showing in New York which will account for its not having been reviewed earlier.
Another Bootleg Meller in "Little Red Schoolhouse"

"THE LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE"
Martin J. Heyl—Arrow—State Rights
DIRECTOR ....................... John G. Adolphi
AUTHOR ........................ Hal Reid
SCENARIO BY .................... James Hamilton
CAMERAMAN ..................... George Weber
AS A WHOLE......Fast action meller with rather too much incident and by-plot STORY ......From a play by Hal Reid. An old fashioned melodrama peppe up with timely trimings DIRECTION ......Seems to have had difficulty at times in keeping to central plot; otherwise all right
PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Average
LIGHTINGS ...................... All right
PLAYERS......A good cast on the whole. Includes Martha Mansfield, E. K. Lincoln, Edmund Breese, Sheldon Lewis, Harlan Knight and others
EXTERIORS ..................... Not many
INTERIORS ...................... All right
DETAIL ....................Somewhat too many subtitles CHARACTER OF STORY ......A tangle of bootleggers, revenue officers and a mystery murder which is given a new twist in its solution
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....5,760 feet
The chief appeal in Martin J. Heyl's production of Hal Reid's stage play lies in its rapid and at times hectic action. Because of this, and also because of the good line-up of names in the cast, patrons of neighborhood theaters will in all probability find "The Little Red Schoolhouse" satisfying entertainment.

Nevertheless, John G. Adolphi, the director, seems to have gotten tangled himself once or twice in the maze of sequences used in the construction of the story.
There is so much by-plot incidental to the chief theme that at times it tends to confuse.

Will Please Neighborhood Crowd or Where They Like Hectic Action
Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

For neighborhood houses and where they like quick action melodramas "The Little Red Schoolhouse" should prove a satisfactory offering. You can promise them plenty of action, scirmmages and excitement with the suspense held pretty well. However, where you know that your folks prefer a less hectic and diffferent type of picture you had better see this one first and then use your own judgment.

Exploitation on this one should be very easy. The title lends itself to all manner of stunts. Schoolbooks, slates, etc., printed on throwaways are attractive and there is a special cartoon by "Dwig" that Arrow has in mats and electrotypes that will awaken interest.
However, there isn't a great deal of kid stuff in the picture, so you had better let them know a little of the story.
Fine Production But Story Is Weak And Far From Convincing

Allen Holubar presents
"SLANDER THE WOMAN"
Asso. First Nat'l Pict.

DIRECTOR .................. Allen Holubar
AUTHOR .................... Jeffrey Deprend
SCENARIO BY .......... Violet Clark
CAMERAMAN ................ Byron Haskins

AS A WHOLE...... Plenty of fine locations and an excellent production but very poor story keeps it from furnishing entertainment.

STORY...... Slowly moving and never convincing; a pity to have wasted such fine efforts upon it.

DIRECTION ...... Has made obvious effort to cover up story's shortcomings with good production but it couldn't be done.

PHOTOGRAPHY ......... Excellent
LIGHTINGS ...... Very good

PLAYERS...... Good types and all very capable but difficult for them to make any definite impression with uninteresting material; Dorothy Phillips always pleasing; others Lewis Dayton, Robert Anderson, George Siegmann, Yvonne Seabury, Rosemary Theby, Cyril Chadwick.

EXTERIORS ...... Splendid; many beautiful shots of snow country.

INTERIORS .................. All right
DETAIL ........... Occasionally not effective

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Society girl, innocent witness in murder case, hides in the North but eventually marries judge who slandered her.

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 6,433 feet

It is to be regretted that Allen Holubar has wasted so much fine effort and no doubt considerable money in producing a picture with so unworthy a story as Jeffrey Deprend's "The White Frontier." It is without original situations and so farfetched in its substance that Holubar has not succeeded in making it convincing. The initial sequence in which the heroine is scandalized because she happened to be in the presence of a man when his wife shot him is the first offender in this way and is followed by others equally improbable.

From the standpoint of the story there is an atmosphere of artificiality throughout and never does the plight of the heroine impress as a reality nor does her difficulties cause much thought as far as the spectator is concerned. And all because of the improbabilities presented. In spite of the excellent production which Holubar has accorded it and regardless of a satisfactory cast that consists of players capable and well suited, "Slender the Woman" fails to offer a satisfying entertainment.

There are numerous beautiful backgrounds with several particularly fine shots of the north country. The photography is the best and all told, there can be little fault found with the picture as far as its being good to look at. It has plenty of genuine pictorial appeal but it fails to make up for what the story lacks.

Jeffrey Deprend or Violet Clark, who prepared the story for the screen, is to be credited with one good bit of judgment, however, and that is the omission of the over popular mounted police. Murderers and other law evaders of the story congregate at a certain spot and the theme unfolds without the slightest molestation from the mounted. Although the picture is only a trifle over six reels it is still too long, or probably seems so due to the rather slow development and absence of action.

Dorothy Phillips is pleasing as always but her talents might be used to better advantage as well as those of Cyril Chadwick, George Siegmann, and others in a first rate cast. Yvonne Seabury, as an Indian girl, has one fine acting moment which she handles very well.

Story: Yvonne Desmarais is the unwelcome recipient of M. Redoux's caresses. While she is remonstrating Redoux is killed by his wife and Yvonne becomes a prominent figure in the trial. In the North where she seeks to hide from the ensuing scandal she later falls in love with the judge who tried the case after he tells her the real "other woman" has been found.

Depends Largely Upon How Particular They Are

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Unless you figure that the splendid pictorial appeal in this will be sufficient to please them and make up for a rather poor story there isn't very much you can do with it. "Slender the Woman" offers an attractive title and probably suggests a picture very much different from what they will see. If you elect to show it use catchlines such as: "See Allen Holubar's latest production, 'Slender the Woman,' at the blank theater if you would know how gossip will slander an innocent person and ruin a good name."

Where Dorothy Phillips is a popular favorite use her name prominently in your announcements and use stills in the lobby. Be careful of promises except in connection with production values.
Short Stuff

"Golf"—E. W. Hammons—Educational
Type of production .......................... 1 reel sport-educational

This is a novelty in the shape of some excellent pointers on the game of golf given by the "champion of champions"—Gene Sarazen. It demonstrates in clear and easily grasped manner the way in which many different and difficult shots should be handled. The strokes are given first in regular speed and then analyzed by means of slow motion photography. The way in which clubs should be gripped, the clubs used in playing different shots, Sarazen's advice on how to play certain shots are all given. The reel will be of intense interest to golfers, and is not long enough to create weariness in those spectators who do not understand the game.

"Should William Tell"—Universal
Type of production .......................... 1 reel comedy

Although the antics of Nervy Ned and his valet, otherwise Neely Edwards and Burt Roach, are usually very entertaining, this one seems to fall slightly below the average they usually hit. There is some humorous business at the beginning when they park people's machines for fifteen cents, and rent the same machines out for three times that amount. However, the finish is not particularly mirth-provoking, although some audiences may like it. It shows Nervy Ned losing his nerve when he is forced to shoot an apple off his pal's head. The best he can do is shoot most of the boy's clothes off. Incidentally, Roach seems to get most of the laughs, although not the star of the picture.

"Australiia's Wild Nor'west"—Ascher Picture
Type of production .......................... 1 reel expedition

There have been so many really big and worth while exploration pictures of late that this meagre and unexciting one reeler fades into the background in comparison. The picture shows some of Australia's cannibal people with one long, and fairly nauseating close-up of a self-scarred native. The reel also includes some views of bears, an army of crabs on the sand and a few other miscellaneous scenes, none of which hold any surprises or particularly striking views. The offering suffers considerably by comparison with the recent expedition pictures.

"The Land of Tut-Ankh-Amen"—Fox Educational
Type of production .......................... 1 reel educational

In view of the current popularity of "King Tut" and the finding of the ancient Egyptian ruler's tomb and its great treasures, this latest Fox educational should prove a very appropriate choice for your program. The Fox cameramen have secured a variety of views of the adjoining country, with scenes of the well known ruins and finally presents shots of the uncovered tomb with others showing the workers employed by the Museum of Natural History. The recent publicity given the topic by newspapers should serve as good exploitation for this offering and it should be easy to get your folks interested. Tell them the reel contains actual pictures of the recently discovered tomb of the ancient Egyptian ruler.

Larry Semon in "Midnight Cabaret"—Vitagraph
Type of production .......................... 2 reel comedy

This latest Larry Semon comedy is on the order of what the comedian usually offers—a slap-stick of the slappiest kind with the anciently popular brick throwing, ink slinging brand of comedy. If they still like their laughs to originate in this style probably the rough-housing in "Midnight Cabaret" will be thoroughly comical but the average person, all those who have come to expect a more sensible comedy, so to speak, will hardly give this one very much. The number is really a throwing contest with the participants taking or receiving in typical slap-stick fashion, whatever happens to be coming their way, the hurling material comprised of anything from bombs to soup. "Midnight Cabaret" is a messy and musky comedy, if that's what they want.

"Mixed Trails"—Robert C. Bruce—Educational Type of production .......................... 1 reel wilderness tale

This is another innovation in a scenic short reel. The Bruce Wilderness Tales need no introduction to any audience. They know when one is advertised they are going to see exquisite scenery, beautifully photographed and well-titled. This one, however, is a little different. The scenery is there, all right. Not as wonderful as in some of the others but still good. But there isn't but one sub-title in the entire reel, and that's by way of explanation. Furthermore, there is a clever plot. And it's just as easily followed as if there were titles all through it. It deals with the way a fugitive in the western hills escapes a clever, but human sheriff.

"Fare Enough"—Century—Universal
Type of production .......................... 2 reel comedy

Jack Cooper is the star of this Century two-reeler, but Marjorie Marcel, a tiny girl and Jack Earl, a seven-foot boy, get a good many of the laughs. The opening shows Cooper, a promoter, arriving in a mailbag that jumps all over the station. The greater part of the footage deals with the efforts of the tall boy as conductor on the new and only street-car the town possesses, and the girl who runs a rival buss to get the few customers who desire to ride. There is quite some lively action here, and this part of the reel should get over in excellent shape. A bit of a thrill is furnished at the finish when the car gets beyond control and dashes madly along the tracks, finally breaking into a powder warehouse for the finish.

"Under Two Jags"—Hal Roach—Pathé
Type of production .......................... 1 reel comedy

Stan Laurel's latest comedy vehicle is a one reel burlesque of Ouida's story, "Under Two Flags." These exhibitors who have run Universal's picturization of the story will find their audiences appreciative of the burlesque, and even where they haven't seen it they probably know the story. Katherine Grant is seen as "Cheroo," the daughter of the regiment. Laurel tries very hard to preserve the stony expression made famous by Kcaton and succeeds in being really funny at times. The comedy has plenty of snappy action and gags and should prove a pleasing addition to many programs.

UR sales manager’s smile is getting broader every day. It first came when he looked at the job Syd Chaplin did on brother Charlie’s “Dough and Dynamite.” He continued smiling when he saw the next two of the New Edition Keystone Comedies, both re-edited by Syd Chaplin, “Caught in a Cabaret” and “His Trysting Places.” Then Ralph Wettstein, manager of the classy Ascher theatre, the Merrill, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, wrote in: “We had many compliments on the last one we played and the audience seemed to enjoy it very much.” Other nice things came from exhibitors tinned to come in by wire and mail and only a few days ago word came from Philadelphia that the New Editions had so impressed the Stanley-Mastbaum theatres that they had booked them for fourteen days on Market Street! Fourteen days on the hardest street in the world to get on is some agreement with our belief that they are the best short comedies being distributed today! DeMille Wins Suit

Supreme Court Justice Wagner, to hear the suit of the DeMille o. and Beatrice M. and Cecil B. De Mille against Pat J. Casey, the 1923 film company, for the Biograph Co., to rescind a contract made ten years ago licensing Casey to make motion pictures of 15 plays for the public platform road claim’s hand a decision granting the reliefs asked for. He cancels the contract, resists the Biograph Co. to transfer the copyrights upon three pictures which it has copyrighted and orders Biograph and the Progressive Amusement Co. to account to the plaintiff for a sum received after February, 1916, on the exploitation of five uncoprighted plays. He also directs the defendants to return all prints to the plaintiff.

The court finds that the defendants were ordered to make payments as agreed. He opinion states that Casey got the rights in 1913 and formed the Progressive Amusement Co. to make productions of them. These plays were then produced by Biograph with the exception of one of which a Bond was mounted. "Among the plays involved were "Beverly of Graustark," "Lord Chumley," "Reunion of the Mary," "Road of Yesterday," "Stampedes" and "Men and Women." The justice said that the claim which the plaintiff now make, as they are entitled to a finding of this suit, is that the company-defendant is required to account to the plaintiffs for the excess of these uncoprighted plays, is not the argument that the motion picture is taken therein has fallen into the public domain by reason of use thereof under the sense of the case involved an examination of the purpose of the arrangement; however, does not remain, in his opinion, this contention; it is not to show the intention of the provision of the license period, the motion picture rights revert to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs did not say that there was a dedication to the plaintiffs of the rights. The defendants do not say that the plaintiffs can claim a right to these plays. The court’s performance of an ordinary play has never been held to be a dedication. The performance of a picture may have no different result; said in the leasing of the latter or the furnishing of the film constitutes a dedication under the circumstances here shown.

The court found that no payments were made to the plaintiff after October, 1914 and that the defendant’s excuses therefor were not convincing.

Salsbury Injured

Henry W. Salsbury of Famous players, is nursing a bad leg, which he injured in a recent automobile accident.

How It’s Done

You’ve heard a lot of people say “road shows don’t pay.” And you’ve heard a lot of argument about the need of pulling the “road show” to boost a picture. Also of long runs in certain cities to provide exhibition values throughout that territory. Possibly this is good business.

But this is a story of how a big house, with a great show, and a 55 cent admission, has killed $2 pictures and road show devices, and all the rest of the bank in the second largest city in the country—Chicago. Balaban & Katz is the firm, and the house is “The Chicago.” Of course it’s a beautiful house, with all the necessary appointments to make it the finest place of its kind in the Middle West—and one of the finest in the country. But still the admission price is but 55 cents, and it cleans up a fortune every year. As an indication, “The Chicago” mopped up about $700,000 in profits last year.

In and out of season B & K spend a lot of money advertising. And not a word a picture, they talk about the Chicago and its bill, its entertainment. They devote columns of space to what they term “institutional advertising” building up prestige for the house, and good will. They come right out in the open and say no picture is worth $2 or $1.50. They talk about seeing the best of pictures for 55 cents, together with a great all around entertainment. And they have done it so well that they have killed off the $2 admissions to pictures in a very definite way.

If every exhibitor of a big house—or even a small one—would follow the line they have adopted, and spend money on “institutional advertising” they could, in a measure, duplicate the success of this enterprise firm. Don’t say “you can do it but it won’t help us.” Try it out and see what happens.

In the Courts

Gwen Sears has filed suit in the City Court against Milton Hirschfield for $1,250 for disposing of the screen rights to his 25 per cent interest in "The Unknown Purple." for $12,500. Roland West is also named as a defendant, but Mrs. Sears has stated that her agreement with him for disposing of his 75 per cent interest is satisfactory.

An answer has been filed in the Supreme Court by Harris Lumberland of Lumberland theatre, at Niagara Falls, in a suit of Commonwealth Film to recover a balance due on "Eyes of Youth." Lumberland alleges that Commonwealth did not keep its agreement with him, as to perpetuating the picture, and for that reason he showed to small audiences, and asks $1,000 damages.

Allegations that the firm rights to "The Fool" were sold by Selwyn & Co. for $100,000 are made in a suit filed in the Supreme Court by Alexander Cadot and Charles Hanna against Selwyn to recover $10,000 as 10% of the selling prices for services in bringing about the sale. The Selwyns have filed a denial of the allegations, and an affidavit by Edgar Selwyn declares that the plaintiffs never rendered any services of any kind. He also denies specifically that the play brought $100,000. "It is a trumped up claim utterly without foundation," he said.

Justice Diehlmann denied an application by the plaintiffs to prefer the case so that it can be tried at once.

"A Man of Action," will be at the Strand the week of June 3.

STUDIO STUFF

Mike Levee. The real diplomat among studio managers. Running the United. And making it pay. Don't know why it isn't called "First National Studio"—because so many First National units are at work there—but getting back to Mike. In the old days when he was general manager Mary Pickford was at work on one stage and on the other Jack Dempsey was working on a serial. The episode called for a fight and Jack had about 500 rough extras yelling at the fight. It upset Mary so she had to quit, and threatened to leave the studio. So it was up to Mike to patch it up. He did. He gave Mary a long talk. Told her how she was a champion and Jack was a champ, too, and he didn't know how to help one champ without offending the other. And Mary proved herself a good sport and went over to Jack's stage and sat in with the rough neck extras.

But this was only one of his troubles. Ask him about Connie Talmadge and then see what happens.

ANOTHER "JINX" GONE

Out in Milwaukee they have dismantled the Empress—long known as a "jinx" house. Built long ago by Sullivan and Considine, it has housed everything known in the way of entertainment; and everything that played there was a "flop." No show—no matter how good—could play there without "going into the red." Even Chaplin, playing there in person, before he went into pictures, was a "flop." So maybe it's good to see it come down.

SOCIAL ERROR

In the Astor Hunting Room, just a few days ago. M. L. Finklestein and Sam Katz of First National at a table. Cheerful and happily Charley Rogers saunters by and extends his hand to Katz. "How do you do, Mr. Skouras," says Charley.

Just a social error. Thought Katz was Spyros. Of Said Looey.

RIGHT AGAIN

Eddy Saunders. One of Loew's boys. Who makes Marx keep his hands off adjustments. Ardent golfer. Writes in, sending a card of Abe Abeles, New York branch, showing a score of 191. "It can't be done," writes Eddy. "It isn't true. No man can take that many swipes at a ball in one day and still live. More is it true that anybody save a professional can do 18 holes in less than 100."

TALKING OF GOLF

The Tournament

Everything set for the golf tournament today. Two hundred, film men—sailors and players—will spread themselves over the links at Belolle and, as the case may be, try for new records or make the day miserable for the near-champs.

Yesterday, Arthur Stebbins
wired from California:

"Will you please stop giving me the needles. How much would you like to be $500 miles away and read almost every day about the great golf tournament coming off. That's what I get for being a subscriber to your valuable paper. Please think of me June 5th."

REGARDS,

And from Bobby North, came this:

"Enclosed please find my check for $10 for the privilege of proving to the film trade at large how rotten a golf player I am, but inwardly hoping to do as well as I did at the last tournament, at which I honestly made money, as good box of golf balls that were worth $12. My entrance fee was $19—had a good day away from the office which I would not have had otherwise, had a very good dinner, and made $2 in the bargain, so that if I don't play any better this year than I did last, I still will be ahead."

Edgar Lewis stated yesterday that if the committee made it a two-day tournament instead of one lie would pay five times the entrance fee.

First National Managers in England to Meet—Robert Lieber Sailing in July

Bruce Johnson, manager of the First National foreign department, sailed today on the Bergania for Europe. He will remain in London until July 1, and from there will journey to Paris, Berlin and Stockholm.

In Stockholm city he will meet Robert Lieber, who will sail from New York on July 7. Lieber and Johnson will visit all the First National exchanges in Norway, Sweden and Denmark. The present schedule calls for a return to London on August 31, when the first week in August a convention will be staged, at which representatives of all British exchanges will be present.

George Fitzmaurice, who sailed recently for Rome, where he will film "The Eternal City," will be in London at the end of the convertion. Lieber and Johnson plan to return to New York about the middle of August.

First Session Thursday—Prizes to Be Donated as Banquet on Friday

Details of the program for the first International Congress on Motion Picture Arts are nearing final form.

The general program has been divided into six parts, with morning, lunch-even and afternoon sessions on Thursday, and morning and afternoon sessions on Friday, followed by a banquet in the evening. Friday afternoon will be devoted to an inspection of the Paramount studio in Long Island City.

First announcement of prizes for the best work done along a number of lines for the advancement of motion pictures will be made at the banquet.
These prizes have been donated by Adolph Zukor. Details will be broadcasted by radio.

What is considered the most important work of the congress will be the appointment of a committee on resolutions which will consider the variety of suggestions presented by men and women from all parts of the world and out of them try to formulate a series of recommendations that will aid in defining good motion pictures.

The congress is to be called to order by Ellis Parker Butler, president of The Authors' League, at 10:30 Thursday morning. The presiding officer will be Hon. Henry W. Taf-

Curtise. The speakers are to be James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, and Corra Harris.

At the luncheon session to follow, the presiding officer will be George Barr Baker and the speakers will be Arthur Brisbane, Mary Shipman Andrews and Ida Tarbell.

The question "What Are the Developed Possibilities of the Motion Picture?" will be discussed at the afternoon session which is to begin at 2:30 o'clock. This will be divided into four sections: "Literature Which Has Not Yet Reached The Screen," "Chayton Hamilton: Phases of Life Which Have Not Yet Reached The Screen," Frederic C. Howe: "General Training for Motion Picture Production," Dr. Rowland Rogers of Columbia University: "What Writers Can Do for The Screen." Allan Dwan.

At a general discussion to follow, Robert T. Kane, of Famous Players will answer questions regarding the technical side of picture making. Henry W. Tait will preside at the second morning session on Friday. The first subject to be discussed will be: "What Tendency Should Be Developed in Motion Picture Production?" and the speakers be Ralph Stephen S. Wise and Herbert Adams Gibbons.

Two European delegates, Julian Jacques Champeneac of France, and Captain William Bebington Maxwell, representing the British Society of Authors, will speak on: "The International Scope of Motion Pictures." "Writing Directly for the Screen" will be taken up by George Ade, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Jack Cunninham, who adapted "The Covered Wagon" to the screen; Elmer Rice, dramatist, and Mrs. Francis Patterson, instructor at Columbia in photo-

Four points of view will be brought to the discussion of the topic: "What Are the Tests for a Good Motion Picture?" James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay; Philip Troup, editor of the New Haven Union; Irvin Wheeler, exhibitor of pictures in small communities, and Robert E. Shewrood, critic, will be the speakers.

At the luncheon session of Friday, Irving S. Cobb will be the toastmaster and the speakers will be James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany; Fannie Hurst, novelist, and Peter J. Brady, chairman of the Education Committee of the New York State Federation of Labor. The afternoon reception at the Paramount studio will be at 3 o'clock. Otto H. Kahn will be toast-

INSIST UPON Duratized FILMS

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
New York Film Heads Pick Bayside for Today's "Location".
SUN—Martin Brown's comedy, "The Exciters," was such a thin slice of entertainment, as a play that was bound to succeed as a picture.

The picture, although it sticks quite closely to the original, gains a measure of appeal by sticking earnestly to the straight melodramatic side of the story.

TELEGRAM—A unique climax brings this interesting picture to an interesting close.

TIMES—"The Exciters," a frivolous picture that keeps the vivacious Bebe Daniels constantly busy.  Those looking for sports of comedy mingled with thrills will not be disappointed. This production is well photographed and the settings and exteriors please the eye.

WORLD—The first half of the film is dull and a little tawdry. The rest is excellent cinema melodrama. Though the situations in the crook-deeply and obviously manufactured according to rule, they have considerable kick. Combining with the spectacular flying boat wreck of an earlier reel, they add up to an effective entertainment.

"The Ragged Edge"—Goldwyn Capitol

AMERICAN—Miss Palmeri makes her first screen appearance in this film. She registers, in various and mechanical intervals, surprise, love, consternation and wilfulness. And Alfred Lunt, the pretext of these "transitions," accepts and returns them at your face value.

EVENING JOURNAL—Mimi Palmeri, a beauty of the Latin type, makes her debut in the picture. Her work gives promise of gaining for her an enviable professional career. "The Ragged Edge" is Mr. Lunt's second screen vehicle. His performance should encourage those who applauded him in "Backbone."

EVENING WORLD—* * * in the main is interesting. Lunt is vastly improved over his first attempting "Backbone," and Miss Palmeri is not at all hard to look at. The story is by Harold McGrath and was adapted for the screen by Forrest Helby and, take it all in all, is good screen entertainment.

MAIL—Whatever merits the novel may have, the picture moves pretty slowly. Not all the director's efforts to drag in a medium of oriental atmosphere—* * *—save it from being at times tedious.

The story, it seems, is a little too thin for a six or seven reel film—* * *

The film has the merit, however, of introducing the screen a newcomer who shows much promise. She is Miss Mimi Palmeri.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Mr. Lunt does some good work in this. * * * He is a wholesome and likable chap. * * * Mimi Palmeri does not seem to have any unusual ability as an actress, nor is she particularly beautiful of face, but she has a rhythmic grace and a remarkable amount of poise. * * * *

The picture is one of the best constructed we have seen in some time.

It is not an unusual story, but it is well told and has a certain amount of popular appeal. It could be cut to advantage, for once it gets a bit too much of it toward the end.

SUN—* * * is like his (Lunt) first release in that it starts out briskly and boldly and interestingly enough, and then slops over the ragged edge itself. * * * Miss Palmeri is very adept at being winsome and tender, but she needs to master the art of make-up more, particularly so that she can keep her upper lip out of the limelight.

TELEGRAM—* * * has all the elements that go to the making of a successful and popular film. An appealing love story of two comedy young persons, a plot of mystery and adventure in China and the South Seas, beautiful natural backgrounds—all of these are sure-fire ingredients.

TRIBUNE—Somebody did something terrible to "The Ragged Edge" in its transit from the written page to the screen. * * * there are no interesting scenes between the right people, though whether this is the fault of the scenario writer or the director we do not know.

Alfred Lunt is much thinner and far handsomer than he was in "Backbone," and whatever is wrong with "The Ragged Edge," it is not Mr. Lunt.

WORLD—A diverting and innocuous yarn of China and the South Seas. * * *

The play offers Alfred Lunt his second chance as a cinema leading man. In places his work is thoroughly satisfactory.
Wants Public's Angle
Max Graf Speaks Over Radio About the Star System and Asks Opinions From Theater Patrons
Max Graf of Graf Prod., spoke over the radio broadcasting station as Aeolian Hall on Monday night, and used that unique medium today in an attempt to secure from the public their reaction to a series of questions involving the star system.

He asked those interested to write to him. Among the questions, he asked were the following:

"Are you tired of seeing the same faces of the same star of the same star story and studio plots?"

"Are the producers making pictures to please you, or themselves?"

Where is the interest in the same stories and studio plots?"

"Do you believe that the future generation of stars is being given a fair chance?"

"Would you go to see a picture if you knew none of the players?"

Would you consider that perhaps their acting is as good, if not better than that of the people who have been dubbed stars, but who in most cases are merely mannikins, who are artists without the slightest thought, or feeling?"

"Perhaps I am wrong in my line of thought, for you may have given me an opportunity of speaking to the public. The exhibitors and distributors tell me that the public demands big names of stars and directors before going in to see a picture."

I visited no less than 1500 theaters, I think, to see the majority of the pictures I have seen. A limited number of stars were the only ones who made any money throughout the world. Are those the only ones you want? I believe they are wrong, but I want you to tell us what you think, and how to act along these lines.

Off for Rome Today
Samuel Goldwyn's company enroute to Rome for appearance in "The Eternal City," starts today. They will join George Fitzmaurice at Rome. In the party are Barbara La Marr and her husband, Jack Dougortex, Lionel Atwill and his fiance, Irene Fenwick, Bert Lytell, Montague Love and Arthur Miller, the cameramen. The party will be met at London, yesterday for Rome, after a conference with Sir Hall Caine. The first National London office was held to the director of the ship at the Ritz London, Saturday night. Richard Bennett, the other principal in the cast, sailed two weeks ago. They will be gone about two months.

Plan Foreign Offices
F. B. O. After Greater Business Aboard—Announces Titles of First 14 Releases
F. B. O. is seeking more business in the foreign market and for that purpose plans to open offices abroad. Edna Williams, foreign representative of the company, returned last week on the Berengaria from a month's trip through Europe.

As noted, an office has already been opened in London as R-C Pictures Corp. The company's contract with Sir William J. Garfield for English distribution was recently terminated and distribution there will now be arranged through the London branch. Other offices will be opened in Paris and Berlin to arrange sales in these territories and not to serve as exchanges. Branches in Mexico City and America will be opened in the fall.

C. until the fall when a successor to Swift will be appointed.

Metro Confab On
District and Sales Managers Here—Thirty-Two Pictures on Next Year's Schedule
The Metro sales convention opens this morning at the Hotel Astor with an address by W. E. Atkinson. Marcus Loew will preside and conference will be held by various departments, including Eddie Sanders, manager of the district department and I. E. D. Meador, and advertising head.

Fall plans will be gone over and announcement of titles of the 32 pictures which will be made next year will be made. Elaborate plans are under way for the exploitation of "Scarabomouch," which Rex Ingram is now directing. The Metro office has been notified that its production estimate at $1,000,000 and add that the picture will cost over $1,000,000, and perhaps more to make. The extras will range about $250,000 each, so that the entire production will cost about $5,000,000. It must be made before the end of this year. The Metro has an announcement this week. Toward Paul M. Moore will be lost at a shower dinner to be held at Milestone's, South Ferry, tomorrow. There will be further general talks and a dinner at the Astor in the evening. On Friday, the discussions will be continued, terminating with a dinner party in the evening, when the visitors will be the guests of Tiffany Prod.

Adolph Zukor, to be guest of honor at the luncheon to be given today at the Morris, is the head of the committee of the Authors' League. Among the guests will be Edward Balin, George A. Balin, former vice-president of the British Society of Authors, and R. L. Chappell, representing the National University of France, both of whom are in New York as delegates to the International Congress of Motion Picture Arts, which is to be held tomorrow and Friday.
Newspaper Opinions

"A Man of Action"—1st Nat'l Strand

Wednesday, June 6, 1923

DAILY NEWS—  the thing is amazingly badly put together. It also seems to recur a astounding lack of intelligence in the part of the audience. It asks us to believe in the name of comedy that a ten-year-old boy would swallow. Also it is filled with the sort of stunts of Mr. Griffith's "One Exciting Night.""""

EVENING WORLD—  it leaves one with the feeling that second guessing for a breath when "The End" is finally flashed on the screen.

Douglas MacLean is about as clean-cut, a young comedian as is now before moviegoers.

HERALD—If it is a farce, melodrama or comedy, the story is possible for the picture, but this performance does not justify the story.

SUN—Several pictures in which Douglas has been featured have been far enough. 'Others' have been similarly terrible. In the reviewer's opinion "A Man of Action" at least falls in the latter category.

The plot is one of those preprocessors, silly affairs in which the author makes all his characters unintentionally half-witted.

THE TIMES—There are many instances of action, it accomplishes a novelty by dispensing straight dramatic comedy with a broad dash of mystery.

MOUNT TELEGRAPH—As a comedy, it is not very mysterious, and as a comedy it is not especially funny.

Douglas MacLean's smile and ingratiating personality, does it not make possible for the picture, but his performance does not justify the story.

Reduce Entrance Fees

Entrance fees to the F. L. M. Club have been reduced to $250 until September, after which time they will be restored to $1,000.

Graphic Salesmen Meet

First Graphic Exchanges of Buffalo and New York are holding a sales meeting here. These two exchanges expect to handle 48 features, eight specials and several series of short reels next season.

At Broadway Theaters

Capitol

"Carriero Italiano" is played as the overture at the Capitol this week. Following numbers include "The Splendid Run," a scene, potpourri of operatic impressions by a number of soloists assisted by the whole Ballet corps and the orchestra; the regular new reel, and a dance characteristic. The feature attraction is "The Ragged Edge." A prelude in C Sharp Minor, on the organ, closes the performance.

Rialto

Rivoli

Strand

Musical numbers at the Strand include, the opening number, "Popular Melodies," "The Logo," a series of music numbers, a novelty staged as "A Little Ballet;" A Little Angel" and the closing selection of the program. The film numbers are "Here and There," a compilation of interesting short subjects, "Folks' News Keeps the Star's Action," the feature and "Roaring Lions on a Streetcar," a Fox comedy.

At Other Houses

Having already played three houses on Broadway, the Central, Rialto and Rivoli, "Energies of Woman" can be seen again at the Cameo where it has been booked for an indefinite run. "The Covered Wagon" is still in the Cameo as is "The Entrance of a Million," "The Exciters" and the "Heart Healer." "The Exciters" is a Pathe comedy, "The River Rose," continues at the Lyric until June 6th.

WANTED — THEATERS

Within 100 miles of New York,—500 seats or larger,—Spot cash for right propositions.—Write all details to "THEATER," c/o The Film Daily.

"The Heart Raider"—F. P. L. Rialto

AMERICAN—Of Agnes' acting, it must be conceded that there was a great deal. Nobody else in the cast had a chance to do anything for the picture occasionally and suddenly a bromide substitute.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Light fare, as you can realize, but rather pleasing and amusing. Agnes Ayres looks more beautiful, and seems to be living to even when her hair is wet—which is little short of an achievement.

SUN—However, let it be said that a beautiful woman does anything well, and that Agnes Ayres, as Mariel Colony, is very effective.

TELEGRAM—  a delightfully entertaining production. The picture, a light comedy of love and adventure, is ideal hot-weather entertainment.

TRIBUNE—  is one of those stories where Agnes Ayres' father has himself involved against being responsible for whatever damage she may do.

WORLD—  reveals a pretty talent in continuing "The Logo," a Pathe serial. The pictures are staged because, the piece has little mimesis and the theme is spun away a decidedly entertaining hour or two.

The Humorous Angle of Yesterday Tournament—Some Personal Observation

Alfred Black came down from N.E.
England and taught Abe Warner how to play bridge the night be fore the tournament, and then to see what a good shot he was he did it.

It was suggested by George B. Lewis and Hodkinson, that the special glasses be affectionately titled "A" and "Maxx" or Patsh and Pat-ter-met.

Glucksman was the first player to arrive. Abe Warner said he believed Jack slept in the caddie house to make sure of being on hand.

When George Brown, Universi-who almost won the divvies' tour-ship in the fall 1921, saw the lake, he said "Oh, my God, that is the first line

Congress Starts Today
Discuss Better Film Ideals at Waldorf Meeting—Dinner Tomorrow Night

Writers and educators from all parts of the country began to arrive in town yesterday afternoon for the opening of the International Congress on Motion Pictures, which opens today at the Waldorf Astoria. Among the European delegates, Capt. William Babington Maxwell of Scotland, and Jules Jacques Cham- boulé and Valentin Mandelstamm of Paris, are already here. The Congress is to last two days, and luncheon and after-luncheon sessions today, and morning luncheon sessions Friday. It is expected to be brought to a close with a banquet tomorrow night.

Many of the visitors, members of the college of the league, were present at the Martinique yesterday for a luncheon which the council gave in honor of Adolph Zukor, who has operated with the authors in an effort to formulate a set of recommendations for the artistic advancement of motion pictures and the development of better relations between authors, artists and educators and the producers. These recommendations are to formulate a continuing basis for future discussion, and to be taken up at another gathering of the same kind next year.

The Congress will be called to order this morning at 10.30 by Ellis R. Butler, president of the International Scope Motion Pictures, by Captain William B. Maxwell, representing the British Society of Authors, and Jules Jacques Champenois, representing the French writers. At the luncheon session Friday, the speakers will be Father John B. Creely, Arthur Brisbane and Mary Livingston Andrews. At the afternoon session, the general discussion will begin.

Connecticut Meets June 27
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
New Haven — The M. P. T. O. of Connecticut will hold their annual convention at Double Beach,Conn., on Wednesday, June 27. Double Beach is just outside of New Haven and the meeting will be in the form of a Field Day.

Bryant Sails Soon
Charles Bryant sails for the Continent on the Homeric, June 16, relative to future stage material for Nazimova. In London, he will discuss a picture to be made abroad as well, and while no mention is made of the subject, it is understood that it may be "Aphrodite," which Stoll Film has offered to produce with Nazimova in the leading role.

Ritz-Carlton's First
Expected to Be Made by John Brunton—Williams Leaves for the Coast

It is understood that the first picture to be released by Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc.—the J. D. Williams organization—will be "Mortgaged Wives," which will be produced by John Brunton.

T. Hayes Hunter has been engaged to direct it while Anthony Paul Kelly will handle the scenario. Production will be in New York and Florida. Following "Mortgaged Wives," it is expected Brunton will make additional pictures for Ritz-Carlton.

The above could not be confirmed at Williams' office yesterday. He refused to comment on the report prior to leaving for California. Incidentally, Williams postponed his Western trip to attend the Spring Golf Tournament at Belleclaire on Tuesday.

Brown Leaves Tiffany
Southard Brown, for four years chief assistant to M. H. Hoffman at Pioneer and later at Tiffany, has resigned. He leaves for the coast on Monday relative to a new deal.

The deflection of the Minnesota M. P. T. O. from the Cohen organization is the first break in the national exhibitors body since the convention. In view of the developments at the Chicago convention, the actual withdrawal comes as neither a shock nor a surprise. The official statement from the Minnesota M. P. T. O. held today (Thursday), it was unanimously voted to suspend the charter and sever our affiliation with the national organization. Please accept this as an official notice of our action. The charter is being returned to you by registered mail.

Golf Aftermath
"It was a great day."

This was the unanimous opinion of those golfers and golfers who had a "great day" at Belleclaire, Bayside, on Tuesday.

The Committee wishes to express its thanks for those who aided in making the tournament a success, and to assure the people who paid their money to enter that their contributions helped give a fine tournament. One of the committee accepted for the prize money by the organizers, the others for the games and golfers to who paid their money to enter that their contributions helped give a fine tournament. The committee hopes all of them will be in line for the Fall tournament to be held in September.

Foster Gilroy, Hodkinson, made a "birdie" on the 8th hole and that made his day complete.

Minnesota Out

In response to a statement relative to Minnesota’s action, Sydney C. Goldwyn has written a letter to the National Board forfilm, in which he said that this action was “perfectly plain to every thinking theater owner,” and then intimated that it was prompted by Theodore Hays, of Ruben and Finkelstein on behalf of the First National interests there. Cohen added that exhibitors in Minnesota have written asking if something couldn’t be done to safeguard their interests. He further said that the move “in reality occurred some time ago, as far as we had little or no co-operation from Minnesota during the past year.”

Golf Aftermath

While playing the 10th hole “Rube” Samuels dropped in the cup from way off the green on a matchie pitch and upset “Al” Gray of the Griffith organization completely.

Felix Feist had made a real record but he had not gone to pieces on the seventh hole, where he shot a 10. Otherwise he probably would have won a leg on THE FILM DAILY trophy. Hard luck.

The breaking of the cable, cutting off the lights on the lawn, broke up the distribution of the prizes just before all the “booby” and special prizes were distributed. This took a lot of fun away. More hard luck.

“Bill” Hurst was scheduled to take four men home in his car. He missed them and dropped asleep in his car to awake only at 5:15 Wednesday morning. Naturally, “Bill” was worried when he finally arrived home.

The prize “nifty” of the day. A player was purchasing some balls.

Give me three,” he said to the caddy master. “Make two of ‘em ‘swimmers.” He meant “footers.”

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Paris—The following is a description of a new film joining device, which has made its appearance there:

The ends of the film to be joined are mounted on two plates, one of which holds a tool for trimming the film, and returns to a horizontal position to bring the ends together. The plates are provided with hinged covers, clamps and pins for engaging with the perforations in the film. The sliding plate is mounted on a spindle which is rocked by an arm on the carriage through a cam, and a sliding rod. The carriage is moved along the rods by a handle-and carries a blade for trimming the end of the film on the plate, and a pad containing liquid for softening the fragments of film for joining. The carriage is then returned, and a knife and a rod on it slides and clamp the film on the plate. The carriage then returns to its horizontal position, bringing the ends of the film together.

Putting It Over

Here is how a broker exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Helps Town Clean-Up
Santa Fe, N. M.—”Grumpy” stayed on the front page a week when the Paris theater co-operated with the city in the annual Clean-Up Campaign. The theater offered prizes ranging from $5 to free tickets for the cleanest back-yard.

Shows Flappers Then And Now
Worcester, Mass.—A ballyhoo, which was a study in contrasts, was gotten out by M. A. Silver of the Strand and John McConville, for “Adam’s Rib” when it ran at the theater.

It showed a pre-historic flapper in her “daring room” which was a star attraction, and a modern flapper all dressed up, holding court in her own drawing room.

Church and Pastor Put This Over
Salt Lake City—For the showing of “Prodigal Daughters,” the Paramount-Empress arranged for a tie-up with the Immanuel Baptist Church. As a result, stock posters were displayed on the bulletin board of the church. The church printed dodgers advertising the picture and the exhibitor printed dodgers and ran slides advertising the church. The Rev. R. M. Brougher, the pastor, made “Prodigal Daughters” the subject of a sermon.

School Tie-Up Effective
J. K. Bimberg, of the West End, New York, put over the following in conjunction with the showing of “Down to the Sea in Ships.”

Through Principal E. Weinstein of P. S. No. 43, by special permission of the Board of Education, Bimberg held a special morning matinee for the children of the school. The teachers, pupils and parents took an active part in this showing, with the result that Bimberg had one of the biggest crowds in the history of the theater.

Used A Circus Parade
Indianapolis—Shortly before the showing of “Sons for Sale,” at the Ohio, the Sells-Floto circus staged a parade. The Star in making a local picture, “See Indianapolis First,” heavily advertised that its camera car would traverse the line of march of the circus parade and its cameraman shoot the crowd that lined the streets.

Goldwynner Eddie Carrier, with Harry Koch, of the Ohio obtained a flashy motor truck using two nine-foot soles on each side of the car with the following printed on them:

“Would you sell your soul to get tickets in the movies?”

The copy was in small type following giving theater, date of showing, etc.

Lenore J. Coffee will adapt a series of stories for Universal.

“Million Dollar Baby” Contest
Ironton, O.—How to rear an eight year old boy whose income is a million dollars a year was the problem put up to mothers when “Oliver Twist” played the Marlow theater. Nick McMahon staged the “Million Dollar Baby” contest and the Register published the answers totaling $2,514. A Jackie Coogan club was formed and one of Jackie’s suits was used as a window display.

Stunt For Stranger’s Banquet
Huntington, W. Va.—H. T. Snowden and C. E. Tipton, manager of the Orpheum, made use of the hotels in exploiting the showing of “The Stranger’s Banquet.”

Cards reading: “Are you a stranger here? If so, attend ‘The Stranger’s Banquet’ at the Orpheum, April 25th, 26th and 27th,” were printed and placed in every room of every hotel in the city. “Strangers’ Banquet” menu cards were placed on the tables of every cafe in the city. Paper napkins carrying an ad for the film were also used in the cafes. 1,000 announcement cards were mailed to a special list, accompanied by toast booklets.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Deny Peace Move

C. L. O'Reilly says Cohen's Appearance on T. O. C. C. No Political Importance

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the T. O. C. C., in a statement yesterday, denied that any relationship existed between the chamber and Sydney S. Cohen. The statement was prompted by reports of a peace move following the appearance of Cohen at Tuesday's meeting.

O'Reilly's broadside was aimed particularly at a statement issued by Cohen which said, in part:

"He especially commended the members of the Chamber of Commerce in that delegation for the zeal, earnestness and enthusiasm which were displayed at the Chicago meeting. He expressed himself as being much gratified over the reception accorded the theater owners of New York State by the theater owners from all over the country at an audience convention.

"He expressed the hope that whatever differences of opinion may have existed in the past, that all of these would be resolved in the light of necessity for compact organization in order that all opposing elements of the industry might be met and the interests of theater owners cared for in every possible manner."

To this, O'Reilly replied:

"I am surprised that the publicity department of the M. P. T. O. should attempt to use the appearance of Sydney S. Cohen at one of the regular meetings of the T. O. C. C. in order to make the New York organization again the topic of the national body under the leadership of Mr. Cohen."

"Neither Mr. Cohen's appearance nor anything he has done brought about any change in the Washington convention, as a member he was accorded the privilege of the floor and given a respectful hearing. There was no attempt made by any of the members to retaliate for the treatment received by the New York delegation at the memorable Washington convention."

The T. O. C. C. is a business organization with no quibbles or political illusions, and any attempts to divert its course from its well-defined policies is simply dust in the eyes of the industry."

Two Deals Closed

Inter-Globe Export yesterday announced the official consummation of two deals on behalf of Ideal Films, Ltd. of London. One involved the sale of "This Freedom" to Fox for the United States and Canada and the other, the sale of "Harbor Lights" featuring Tom Moore to Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for the United States.

Loew Buys Three

Two in New York and One in Omaha Added to Chain—To Rebuild Lexington O. H.

The Loew circuit has added three theaters to its chain: The Lexington Opera House at 571 Lexington Ave., New York; in a small one-piece building on 51st St., Brooklyn, and the Empress, Omaha. The Lexington Opera House has been purchased outright. It will be reopened in the fall with a straight picture policy after extensive renovations are made. The alterations planned for it mean that the house will be practically rebuilt. The Borough Park has been purchased, theater and property, and will continue as a straight picture house. The Empress has been leased for a period of years, and will have a picture program.

Won't Close N. Y. Studio

The Fox offices yesterday denied reports that the Eastern studio would be closed. Three pictures, "Six Cylinder Love," "No Mother to Guide Her" and "The Governor's Lady" are now in production there.

Michigan Withdraws

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroiter's. S. McLaren, president of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, has wired Sydney S. Cohen of the withdrawal of that organization from the M. P. T. O. of A. The telegram to Cohen follows:"

"A regular monthly meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, held at the Hotel Wolverine, on Wednesday, it was unanimously decided to withdraw from the national organization. The charter is being returned by registered mail."

McLaren also issued the following statement:

"Conviction on the part of the Michigan M. P. T. O., that the present national organization is working along lines conducive to the successful solution of the problems of the theater owners and believing that Michigan could not, therefore, give its whole hearted moral and financial support to the national body, Michigan has decided to withdraw therefrom."

"Michigan has for the past three years been allied with the national organization, but are we convinced by the utter failure of the national organization to function in a business-like manner, that constructive work is possible under the present plan of operation."

"Realizing the vital necessity for national organization, Michigan looks forward to the time when politics will cease to dominate to the exclusion of constructive work, and when an exhibitors' organization will get down to the work next to the heart of the exhibitor, at which time Michigan will support such an organization with the same zeal as in the past."

Michigan Withdraws

The Michigan deflection follows closely on that of the Minnesota M. P. T. O.

Sydney Cohen's office yesterday refused to comment on Michigan's action.

In THE FILM DAILY report of the proceedings of the Chicago convention prior to the re-election of Sydney Cohen, it was pointed out that the Michigan delegation would be represented by the state's secretary of state, who was returned to his office until after the convention, when they would withdraw from the organization.

Machine leaders and supporters of Cohen himself stated the need to bring the FILM DAILY to the effect that 'delegates walk out' maintaining that such was not the case in support of this caption. A similar action has been taken by Michigan and is referred to in this manner only for the purpose of keeping the record correct.

"We hope that the Congress will be productive of at least three things:

"First, we believe the discussions here will focus on the future of motion pictures, not only as the general public on the artistic and technical progress of the industry, but in terms of healthful methods of evolution. If they will join in a study of the methods of research and development that have been adopted from those who have devoted themselves to this phase, some good solution will be found.

"It may be that Mr. Dwan is right (I hope he is) that the best way to save to come from the authors—that is, the persons who actually do the real creative work. An alternative effort along lines suggested by Mr. Dwan or others would be a serious contribution to the problems of the imagination. Seemingly he would adopt newspaper methods to the moving picture. He concedes to the author the only creation of character, situation, and plot. He would be the director of the picture. The director cannot be reconvened, nor can the motion picture, and that their adoption by all film producers will bring the picture act to a point where it squares with the best American taste and ideals.

"Last—but it should be first—we hope to show the authors gathered in these meetings that the artistic future of motion pictures depends on a very large extent on their active cooperation. We must produce more pictures. The author has the creative mind, but in films he is only the box, merely words. The motion picture is not what words alone are, nor is the author merely the genius. The work of the author must so arrange his situations, his action and his dialogue that he can be photographed. I want to emphasize that the motion picture will be good only if it is technique controlled, and that, unless the author masters his technique, he cannot be able to do justice to the stories which are born in his mind.

"As I said, I hope this Congress will put us on the road to accomplishing these ends. I hope as a result of these discussions that the industry will be evolution some sort of machinery which will continue the work begun here today. The industry must develop a technique. That technique must create some permanent body that will make a constant and reliable tool. I am glad to see that the idea of motion picture producers, whether they be acting in a combined, or individual or other blocking or fostering the artistic development of the picture or interest. I am very hopeful that a body will be organized here, and that this Congress which is meeting here will continue as a permanent body, that its recommendations may be as effective as to enhance the community value and social usefulness of this new and wonderful art.

"Harding Sends Wishes

President Harding, in his message to the Congress, asserted that "the authors, though they have only a part of the responsibility, are postured to influence their art as a part of the direction of the best utilization of film possibilities. I hope," continued President Harding's message, "the confederation will be well attended and that its considerations may be such as to enhance the community value and social usefulness of this new and wonderful art."

Honorary Chairman Henry TafT pointed out that "in endeavoring to obtain a more artistic development of the moving picture, you are joining in the fight against the "stairs" that are seeking to combat widespread tendencies constantly manifesting themselves in the further development of the moving picture," continued Mr. Taff. "It has an influence for good and evil, far greater than that of the legitimate drama and opera, because, if you destroy an idea, its power exceeds that of the press. The possibility of its being directed into the wrong channel may result in disturbing the social order.

"It seemed to me that something was being proposed which is highly praiseworthy and I think we believe that a real modern activity, if our civilization, amazing as it is in achievement in the material world, is to save from intelectual and moral stagnation."

Taff Seen Necessary for Action

"And so the possibility of the screen makes the present movement a pressing necessi-

FROM A SMALL TOWN EXHIBITOR

A theatre that runs specials and passes up this one is missing something it shouldn't miss. This picture has more "stuff" than any of the other specials of the season. Forget the costume fear.

It packs enough story to make all the rest of this season's specials look like program pictures. It isn't a program picture that happens to draw well, as most of them are, but a picture into which has been put some real money, energy, brains and work.

It is not a "highbrow" picture alone, because of its intense action and absorbing story. It is not "lowbrow" alone, because it is the most elaborate picture Famous Players-Lasky ever put into a can. It's everything! It's a special that draws the second day and the third—and that's very rare these days. We saw tags on the cars parked in front of our theatre from eight different towns.

We've had a good many pictures that kept the cashier busy, but this one drew more American dollars than any other picture we have run since Way Down East.

Decision Stands

U. S. Supreme Court Won't Review Copyright Ruling Concerning "Mr. Barnes of New York" (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The U. S. Supreme Court has refused to review the case brought by Goldwyn against Howells Sales Company, Inc. et al., regarding the picture rights of the novel, "Mr. Barnes of New York." As the refusal of the court to grant the writ of certiorari asked for by Goldwyn was oral and no printed opinion was handed down, there was no intimation of the reasons which actuated the tribunal in arriving at this determination. The case involved the question of whether the importation of a production of an unauthorized foreign-made moving picture of an American copyright novel defeated the rights of an American producer who had purchased the moving picture rights from the copyright proprietor, if the infringement is produced before the legitimate owner of the film rights has been able to produce his film and copyrighted picture separately.

The petition for Goldwyn was filed with the court by William J. Hughes. It has not been announced whether any further efforts will be made to bring the case before the courts again.

Plan New Circuit

Erlanger and the Shuberts After Film Bookings—First in "Legit" Houses to be "Covered Wagon."

In a joint statement issued yesterday by A. L. Erlanger and Lee and J. J. Shubert, announcement was made of the formation of a new theater circuit, composed of legitimate houses.

Erlanger said he and the Shuberts had often been approached to set aside a number of legitimate theaters and book a continuous route for unusual productions, but this request was held up, added, because there was no assurance that enough "seats could be secured."

A theater in every important city in the United States and Canada will be devoted to these contemplated productions in "The Covered Wagon" which is now being booked through the Erlanger and Shubert exchanges for the entire 1923-1924 season. While the picture was shown in the Loew's circuit only in a definite way, it is intimated that others will be "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Ben Hur," "The Ten Commandments."

In speaking of the kind of pictures the circuit will handle, the following appears toward the close of Erlanger's statement:

"I am also informed that D. W. Griffith, the pioneer in the presentation of great picture successes in the world, is now making plans for the most ambitious picture he has ever given the public."

Metro Entertains Sales Force

Metro entertained its visiting sales force royally last night. Festivities started with an informal dinner at the Palais Royal which was taken over for the entire evening. Then came a theater party at the Astor Theater to see "New Drop Inn", and after that general frivolity at the Palais Royal with Mae Murray one of the principal entertainers.

A goodly many of next year's titles were announced yesterday. The details will appear in Monday's issue.

Will Produce Again

L. Auerbach, of Export & Import, announces that a series of 12 two-reel wild animal films would be produced in conjunction with C. W. Selig. "A Jungle Heroine," the first, will be started immediately. Mitchell Lewis, Hedda Nova and Pat O'Malley will appear in the cast, with Bertram Bracken directing.

A $10,000 Prize

Offered by Adolph Zukor Yearly for Best Story Reaching Screen—Dinner Ends Art Congress

Adolph Zukor will pay $10,000 in the form of a perpetual gold medal to the author of the story which shall be adjudged the best story produced in motion pictures during the current year. The medals will be exhibited publicly in a motion picture theater during each year beginning Sept. 1. The medals will be considered as belonging to the author, and the author shall be considered as applying to the film or films of his production which he may name in the main title of his story of the positive print of the motion picture.

The first of these prizes shall be awarded for the best story exhibited upon the screen during the year beginning Sept. 1, 1923 and if it is convenient, I think it would be better that the prize be given later rather than the Christmas tree is immediately following the expiration of the prize year.

In offering this prize there is no restriction on how the award shall be made by the Authors' League. But sufficient to your full approval I suggest that the League appoint a jury which will consider among the members the president of the Authors' League, a newspaper editor, a novelist, a dramatist, and a producer actively engaged in the production of motion pictures.

One of the most outstanding and constructive results of the Congress was the adoption of the Author's Supervisory Board, the purpose of which will be to make a survey of the art and development of pictures and to cooperate and encourage outstanding producers and writers in carrying forward the suggestions made at the Congress. The Board will encourage schools, colleges and universities to establish and maintain motion picture composition and production courses, write the books necessary to bring the author and picture producer together and will acquire the complete public to time from time with the purpose of being able to carry forward carrying out the principles and recommendations that were evolved during the Congress.

"Debura" Not on Next Year's List—Three with Wesley Barry on Schedule

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Werner Bros, have released their complete production schedule for next year to the press.

There will be 18 pictures, as noted, and of that number, three will star Wesley Barry. "Debura," contrary to expectations, is not on the list.

Harry M. Warner has been here for some weeks watching production. He is expected to remain here for some time since several important pictures on the new schedule are to be started shortly, including "The Gold Diggers" and "Tiger Rose."

The complete line-up follows:

A picture featuring Wesley Barry, to be directed by William Beaudine from the story by Julian Josephson, tentatively called "The Printer's Devil."

"Broadway After Dark," by Owen Davis, star Marie Prevost with Monte Blue and Irene Rich.

"How to Educate a Wife," by Elinor Glyn.

Wants "Birth" Banned in Kansas

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Kansas City—R. G. Leggett, president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, has protested to Governor Davis against the action of the State Census Board in permitting "The Birth of a Nation" to be shown in Kansas, on the ground its showing would incite to racial differences. The picture was first banned by Governor Cooper and later by Governor Allen.

Educa! Shows Its Ideal Program

Educational gave a special showing of what it considers an ideal short reel program at Warner Theater yesterday. The program was composed of the following numbers: overture selections from "The Gingham Girl," Kinoscopes, "From the Windows of My House," a Bruce Wilder Chorus, "Speed Demons," one of the Lyman Howe Hodge-Podge series; "Roll Along," a Christie comedy with Jimmie Adams, "Why I Plaid," a Gene Sarazen and "Backfire," a Mermaid comedy with Lige Conley.
The delegates told us about attempting to sell a story written for the screen as against novels and published stories.

Goldwyn Answers King
Samuel Goldwyn yesterday proounced a long letter to the Honorable Weston Taft, answering the charge made on Thursday by Basil King. Goldwyn declared he had gained King to go to London in the hope of persuading the "Earthbound" picture to cost $300,000. King did not earn a cent in profit to date; King said, and in the absence of subtles and later Goldwyn wrote King a letter praising the picture; it had been made without limitations as far as Goldwyn added, for King to say he had made no money out of his film enterprises. Goldwyn also praised Adolph Zukor, for calling the Congress.

UNIVERSAL PICTURES
A STATEMENT—

TO THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR:

Owing to the wide-spread publicity which attended the recent signing of the contract between Truart Film Corporation and myself for the production of feature-length comedies, and the various reports in the daily press of the country concerning this contract, I desire to announce, on behalf of Truart Film Corporation, The Vitagraph Company of America and myself, that under my present existing contract with The Vitagraph Company, there remain two two-reel comedies to be produced of the standard that I have made heretofore for that company.

If earnest effort and the sincere desire to give you worthwhile attractions count for aught, then, I honestly believe that the two comedies still to be produced under my present contract will be superior to any I have ever made before.

The full details regarding my future plans of production will be announced by Truart Film Corporation immediately upon the completion of my Vitagraph contract.

International Congress on Motion Picture Arts at Waldorf Brings ducers. Yearly Meeting Probable to Discuss Means of Imp Delivers Illuminating Address on Untouched Subjects

At the dinner Friday night which marked the terminal of a two-day session of the International Congress on Motion Picture Arts, Adolph Zukor who, together with the Authors' League of America, Inc., was instrumental in arranging this important gathering, announced in a letter to Ellis Parker Butler, president of the League, that he stands ready to offer a $10,000 annual prize in cash to the author of what shall be considered the best story to be produced in motion pictures and publicly exhibited in a picture theater.

A number of prominent literary people attended the sessions. One of the most interesting addresses was made by Clayton Hamilton, formerly of the Goldwyn editorial department. Excerpts from his address will be found below, as well as part of other addresses:

"We cannot go on forever merely adapting plays and novels and short stories to the screen. Obviously what we need to do is to develop a new habit of authorship. A habit of authorship directly for the screen so that the original creator of the story shall from the outset plan his narrative in terms of the screen rather than in terms of the stage or of the novel or of the short story.

"In order to do this we must hold out inducements to creative authors to do their work directly for the screen. Although much has been said about encouraging original authorship for the screen, I do not think these inducements thus far have been practically held out, and to state the problem very completely in the presence of Mr. Zukor, who can answer one or two questions if he should choose to do so, I may put it in this way:

"Suppose that any one of us who is an author—let me use the pronoun 'I' for the sake of convenience; suppose that I imagine a story and write it as a play. Suppose that the play is produced in New York and runs a year on Broadway. Suppose it is a very successful play. I think it very likely that Mr. Zukor's company, or some other of the big companies will offer me possibly $50,000 for the motion picture rights of that very successful play.

"Or suppose that I am a novelist; that I imagine my story in terms of the novel and write it as a novel, and suppose that this novel becomes one of the six best sellers of the year.
It is hardly possible that Mr. Zukor's company or some other of the great companies will then offer me let us say $25,000 for the motion picture rights of that story.

"Or suppose that I am a short story writer and that I conceive my narrative in the terms of a short story and write it and publish it in the Saturday Evening Post, and suppose it attracts a considerable amount of attention. It is hardly likely that Mr. Zukor's company or some other big company will then offer me possibly $10,000 for the motion picture rights of that short story.

"But suppose that from the very outset having a new story, not being acquainted with the technique of the screen, let us say I write that from the very beginning in terms of the screen, write it as an original story for the screen, write it as a scenario for the screen; do not print it in the Saturday Evening Post as a short story; do not produce it as a novel, do not produce it as a play; and then take it to Mr. Zukor's company or some other of the big companies, and under present conditions, I should think I would be very lucky if they offered me more than $1,000 for the story. What then is the practical inducement for the gifted author to write a story directly for the screen?

"It seems rather astonishing with the entire literature of the world to draw upon it would be so difficult to find adequate material to be adapted to motion picture uses in this period, and we are still in the age of adaptation. I think that perhaps we look for material in the wrong places. We look for material on the newstand instead of in the library.

"I think it would be perhaps a little better if we delved more into the past. If we are going to adapt plays and novels and short stories, why not adapt great ones? I ought not to say this at a meeting of the Authors' League of America, of which I am a member, because the tendency of what I am about to say might seem to be to harm our market—of course what each of us writes is great literature, and I do not want to say that it should not be bought and produced for screen purposes—but after all there is a certain amount of literature in the world that we do know about and have known about for a good many centuries, that we know is good stuff because it always has been, and I am surprised that so little of this is brought to the screen."

Jack Cunningham, who adapted "The Covered Wagon," on "Writing Direct for the Screen":

"There are three sections of this argument. The first is this:

"For centuries audiences have been going to the theater.
All during those centuries they have been trained to expect degree of artificiality the moment the theater portals have been passed. They realize that the back drop is a back drop and not a garden. They know the houses are but shells. They will, therefore, in my opinion, be jaded by some artificiality in characterization and action.

"Not so the picture audience.

"There (in the picture theater) is demanded such realism as has never been practiced before—either with pen or spoken line. Picture audiences know that when a man rides out in front of a mountain, the man is on a real horse in front of an actual mountain and they demand that what he thinks and does be real. We can have no fine flowing phrases nor the influence of sporadic paragraphs with which to lull the analytical faculties. So we face what another story tellers have ever faced and we have to meet it the best we can. Sometimes we do it badly, sometimes not so badly. But we have to try, nevertheless.

"Second section:

"Suppose that, as an author, you were faced with the fact that, while the printers were setting up your story, the publisher had to pay the hero $450 a week, the heroine $1,000 a week, the character man $500 a week and so on; that when you described a ball room, it cost the publisher $5,000; that while the printers were setting up the description of a ball held in that room, it cost ten dollars a day for every person shown; that when you took your heroine and her family to Havana, it cost something like $57,000 and some dollars out of the pocket of the publisher, etc., etc.—is it not logical to presume that you, as an author would have to know something about the business processes and technical difficulties of publishing books?
"I could continue indefinitely with the eleven thousand and one things the man who presumes to write direct for the screen ought to know, but the above will give some vague idea."

"Third section:

"If the story which has been scheduled for production is a story that ought to have been selected for screen translation, there is no valid reason why it should be changed during that translation, that is, as to essentials of plot, characterization or flavor.

"There are about four reasons why stories are changed:

(a) Because insufficient time is given for preparation of the story in screen form; (b) because some writers and directors are too lazy mentally to take the trouble to retain the original; (c) because actors cannot be had that adequately portray particular characters on which stories often rest, and (d), as remarked above, because the story should never have been considered for screen presentation in the first place.

"The hardest thing in writing for pictures is to retain the original story. It is easier to slip into some formula for which there is a known (or at least thought to be known) public demand. I have been just as guilty as others, but I do know that whenever I have been able to stick to the original story, the result has been a more successful picture than when for one or another of the above reasons, it has not been possible to do so."

George Ade said, in part:

"I suggest that authors writing for the screen should prepare their own continuities. They must assume the drudgery incidental to putting down all the text and all the scenes in their proper sequence if they expect the director to get into the story all the essentials of the narrative. If the author submits merely a skeleton scenario or brief synopsis, he can hardly expect the continuity man at the studio and the producing director to be sufficiently expert, as mind-readers, to get every one of the details which help to give color and variety and completeness to the finished product.

"The average writer, when he learns that he has a story which is coveted by a picture corporation, suspects that the discreet thing for him to do is to grab a flat price for his property and run with the money. He is scared stiff at the suggestion that he may wish to adapt his story to the forms of a photoplay. He feels that he is suddenly called upon to work at a trade he never has learned.

"But, if he has been watching picture plays and giving them just a little study and asking himself why they have such a tremendous appeal to the public, there is no reason why he cannot readily get into the swing of writing in the so-called 'continuity' form. By doing so, he can protect his story from changes which he does not approve and he can put into it the ingredients which belong to him, because he invented the story, and which no one else can write to his satisfaction.

"Furthermore, he should not feel too strongly that he is compelled to 'write down' to a feeble-minded public. It is a hopeful sign that even hightowers now like many of the successful picture-plays.

"The author need not be alarmed because he lacks familiarity with the 'technique' and terms employed by the experienced script writers. He need not be up on all the tricks of photography. He should be familiar with the screen method of getting over a story, as distinguished from the methods employed by the short story writer, the novel, and the playwright who is bounded by the narrow limits of the proscenium arch. He should be ready and eager to take advantage of the glorious liberties granted the author in the picture play and revel in the privilege of carrying along several threads of a story concurrently.

"He should, in the script submitted to the production company, not only describe the scenes as they come along in the logical order of building up a cumulative interest, but he should insert all the text needed to illuminate and explain the scenes. Certainly the director, who knows in advance just what subtitles are going to back up the scenes and what fables are going to be flashed in connection with any episode, can arrange every 'shot' in the full confidence that he is aiming in the right direction.

"The director does not wish to be hampered by a great number of instructions which have no real bearing on the significance of the scene with which he is struggling. He wants to know pretty well what the actors are thinking and saying at that particular spot in the road, and he will take care of those mechanical details which could not be anticipated by the author.

"When I say that an author should prepare his own continuity, I am not saying he can, at the first attempt, turn in a script ready to be turned over to the director or which would include any very definite instructions to the cameramen. There are studio secrets and there are mysteries and marvels of photography and lighting and grouping and perspective which humble and terrify the greenhorn who is trying to order certain effects. He must not attempt to tell the director or the cameramen how to do their work.

"If the screen is ever to produce works of art, a new type of artist will have to appear. He will not be a novelist or playwright trying to apply the technique of his own craft to the screen. He will be primarily and essentially a writer for the screen, a close student of its technique and a keen analyst of its possibilities and limitations. He will dominate every phase of the production. He will originate the idea and write his own scenario which will be as complete and inalterable as the prompt copy of a play.

"Over this scenario he will have the same control that a playwright has over his manuscript. He will write the titles and supervise the cutting of the picture. He will either direct the picture himself or else he will completely and authoritatively supervise the direction. Besides all this, it is scarcely necessary to add, he must be a genius. Until this type of artist is developed, it is nonsense to expect the screen to give us works of art.""

W. B. Maxwell, representing the British Society of Authors, said:

"I would like to say at once merely to clear the air that it is my very firm opinion, I dare say an opinion shared and admitted by others, the motion picture as an interpretative or an illustrative art, and not a creative art. The less you invent, the more you illustrate, the better that art flourish. You will understand, ladies and gentlemen, that there can be no value to any opinions that I offer you, except from the literary point of view. I address you as a literary man, as a representative of literary men, and as nothing else, but of course, as you know, we writers are supposed to be thoughtful, reflective people; we are supposed to know something about psychology and a great deal about the motion pictures."

Mae Marsh Triumphant, But Old Story and Excessive Detail Burden Griffith's Latest

D. W. Griffith presents
"THE WHITE ROSE"

D. W. Griffith, Inc.—United Artists

DIRECTOR ........................................ D. W. Griffith
AUTHOR ........................................ Capt. Staunton
SCENARIO BY ............................. Irene Sinclair
CAMERAMEN ….. W. J. Bitzer, Henriik Sartov, and H. Sintzinhich
AS A WHOLE ….. Of the highest rank in pictorial appeal but otherwise slowly dray, with insufficient pot for footage consumed and far too much detail

STORY ….. Old—retribution of man towards girl he has wronged, with final renunciation of his career DIRECTION ….. Masterful; contains an abundance of skilful detail and displays his usual artistic enterprise throughout; presents a really human document

PHOTOGRAPHY ….. Excellent
LIGHTS ….. Handsome
PLAYERS ….. Mae Marsh makes a triumphant return in role with fine possibilities which she uses to the utmost; for Novello handsome and Carol Dempster pleasing but a trifle cold; an excellent cast on the whole including Lucille La Verne and Porter Strong in dainty comedy roles; Neil Hamilton, Charles Mack and others

EXTERIORS ….. Louisiana bayou country shots beautiful

INTERIORS ….. Appropriate

DIRECTIONS ….. Splendid but very "splendid" much of it

CHARACTER OF STORY ….. Minister who suffers continual remorse for an indiscretion, finds the girl and her baby, marries her and renounces his vows

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ….. To be distributed in about 8,500 feet

The foremost producer of motion pictures in America is David W. Griffith. Rightly he has been termed "the Master" because in his own way, over a period of many years, he has built for himself a place in the hearts of the American people which no one has been able to supplant. But that very richness of experience, that very touch of mastery places DW in the position where his great public expects from him a master's touch in and with everything he does. They were disappointed in "One Exciting Night", and in many instances told him so by failing to support the box office. And it is a very grave question whether they will not be in "The White Rose", his latest production.

All of the many tricks of Griffith producing qualities are there—tact and location, gentle touches, comedy, an excellent cast, superb photography, but—and it is a tremendous "but"—the story is old, wellworn, threadbare in spots and insufficient in strength for an eight or nine reeler, regardless of the vast amount of detail that, interesting to tunes, usually tires and fails to hold interest to the end. And this makes for a disappointment because otherwise it is so superb.

So, despite all the rest of it, the question arises whether the story will hold you audience—and remember, the show is so long that you will have no opportunity to build the program up with anything else. You will have to depend upon the feature to hold them, for it will run an hour and forty or forty-five minutes when it reaches you. If you run it on an 85 schedule—as it should be run. If you rush it through the machines then you will be worse off, because the tempo of the production will have been entirely spoiled. As shown in New York it is about 10,000 feet, but it will be cut before release to 8,500.

It should be cut considerably more and much of the detail, interesting and at times beautiful, out, thus speeding it up, might make for much better entertainment.

This, however, is certain: regardless of whether "The White Rose" succeeds or not, Mae Marsh gives a performance compelling in its sincerity, so appealing and beautiful that it places her where she belongs—in the forefront of those stars who think they can handle this sort of a role. Of course the masterful hand of DW is seen in the many bits; the poignant expressions, the facial contortions which Mae registers. He is a great director, never discount that, because he gets more out of his people than anyone else ever does. But admitting DW's skill and knowledge Mae Marsh as "Teazie" will stand out as a performance long after all others in the production are forgotten. She has made a character that will serve as a standard for a long time.

The keynote of the theme is essentially one of pathos, and it grows as it were from seed to flower as the story progresses with the development of the heroine's character in the course of its growth. Too much cannot be said in favor of the manner in which Mr. Griffith has handled the character played by Miss Marsh. From the moment she appears fresh from an encounter with her husband's "other woman" it may be said that Miss Marsh, through the period of trial in which companionship brands her and the resultant misfortune and degradation carries her down, the director has struck the human note, building toward a grand climax with a force that is compelling—smashing in its dramatic quality.

There are times when Griffith might have adhered more closely to the theme such as in the prolonged agony of the conscious stricken minister-hero. Incidentally Novello's character is not as carefully developed as that of Mae Marsh. This is not to say that Novello is insincere, but his ability to act is considerably overshadowed by his handsomeness, which Griffith hasn't failed to exploit in numerous close ups.

Story: Bessie Williams, otherwise known as "Teazie", is led to believe that it is good business to flirt and dress up like a Christmas tree. Teazie adapts herself readily, and generously gaining a reputation, although she really is "good." Joseph Beauchamp, theological student, chides himself for having fallen in love with Teazie and leaves the heartbroken girl, satisfied to believe what the gossips say about her. Joseph becomes a minister while Teazie, unknown to him, the mother of his son, struggles for an existence. Teazie, dying, is cared for by an old negro who calls in Marie Carrington, Joseph's bride-to-be. Later Joseph is called recognizes Teazie, while Marie, to whom he had already confessed of the past, releases him. He renounces his vows to marry Teazie, his only love and Marie marries her childhood sweetheart.

Making Money On This One May Prove a Problem

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There is a big problem ahead of you on "The White Rose." They are going to ask you a lot of money for it, that's certain. And the big question is whether you want to gamble with it and take a chance of going into the "red" or let the other fellow across street do the gambling. Because, despite that it's a Griffith production and all that this implies, it is of small length, story value considered, that it is worth while figuring whether your folks are going to like it. It isn't a pretty story, and some of your home folk may not like the idea of their children seeing it, especially if they happen to be church loving folk who try to inspire their children with ideas of what ministers and preachers are—regardless of what they happen to be in actual life.

You can talk about Mae Marsh and her exquisite performance, but you can go no further than that and you'll not disappoint a soul. You can make all the promises in the world and she'll live up. And otherwise, the magnificent locations, the general excellence of the cast and production values gives you more to talk about. But be careful of misinterpreting the story.

If your folks saw "One Exciting Night" it will be well to tell them that the latest Griffith is entirely different, and a much finer production, because it is.
Not Enough to This in Spite of a Good Idea They Had to Start With

Agnes Ayres in
"THE HEART RAIDER"
Paramount

DIRECTOR .................. Wesley Ruggles
AUTHORS............ Harry Durant and Julie Herne
SCENARIO BY .............. Jack Cunningham
CAMERAMAN ................ Charles Schoenbaum
AS A WHOLE .......... A fair idea for a short picture but a tiresome and uninteresting feature theme STORY .......... Seldom suggests a real entertainment; not nearly enough situations to hold it together DIRECTION .......... Gives it far too much footage even granting that it is only about five reels
PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Good
LIGHTINGS .......................... All right
STAR .......... Not likely to cause a sensation in this one SUPPORT .......... Mahlon Hamilton appears ill at ease:
Charles Ruggles fair comedian; others Frazer
Coultier, Marie Burke and Charles Riegel
EXTERIORS ................. Good Palm Beach shots
INTERIORS .......................... Suitable
DETAIL .............................. Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY .......... Rich girl wins bachelor who avoided her because of her madcap escapades
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5.075 feet

Agnes Ayres hasn't been running in very good luck lately as far as story material is concerned. For a variation, perhaps, Paramount has given her a farcical theme in which she plays the role of a daring young rich girl whose pranks cause her father so many damage suits that he insures himself against liability for her acts. The idea, as far as it goes, is fairly interesting and although not startlingly new, suggests plenty of amusing complications. But suggestion is as far as it gets. The event in the life of Muriel Gray that consumes five reels is her insistent effort to "land" John Dennis, a bachelor, just because she overheard him tell her father that he wouldn't marry her for England's debt to the United States, or some such comparison.

Had Muriel's scheme embraced some real thrills or any form of excitement, "The Heart Raider" would have offered a fair entertainment, but it resolves itself into just so many pictures with pretty Palm Beach backgrounds, of themselves attractive, but their contribution to the feature is pictorial pleasure, not entertainment. Probably the authors thought the storm sequence in the climax would suffice for excitement but it isn't likely that anyone is going to get a thrill out of Muriel's pursuit of her hero and her subsequent rescue by him when her boat is capsized during the storm.

The development is obvious from the start. You know that the girl will eventually win him over and in spite of the fact that Wesley Ruggles has only used up five reels, the story could have been told in much less footage, and to better advantage. So little actually happens during the five reels that it is doubtful if they'll be sufficiently interested to wait for the ending. The comedy vein is weak although Charles Ruggles might have put in a few laughs if given half a chance.

Agnes Ayres makes the most of a severe handicap in the role of Muriel Gray. A slap-stick touch in which she bounces off the back of a chariot seems not quite in keeping with her dignity. The cast, like the star, suffers from a poor story.

Story: Muriel Gray, "a speed girl," vows she'll marry John Dennis in spite of his continual preaching against her mad escapades. How she succeeds is told in a fairly slow moving series of incidents, ending in a storm and a rescue by her "victim."

Will Hardly Keep Them Interested to the End

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

There isn't very much for you to talk about in this one and not much more in the way of actual entertainment upon which to get your folks interested. Although the idea itself is a rather good one, it isn't carried out in particularly interesting fashion and nothing really happens to make it capable of holding the attention.

If Agnes Ayres happens to be popular it might stand a better chance or if you think it will do with a good short reel program, it might be a fair chance. But for a hot weather program you'll likely need something more satisfying and capable of holding them. Use the title to indicate the theme. Say: "She found out that a certain man wouldn't marry her because of her gay escapades so 'The Heart Raider' went out to win him as a husband in spite of himself. See Agnes Ayres' latest picture and learn if she succeeded."
Nothing Very Interesting About This Crook Melodrama

Herbert Rawlinson in
"RAILROADED"
Universal

DIRECTOR .................. Edmund Mortimer
AUTHOR .................. Margaret Bryant
SCENARIO BY ............... Charles Kenyon
CAMERAMAN ................. Allen Davey
AS A WHOLE .............. Far too complicated to prove satisfying and denouement does not include complete explanation STORY .......... Crook melodrama that promises to be interesting but dwindles into improbable and fairly draggy picture DIRECTION ......... Fair; seems to have gotten off the track of the continuity; seldom makes things convincing
PHOTOGRAPHY .................. All right
LIGHTINGS .................. Generally good STAR .......... Overacts as usual; never overcomes this fault
SUPPORT ........ Adequate; including Esther Ralston, Alfred Fisher, David Torrence, Lionel Belmore
and Mike Donlin, former baseball star EXTERIORS .................. Sufficient
INTERIORS ................. All right
DETAIL .................. Not particularly good CHARACTER OF STORY .... Son of judge becomes criminal to avenge death of pal but love of girl prevents carrying out his oath
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ............ 5,390 feet

A good deal seems to happen in this picture but for it all it doesn't mean very much. Evidently the director didn't have a very carefully prepared continuity or else he took the liberty of not following it. At any rate "Railroaded" wanders along through five reels during which Rawlinson tries to carry out his plan of revenge—to kill the man who caused the death of his pal and brought about his own imprisonment.

The most glaring incongruity is that there is no given motive for the killing of the pal nor a reason as to why Rawlinson had been sent to prison. Then without this important detail being made known, director Mortimer proceeds in more or less mysterious fashion, to develop the plot. Not having given reasonable excuse for what follows, it is obviously a difficult matter to retain the attention of the spectator with ensuing events. Possibly they will wait around hoping for a complete denouement in the climax but once again they are due for a disappointment. You never find out why hero was imprisoned nor why his pal died a convict's death.

Margaret Bryant's theme, to begin with, isn't conspicuous with probabilities and it is unfortunate since her opening situation promises a crook melodrama somewhat out of the ordinary. Instead it runs into almost straight romance with the absurd situation of the father, a judge whose "sternness and uncompromising attitude" has resulted in making his son a criminal, forcing a form of penance upon his son by placing him in charge of a man who exacts certain punishments and partial exile. Of course there is a girl in the case who is the means of bringing about hero's redemption.

Herbert Rawlinson's perpetual overacting continues in this latest picture. He never acts natural. His performance consists of a series of poses from start to finish. Esther Ralston is his leading lady and in the cast is Mike Donlin, former baseball player.

Story: Judge Garbin believes his son dead until he sees his picture in the paper under the name of Ragland, an escaped convict. The son had become a crook in order to avenge the death of a comrade. At a meeting of father and son the latter agrees to remain with a friend of the father's until the prison term is out.
There he meets the girl who brings about his redemption and prevents him from carrying out the oath to kill his pal's murderer.

They'll Have To Like Rawlinson Especially Well To Accept His Latest

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

It is possible that with some additional explanatory sub-titles "Railroaded" could be made more interesting. As it is at present there is too much going on that doesn't mean anything in particular to the audience.
They don't know why hero was imprisoned and they don't know why he is so anxious to kill the murderer of his comrade except that he made a vow to the latter's wife that he would do so.

Nor is it likely that Rawlinson is a sufficiently strong drawing card to get the picture by on the strength of his appearing in it. You'll have to think this one over for yourself. There are so many better crook melodramas on the market right now that a poor one will have even a slighter chance of getting by. There is nothing for you to base promises on.
Highly Improbable But Good Amusement If Not Taken Seriously

Douglas MacLean in “A MAN OF ACTION”

DIRECTOR ......................... James W. Horne
AUTHOR .......................... James W. Horne
SCENARIO BY ................. Bradley King
CAMERAMAN ..................... Max DuPont

AS A WHOLE ...... A good lively picture that should please a majority; is fast-moving and not too long STORY ...... Comedy mystery that has its improbabilities but they furnish good amusement most of the time DIRECTION ...... Keeps things going first rate and succeeds in retaining the interest nicely; slightly overdoes one sequence in latter reels

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good

LIGHTINGS ...................... All right

STAR ...... Does good work and furnishes most of the amusement

SUPPORT ...... First rate; includes Marguerite De La Motte, Raymond Hatton, Wade Boetler and others

EXTERIORS ....................... Few

INTERIORS ....................... Adequate

DETAIL ......................... Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... Rich fellow turns crook for fun but accidentally captures band plotting to rob him of valuable diamonds

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ...... 5,636 feet

Douglas MacLean’s latest, “A Man of Action” is a better picture than “Bell Boy 13” but the star still has a long way to go to do another “Hottentot” which was the best picture he ever made. His present release offers an entertainment that is lively and amusing. The theme is more or less improbable but it suffices for a fast-moving picture and for those who will not take the farfetched bits too seriously, and accept them in the light of the amusement for which they are intended, they should prove satisfying.

Likely To Satisfy A Majority Especially If They Favor Star

This latest MacLean feature is pleasing enough and with sufficient amusement to make it a satisfying summer entertainment. It is not too long and should not prove boring for length even though the theme may not appeal particularly to your patrons. If Douglas MacLean is well liked “A Man of Action” will be more heartily received than if he isn’t popular and the title should attract attention.

Bradley King has included some fairly familiar stock tricks for some of his situations and the episode dealing with the efforts of hero MacLean and a band of crooks to secure the diamonds is composed of tricks that have been employed many times to create a mystery atmosphere. There are stairways that close up, trap doors, secret passages and similar contrivances intended to increase the suspense and heighten the action. These bits serve satisfactorily to keep the story moving along but in this instance particularly, director Horne might have toned it down to advantage and spent a little less time on it.

Douglas MacLean gives a pleasing performance and for such a clean-cut comedian it seems unfortunate that the Ince organization cannot find better material for him. More like “The Hottentot” would make him a much more valuable asset to the box office. He has a good supporting cast that includes Marguerite De La Motte, a pretty and pleasing lead for the star; Raymond Hatton, who makes the most of a fairly silly part, that of a freak trying to invent a noiseless explosive. The comedy in connection with Hatton isn’t very amusing. Wade Boetler is the “tough guy” who gives hero MacLean the idea to become “A Man of Action.”

James W. Horne has done pretty well with the material and generally used the cast to the best advantage. Production values are up to standard and all told the picture is a tolerable one, fairly well suited to summer business.

Story: Bruce MacAllister is upbraided by his fiancee, Helen Summer, for allowing his servants to pamper him. Spike McNab, the butler’s nephew, gives Bruce the idea of becoming a man of action. Bruce pretends to go away but instead joins a group of crooks hired by the managers of Bruce’s estate to steal the Mac Allister diamonds. Bruce is not recognized and the remainder of the picture consists of his efforts to keep in with the crooks but at the same time prevent them from stealing his diamonds. It ends happily with the crooks arrested and Helen satisfied with Bruce.

For catchlines you might say: “In Douglas MacLean’s latest he becomes a crook and robs his own house. There’s a reason. See the picture and learn why.” Or, “Is your fiance ‘A Man of Action’? Douglas MacLean becomes one in his latest picture to satisfy his sweetheart. See the picture for what happens as a result.” You might use the names of Marguerite De La Motte and Raymond Hatton also.

Delightful Romance In Picture Well Directed And Splendidly Acted

Arthur H. Jacobs presents
"CHILDREN OF DUST"
Frank Borzage Prod.—Assoc. First Nat'l. Pict.
DIRECTOR .................. Frank Borzage
AUTHOR ..................... Tristram Tupper
SCENARIO BY .......... Agnes Christine Johnston
CAMERAMAN ................. Chester Lyons

AS A WHOLE....... An artistic picture with story very attractively presented and splendidly acted; a trifle too long STORY........... Pretty love story with prologue delightfully portrayed by capable juvenile players; has good comedy touches

DIRECTION........... Always artistically keen; much effective and realistic detail

PHOTOGRAPHY .............. Very good
LIGHTINGS .................. First rate

PLAYERS....... Bert Woodruff gives remarkably fine and interesting performance; Johnnie Walker, Pauline Garon and Lloyd Hughes a pleasing romantic trio; Frankie Lee and Josephine Adair clever youngsters

EXTERIORS .................. Pretty
INTERIORS ................. All right
DETAIL ........................ Excellent

CHARACTER OF STORY....... Childhood rivalry of rich boy and poor boy for favor of rich girl is settled by World War after which she marries the poor fellow

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.......... 6,228 feet

For sheer romance you couldn’t ask for anything prettier than this latest Borzage production, “Children of the Dust,” a love story by Tristram Tupper, a sort of chronological tale of the loves of two boys, one rich and the other poor, and that of a little rich girl. The theme is extremely slight as far as situations are concerned but it makes up for this default in an abundance of interesting detail, fine artistic touches and several particularly attractive performances.

Most of the credit for making this picture pleasing goes to director Borzage for the very skillful treatment he has given the story. It isn’t the easiest thing to make a theme of this character as interesting as Borzage has managed to do, with the spectator’s attention retained throughout. It might readily come under the heading of narrative wherein the lack of increased interest would be expected to be missed. It is not so with “Children of Dust.” In spite of the fact that there is little for you to wonder about and hardly any call for speculation on your part, your interest in the romance of the two boys and a girl, is so well founded and so beautifully pictured that it compensates for all other losses.

To start with Borzage presents a prologue with juveniles that is especially delightful. Added to the work of Frankie Lee, always a pleasingly old-fashioned lad, there is little Josephine Adair who acts and looks the part of a little girl of the old Gramercy Park days. There is much interesting detail in this prologue and many fine touches especially in connection with the costumes worn by the people, manner of head-dress and even to the dresses and suits worn by the children. The old hansom cab lends another touch of realism.

Borzage has used good judgment in connection with the World War episode in not going into it to too great detail. His comedy touches are delightful although much of it is due to the fine work of Bert Woodruff, as the old gardener who is relating the story to an old cronny as his entrance speech to Heaven should St. Peter ask for a recommendation. Borzage might have refrained from having St. Peter weep after hearing the story, however, even though there are some quite pathetic bits toward the close. Cutting would improve the picture as it still runs a trifle too long.

Besides the excellent portrayal of Woodruff there is the pleasing romantic trio comprised of Johnnie Walker, Lloyd Hughes and Pauline Garon who is still climbing the ladder.

Can Undoubtedly Be Handled To Please Many And Satisfy The Box Office

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

The lack of action or situations in “Children of Dust” should not cause you any worry unless you know your patrons have a decided preference for blood and thunder plays and just wouldn’t permit themselves to be pleased with a pretty romance. But for the average audience, particularly the home crowd you can rely on “Children of Dust” pleasing them. They’ll love the romance that it offers and they’ll be delighted with Pauline Garon, Johnnie Walker and Lloyd Hughes as the principals, not forgetting Bert Woodruff, as the old gardner.

Appeal particularly to your feminine patrons and the younger element. They will like the picture especially well. The title needs explaining so it might be well to expend a little effort to put it over. Use plenty of stills in the lobby and let them know the story deals with the love of two soldiers for one girl. Under stills of Walker and Hughes run the line: “Which one will she marry.” It should be worth getting them interested.
Pleasing Entertainment With Good Combination of Situations

Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno in
"THE EXCITERS"
Paramount

DIRECTOR ......................... Maurice Campbell
AUTHOR ............................ Martin Brown
SCENARIO BY ...................... John Colton and Sonya Levien
CAMERAMAN ........................ George Webber
AS A WHOLE... Another "speed girl" picture, similar to the latest Agnes Ayres release, but far better entertainment STORY .......... Comedy-drama, fast moving continuity and some first rate bits of action DIRECTION .... Keeps it going along nicely and holds the attention pretty evenly all the way
PHOTOGRAPHY ..................... Very good
LIGHTINGS .......................... Good
STARS ..... Do nice team work and both are well suited; will please the majority SUPPORT ...... Not particularly important; includes Burr McIntosh, Diana Allen, Cyril Ring, Henry Sedley and others
EXTERIORS .............. More Palm Beach stuff
INTERIORS .......................... All right
DETAIL .............................. Adequate
CHARACTER OF STORY .......... To leave father fortune which she will inherit, girl, believing she is dying, marries burglar, recovers, and finds husband is of fine quality
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 5,939 feet

Bebe Daniels and Agnes Ayres are competing for honors as "speed girls" in their latest productions, "The Exciters" and "The Heart Raider" respectively, with Bebe Daniels the winner by far in a picture that offers a much more pleasing entertainment than the Ayres feature. The stars have similar roles and although Miss Daniels is a much more suitable type, she has a considerable advantage in a better story.

Martin Brown's story isn't anything especially out of the ordinary and his basic idea is pretty farfetched. Nevertheless it is built up with a good variety of incidents that keep it interesting and exciting at turns. Aside from the romantic angle of it, you have action that includes an aeroplane wreck, a motor boat chase and the excitement in the climax where hero's true identity, that of a detective, is disclosed and his acquired crook accomplices are turned over to the police. The thrills thus afforded, while of a fairly mild variety, are nicely handled and get over. The aeroplane spill is particularly effective and the landing shot showing the occupants being hurled out is quite realistic.

Director Campbell has supplied a good production and has generally handled the situations to get the most out of them. He has also done a lot to keep the development from being obvious and while the burglar hero turns out to be a gentleman of refinement who was merely posing as a crook to trap a gang who ruined a pal, it wouldn't have made an awful lot of difference, as far as the audience was concerned, if he had remained a burglar.

Antonio Moreno is a fine type and will completely satisfy the feminine members of any audience. Bebe Daniels appears to get a lot of fun out of the role of Ronnie Rand and will please her admirers.

Story: Ronnie Rand is to inherit a fortune left by her aunt providing she is married before she becomes twenty-one. Believing she is dying, the result of an aeroplane accident, Ronnie orders a hurried marriage selecting Martel, a burglar, who happens to be present, as a husband. How Ronnie recovers, becomes implicated with some crooks and later learns that Martel is not a burglar, but on the trail of the crooks, is followed by the couple's happiness.

Should Get Over Nicely and Can Stand Some Promises

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

In all probabilities you'll find this a good summer number and capable of holding their attention all the way. You can make promises for its entertainment value and for your women folks to talk about the romantic angle of it; for the men mention the crook theme and you can safely say the picture has some thrills and good bits of action. A trailer of the aeroplane fall and the wreck should get them interested.

Play up the two stars and you might use catchlines such as: "What would you do if you found out you had married a burglar?" It happens to Bebe Daniels in her latest picture, 'The Exciters' in which she is co-starred with Antonio Moreno." Use stills in the lobby and whatever other exploitation you think necessary to get their attention. The picture is not over long and should permit of accompanying short reel subjects.
THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON

was held over at the PARK THEATRE

for THREE WEEKS because—

1st: It received intelligent exploitation and publicity. The stunts were cleverly planned to reach not only the passersby on the street, but were also directed to reach the movie-goer at his or her home.

2nd: The picture itself is a money-maker. Boston talked about it; the newspapers praised it and as a result, the greatest force for profitable box-office results was set in motion WORD OF MOUTH ADVERTISING! These two factors were also responsible for the record-breaking run at the Strand Theatre, Providence, R. I.

San Francisco Earthquake Makes Fine Climax in Latest Chaney Picture

Lon Chaney with Virginia Valli in "THE SHOCK"
Jewel—Universal

DIRECTOR .................. Lambert Hillyer
AUTHOR ..................... William Dudley Pelley
SCENARIO BY .................. Charles Kenyon
CAMERAMAN .................. Dwight Warren

AS A WHOLE............. A picture that is a good deal out of the ordinary in spite of certain bits that may seem familiar

STORY........... Uses the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 as fine climax for drama; very well done DIRECTION....... Gives story first rate presentation and develops it with interest rather well sustained; might have used slightly less footage

PHOTOGRAPHY .................. Good

INTERIORS .............. Suitable

DETAIL .................. Ample

CHARACTER OF STORY .. Crippled accomplice of underworld queen tries to prevent carrying out of her plans and following earthquake is cured and happy with girl he loves

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ....... 6,758 feet

Universal's latest Jewel release is not quite as big an attraction as far as the box office is concerned when compared with some previous Jewel productions. Outside of the performance of Lon Chaney it really boasts of but one big moment and that is the climax in which the great San Francisco earthquake of 1906 serves as a thrilling conclusion to the drama. William Dudley Pelley's story, on the surface, seems rather unique and out of the ordinary, but upon analysis it does contain some pretty familiar situations, among them the old miracle idea and an underworld blackmailing scheme with revenge as its source.

Of course "The Shock" serves as an excellent vehicle for the exploitation of Lon Chaney, whose ability to handle the role of a cripple is little short of uncanny. His portrayal of Wilse Dilling, the accomplice of Queen Ann, an underworld figure of prominence, is interesting and for the most part convincing. Chaney has a faculty for making a role of this type convincing without its appearing forced, so his admirers will undoubtedly be well satisfied with "The Shock" regardless of whether the theme happens to appeal to them or not.

Director Hillyer has done very well with the story and provided a satisfactory production. For the amount of material, however, he has used up a little too much footage, to the extent that the early reels are slow and he fails to get into his actual story quickly enough. Later on Hillyer gathers a little more speed and the interest picks up, with the spectacular finish which presents the earthquake. This has been well done and furnishes a first rate thrill. The ending is a bit abrupt, or at least it would have been better not to have jumped right from the ruins and the hero and heroine apparently victims, to the final scene showing them both fully recovered and hero restored to the use of his limbs.

The regeneration of the crippled crook has been nicely handled and the romance between the girl and the cripple a good touch of sympathy, although it is hard for it to be convincing. Virginia Valli is a pretty heroine and Christine Mayo a successful schemer as queen of the underworld.

Will Satisfy a Good Many But Probably Not As Big a Box Office As Other Chaney Features

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Although there are plenty of good exploitation angles and rather a good deal to talk about in connection with a showing of this latest Jewel, still it doesn't appear to have the same drawing power as some previous releases. But this will probably not apply in all cases. Certain audiences will be well pleased with the picture and where they like crook stories it should go very well.

You have Lon Chaney's name to use and tell them he has a role similar to that which he played in "The Miracle Man" and "The Penalty." Also recall his other pictures which you may have shown such as "The Trap," "Voices of the City," "Shadows" and "Flesh and Blood." Universal has another to come shortly, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Be sure to mention the earthquake climax. It contains a fine thrill and a trailer of this bit might readily serve to bring them back. Universal has prepared extensive exploitation sheets for your benefit.
Another Domestic Drama Well Cast and Produced

Jane Novak in

SCENARIO BY ................. Andrew Bennison
CAMERAMAN .................. Jack MacKenzie

AS A WHOLE...... Not new in theme or handling

DIRECTION...... The story affords no startling climaxes and has been followed closely. Provides SUPPORT...... John Bowers does well as the husband; Margaret Livingston good as other woman. Phillippe de Lacy a very cute kiddie. Others include James Corrigan, Edythe Chapman, Freeman Wood

EXTERIORS ..................... Few
INTERIORS .................... Appropriate
DETAIL ......................... Adequate

CHARACTER OF STORY ...... An argument to prove that some men can't experience financial success without neglecting their wives

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... About 6,000 feet

"Divorce," starring Jane Novak, contains one of the oldest standard picture plots. It has been made with infinite variations times without number. Nevertheless, if folks didn't seem to like it, it stands to reason that producers wouldn't keep on using it, and so, once again, you have the happy though married couple living in a nicely furnished but unpretentions home, and going to smash as far as happiness is concerned with the husband's acquisition of a twenty thousand dollar a year job.

The opening is a little different, showing the wife's parents getting a divorce after half a lifetime of mar-rriage. Right after that, when the young husband tells the young wife nothing like that could ever happen to them, you know it surely will. And you're not disappointed.

The story unfolds smoothly enough, and the usual things happen, without any tricks, thrills or unusual incidents. There are some cute touches and a very sweet youngster that lend some really good human interest bits.

Jane Novak's work in the role of the wife is decidedly worth while, although she isn't called upon for a great deal of strongly dramatic work. She is very good to look at and gets her part over with charm that is none the less forceful because of its delicacy.
John Bowers is also good as the husband, and the rest of the cast is entirely adequate.

There are numerous sets that are attractive and will appeal to audiences that favor the "society" type of picture. Altogether, there should be no reason why "Divorce" will not meet with fair financial success, because while it has no unusual features, it is the kind of picture that will appeal to a great many and in addition it is well cast and nicely produced.
It is a question, however, whether it was wise or nec-necessary to allow the footage to run as long as it does in view of the fact that there is no startling denouement and the audience expects the reconciliation between erring husband and patient wife—she is almost unnaturally sweet—for a long time before it actually happens.

No Unusual Situations But Material Should Please a Good Many

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a nicely mounted, well-acted picture which, while containing no unusual or melodramatic situations will still appeal to a good many folk who favor a "problem play," the problem in "Divorce" being how a couple may be happy on twenty thousand a year when they were previously as happy as they could be on half that amount. The title may give an idea of the type of picture it is.

Where the star is a favorite you don't have to be told to play up her name, and you can also mention John Bowers and Margaret Livingston, and a satisfactory supporting cast.
Short Stuff

"The Mummy"—Fox

Type of production..................2 reel comedy

Where slap-stick is still considered excellent entertainment and where rough-and-tumble action can be depended upon to amuse, this Fox comedy will be enjoyed because there are some really funny situations contained in it. In spite of its far-fetched theme, which is, however, taken care of by using that old stand-by, the dream ending. The owner of one of the oldest automobiles in existence, after many mixups, collides with a telegraph pole. He is knocked out and dreams that a couple of thieves plan to steal an Egyptian mummy belonging to his sweetheart’s father. He takes the place of the real mummy and the resultant complications will bring a good many laughs.

"Taking Orders"—Century—Universal

Type of production..................2 reel comedy

Baby Peggy, the star of this Century comedy, can be counted on to captivate a goodly majority of any audience no matter what she does. This time they have her running a cafeteria in addition to helping her father, whose dental parlor is next door. There is some well-handled stuff showing a dog that has inhaled laughing gas sailing up to the ceiling of the room and then through the window, with Peggy attempting to reach him by following him up in the air attached to a bunch of toy balloons. Another ludicrous scene shows several patients also inflated with gas parked up on the ceiling awaiting the dentist.

"Rice And Old Shoes"—Carter DeHaven—F. B. O.

Type of production ..................2 reel comedy

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven again stage a little tragi-comedy of domestic life. As the title would indicate this time it is a honeymoon tour. The thoughtless groom has taken a drawing room on the train so that they might be alone, but as it almost immediately develops, this is not to be. Everything from fainting women to train robbers interrupt their would-be bliss, even when they arrive at their destination, they are not left alone for a minute. In desperation they buy a bungalow mounted on an automobile and strike out for the wilderness. But alas! When they think they are entirely alone they find the whole U. S. Army drilling at their side. The old gag of the smallpox sign finally brings them their much desired peace.

"Hyde and Zeke"—Range Rider—Pathé

Type of production ..................2 reel western

Lee Maloney’s latest two-reel western differs somewhat from the usual run of this series in that there is an absence of the familiar quick-riding chase across the western hills. Instead the interest is held by the suspense of having the players gather at a ranch house unknown to each other. They circulate through the different rooms managing to just miss each other all the time. There is even a bit more romance than usual between the hero and Josephine Hill, and there are two fights that will please lovers of westerns. Lafe Hyde insists that his daughter Ruth shall marry Job Larabee, but Ruth and Zeke Enright think differently. Zeke goes to a neighboring ranch as a caretaker. Ruth, thinking the ranch unoccupied, goes there to rest. Job, knowing she is there, follows her. Ensues a general mix-up with everything ending well for the lovers.

"The Watch Dog"—Hal Roach Dippy Doo Dad—Pathé

Type of production..................1 reel animal comedy

The second Dippy Doo Dad comedy which has been directed by Len Powers is every bit as entertaining as the first one of the series and will be hailed with delight by children of all ages. There isn’t a human being in the comedy. The action is entertaining and the titles snappy, but the wonderful intelligence displayed by the four-footed players is the most remarkable feature of the reel. Some clever slow-motion stuff is introduced at the finish that will get plenty of laughs. The story deals with the troubles of a dog whose duty it is to watch a peanut stand, on which a hungry monkey has his eyes. The monk resorts to many bits of strategy and finally wins his point. The finish shows him gorged with peanuts to the bursting point. This is a first-rate animal comedy.

"The Sea of Dreams"—Warren A. Newcombe—Educational

Type of production..................1 reel fantasy

This Warren A. Newcombe short reel, with Hazel Lindsley as the featured player, is interesting in so far as it is a departure from the usual material contained in a film of this length. It is a “love fantasy” and opens with a pair of lovers who have had the usual quarrel. The girl tells the boy of a strange dream she has had and the rest of the reel deals with this dream, really an allegorical tale wherein the maiden is carried off to the Castle of Deceit but is finally saved from the spectre of Doubt by the Sword of True Love held in her lover’s hands. Some of the sets are in miniature and the switching from drawings to actual sets has not been done as smoothly as it might have been. This detracts to some extent from an otherwise attractive picture.

"Pick and Shovel"—Hal Roach—Pathé

Type of production ..................1 reel comedy

With a seriousness somewhat reminiscent of the inimitable Keaton, Stan Laurel gets through the various gags connected with happenings in a coal mine in this, his third comedy for Pathé. He toys playfully with a carload of dynamite, flirts with the owner’s daughter and gets in wrong with the miners. There is a good bit of excitement when the water main gets disconnected and floods the shaft, and a small mule is another source of amusement. Altogether, “Pick and Shovel” will be liked where rough and tumble comedy goes well.

"Lonesome Luck"—Universal

Type of production..................2 reel western drama

Jack Dougherty plays the leading role in this two reel western drama dealing with a carefree young traveler, a pretty girl who is the proprietress of a lunch room and a villainous oil swindler who casts covetous eyes on her land. While the production doesn’t get very far away from the usual western it does contain plenty of action and numerous good fights. A very cute pup adds a pleasing touch. “Happy” Jack Morgan and his pal “Rags” arrive in Cactus by freight train. They make a hit with the gang and Jack becomes driver of the stage. In addition to falling in love with Betty Lind, who owns property that Richard Barton, an oil swindler, wishes to get possession of. He frames a way to get Jack in trouble and benefit himself, but in the end of course he is discovered. A good, average western.
“In the beginning when the film first came to England I forfeited any chance of going down to posterity as a prophet. Both in speech and writing I condemned the movies as a passing craze, a cunning top which the people would soon grow tired of, and I ventured to prophesy in two years not a screen or lantern would be displayed.

“The film can do stupendous things on the spiritual side, too. Naturally I venture to put forward as its very highest function its supreme power of making one understand a great piece of literature, or at least parts of it, better than one has ever done before.

“I, as others, quite agree that a definite stage has been reached; that the motion picture art to a certain extent now hangs in the balance. Either the film is going to prove a benefit to mankind or it is going to prove a distinct danger. If the authors are able to stimulate the thought and imagination of the world, or it is going to weaken and destroy them. It must do one or the other. It must appeal to people's intelligence or it must tend to put that intelligence to sleep; and I would say in all your plans do not let us authors out.

“In England there has been, I think, a good deal more than on this side, a definite hostility between the author and the producer. The author has been disappointed with results, probably because of his fundamental ignorance of the limits, the extreme possibilities of the film; and the producer has often failed, may not really grasp the author's main idea. I hope that the author and the producer will come together and live happily ever after, and I would further make this appeal—I will put it as a question:

“Are you going to walk hand in hand with literature, or are you going to turn your back to it and obtain a divorce?

“I cannot think that possible, although really there has been something like it, certainly in England, for a considerable time.

“If I may say anything more, it is this, I would boldly urge producers to go for books and go for good novels of all kinds. I would say that from novels are going to come your biggest and your best pictures, and I would ask the producers and the people interested in the absolute management of the industry, I would earnestly ask them not for a moment to believe that a good novel may be really good and yet not contain sufficient action for the screen. If there is not enough action to make a picture play in it, then it is a bad novel and not a good novel. I would say, leave it alone, let it die its natural and neglected death, no matter what has been the noise made at its birth.

“Authors, of course, must learn their place in the partnership. They can help, but they must know how to help. Personally I am altogether and entirely sceptical as to the success that authors are likely to achieve if they themselves try to adapt their works for the films. I do not believe that if Shakespeare came to life today he would make a success of it.”

Valentin Mandelstamm, representing the Authors of France, said:

“About 80% of the films shown in France are American made. As a result, I wish to emphasize the following points:

1. That it is desirable such productions should be supervised (in writing and directing) by French specialists acquainted with the spirit of American and French audiences.

2. That is why the American made, chiefly in technical matters, I think our production could easily be improved with the co-operation of some American concern of means.

And a great deal of profitable work may be done, by means of a mutual giving and returning of pictures, for the development of the friendly relationship in the intellectual, the industrial, the political fields, between France and America which have always fought for the same ideals.”

Address of Julien Jacques Champenois, representing French Universities:

“From the international viewpoint, from the standpoint of international anarchy, understanding and good will, the potential power of motion pictures in the management of world's affairs is immense. I can only compare it to that of the newspaper press.

“May I be permitted to express my surprise at the fact that the unsoundness of any combination of fiction and facts have escaped your critical judgment. Our historical novels and films are thus exposed to the most injurious judgment. If the American writer, Dumas, and the French writer, Morineau, is it not enough to say that they are the most impudent mongrels that ever strutted along the highway of literature, neither fiction nor fact.

“Among these popular historical romances or novels, Dickens' Tale of Two Cities may be mentioned at the top of the ladder. At the bottom of the ladder you will find trash, like Ouida's Under Two Flags.

“The idea of which the average American or English reader may form of the French revolution from Dickens' romance is such as to bring tears to any historian's eye. Historical motion pictures, limited as are their means of expression, are both victims and offenders.

“It must be confessed, however, that accuracy in details in the reproduction of foreign historical scenes is better than no accuracy at all. I recall noticing on the screen European soldiers supposed to belong to the 1914 period equipped more or less as they might have been in the days of my grandfather. Accuracy in details, and sheer waste are synonymous. Lack of accuracy cannot be tolerated, and surely there is a way out of the difficulty. There is a media, a kind of half measure between the two extremes. Whether this or the other kind of sword in the hands of any particular hero of the screen happens to be a replica of a sword preserved in the museum at Saint Germain, is a matter of no importance whatever.

“Let us try now to formulate, if possible, a set of practical rules likely to guard the motion picture art and industry against any international unpleasantness.

“The first rule is purely negative. Historical novels have long been discarded by literature. Historical films should be barred whenever the action lies without the borders of the producer's nation.

“The second principle, if it is possible to call it a principle, is one which I have inferred from the admirable pictures produced in this country on your Civil War. There, indeed, you have had to exercise great care. Of those American Civil War pictures I have seen none that might give offense either to the North or to the South. You have spared the feelings of both parties. I am sure we can say with the same firmness that American films dealing with foreign history should be as mindful of foreign sensibilities as they have been aware of those that may still exist in this country.

“It is with the most sincere feelings of gratitude that we should approach those nations to which we owe so much sympathy on the one hand, diffidence and critical discrimination on the other, and then we will have an excellent working formula.”

Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews said:

“I suppose every writer believes, as I do, that writing is the biggest job on earth, and that it is a proud thing to be even on the fringes of it, but the moving pictures have taken the art of letters and they have put around it an aura, an aura made of the glamour of pictures and the excitement of motion. They are not only used now for amusement, for education, but for interpretation.

“They open the door in a blank wall to masses of people who never before knew there was any opening of the kind. They open the door into literature and history. The moving picture art is like a great searchlight that sweeps in a tremendous and ever-broadening ray, clean around the circle of all human activities."

Handling Own Sales
First National Announces Number of Foreign Offices and Termination of Deal with D. P. Howells.
First National intends maintaining its own foreign distribution and will,
the future, make foreign sales directly through its department head-d by Bruce Johnson.
In advertising announcements ap-ing in trade papers this week,
First National notifies the trade that its arrangement with David P. Howells, Inc., will terminate on July 1 and that whatever territories and subjects released subsequent to Jan. 1, 1922 have not been sold will be handed by the company directly.
This will also apply to future releases.
In connection, a number of foreign offices are announced: including Associated First National companies in England, Australasia, Norway and Mexico, and the following representatives: John Olsen, Denmark; Louis
H. Rubins, Spain; Robert P. Schless, France and Transocean Films, Germany.
Howells has been identified with First National foreign activities for some time. He was instrumental in arranging for the release of "Passion" through the circuit and had considerable to do with the launching of the First National proposition in En-dland.

Howells stated on Saturday that the phraseology of the advertisement was open to misinterpretation, and that what had actually happened was that he had sold out the unexpired portion of his contract with First National, in order to get back to the industry. He had offered him the management of his foreign business, but that he had preferred to continue his enterprise and that his relations with the company were perfectly amicable and hygienic.

Partial Metro List
"Scaramouche" Goes Out in January
One Technicolor Named—Coogan in "The Dog of Flanders" Before the Metro sales managers left for their various destinations on Saturday, a partial list of next year’s releases was divulged to them. The company, as noted, plans 32 pictures all of them in the Technicolor class.
"Scaramouche" will be released generally in January, with a pre-release undoubtedly on Broadway. Technicolor will make "The Uninvited Guest" for December release and following, "Long Live the King.

Artistic efforts. Yes. Authors with big names. Declining efforts of producers. Why? Always have. Why will they just a question. Because it’s in the cards. And cannot seem to be avoided. Is the answer is that the ultimate? Pro-ably not. Because out of the Zukor movement something must come. And it must improve existing conditions. This, regardless of the Basil King’s, Nothing can stop it. After a while when authors have learned. And when they know what it’s all about you will have masterpieces coming from them. Written especially for the screen. And these may be numbered among the 10 best pictures of the year. But you cannot blame a producer from attempting to “cash in” on a well popularized novel or play.
It’s only human nature. And after all, it’s a form of insurance.
A certain number of people are bound to be interested in the picture production of a popular book or play. That cannot be avoided and one wants to.
It’s all right for Basil King. And others of his kith and kin to shunt disapproval. But remember this: until it comes out of the tin: until those who should know get a chance to tell you—and that is the great American public—you, nor no other, will know what you have. And this regardless of whether Griffith, DeMille, Ingram or Cruze makes it. And “whoa!”

ZUKOR’S OFFER

Of ten thousand iron men every year. A real offer. A good one, too, and should prove stimulating. And may make somethings worthwhile result. Of course there will be the yelling mob crying aloud. “Publicity stunt!” Well, maybe they’re right. But then, they would have made the same cry if they had been hanging around when Noah assembled the Ark commuter. Regardless of the publicity value, its intrinsic value to the industry cannot be disregarded. And it’s to be hoped that Famous Players won’t have the prize winning story made into a picture.
Then perhaps these yellers won’t cry aloud. At least not so loud as at present.

SOMETHING ABOUT AZ

Don’t overlook this: he has many faults—but many ambitions, has seen this industry grow. From a tiny oaklet. To a real sturdy tree. And he has been somewhere around the forefront all the time. They’ve had him “become a dozen times. But somehow, he always comes bubbling up. Right along the front line. And he is sincere in many of his efforts. Never discount that. He wants to see a lot of things happen. A lot of dreams visualized—at least on the way. Before he steps down. And turns the reins over. To some favored son. Not his own. He’s a dreamer. And like all dreamers he wants to see his dreams come true. He wants good pictures—better pictures. Finer pictures. Oh, yes: sometimes things go wrong in the works.
Sometimes they don’t come out half as much as he would like them. But take all in all, week after week, release after release—and the score cards shows something. Don’t forget that.

American Society Still Ready to Con-er on Music Tax Situation—
Cohen Actions Pending

According to J. C. Rosenthal, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the members of that organization still stand ready to confer with the M. P. T. O. in an effort to bring about a revision in the music tax so that the levy might be more equitable so far as small houses are concerned.

Rosenthal stated on Saturday that following the talk of Nathan Bunku, secretary of the Society, with Sydney S. Cohen in Chicago, the later had promised to take up the matter with the Society. This has not yet been done.

Rosenthal also stated that a new court action is planned against Cohen, alleging further violations of the music tax and added that this new complaint, which is in addition to the 22 suits now pending against Cohen will be in the nature of a test case.
The Society, he said, will seek an injunction against Cohen. The latter’s answer will be filed in a few weeks.

By the way. It may interest you to know that the idea of the Art Congress was developed by Charley McCarthy. One of the smart young men of the Paramount publicity organization. It sure was a real idea.

That Syracuse Convention

Next week, is expected to result in some "doings." There have been a lot of promises made for many such gatherings any one place. But it's only a week away. You see, in Pegasus. And all the other steeds. And let's wait. Yep, we're going to Syracuse. Just to see the wheels go around.

Federal Trade Resumes

Today. With Kent of Famous on the stand. Probably to be followed by Sydney Cohen. And as the little old country newspapers say, "a good time will be had by all."

Minnesota, Michigan, Sydney Cohen and a Newspaper

The Film Daily hasn't now—never has had, and hopes it never will have a quarrel with any individual in this business. But The Film Daily is a newspaper. And as such must—and will—print facts as they exist. And regardless of who likes or dislikes, the publication of those facts.

And so it came about. That at Chicago. A few weeks ago, the Film Daily printed some facts. Relative to Minnesota, Michigan and some other states whose leaders did not like the brand of soothing syrup which Sydney Cohen's boys thought was good for them. And so they decided to stick to the convention when Cohen was re-elected, as was sure in the cards—and then withdraw from the national organization. And so, when The Film Daily printed this, and used a caption: "Delegates Walk Out," Cohen issued a statement intended to make this publication out as a falsifier. And issued this statement to the trade press. Which in due time published his remarks.

Well, let's see what happened? Minnesota did withdraw. Michigan did withdraw. And there is a split in Illinois big enough to drive couple of Mack trucks through and not hit the side walls either. And the delegates of Minnesota and Michigan did walk out. And they have withdrawn. And more important still, Sydney Cohen knew—or should have known—because many others did— including this writer—that neither Michigan nor Minnesota intended remaining in the national organization. And so when Sydney issued the statement to the trade press relative to the report in The Film Daily he was—well, let's be kindly and charitable—and say he was misinformed. At all events, the actions of these state units more or less clarify exactly what was anticipated in the reports of the convention proceedings.

So this is printed with just one purpose—to tell the world where we stand. We're going to print the truth as it happens. Some people may not like some of it. Sometimes the truth is unpleasant. But we're going to print it. And we hope all of you—including Sydney—will understand what one of the functions of this publication is. And that's that.

Danny.

That's Why Rudy Sanders Couldn't Book Paramount Tells Trade Commission

Anti-trust proceedings against Famous Players-Lasky and subsidiary corporations by the Federal Trade Commission moved more to the Court yesterday when the Engineering Societies Building, with several exhibitors on hand, was put on the stand today. The hearings are scheduled to continue here the next few days, and if present plans hold, the output of Philadelphia will be next stop.

Rudy Sanders, a Brooklyn exhibitor, said that he has not used Paramount pictures since the season of 1927-28. He has used seven individual pictures since then, he said, but last of which was "The Miracle Man." Famous Players, he said, began asking entirely too much money for their product. After he had been continually approached by Paramount salesman intent on again bringing him back to the Paramount fold, he said that he told them if Famous Players would make good his losses in "The Miracle Man" he might buy merchandise with them. He said $250 for the picture, he said, on the promise that it would be a big money maker, but instead the loss, said he. Sanders said that Paramount salesmen offered him some pictures at his own price to get him to again take their product, and when he said Paramount was asking too much money he was advised to raise his admission price.

"But how could I do that," Sanders said, "when Keith's Prosper T不要附近, was giving the people a big program, a wonderful orchestra and vaudeville for fifteen and twenty cents?"

Sanders testified that some of his dealers asked him to buy pictures they had received from Famous Players, reading, "ask Sanders why he doesn't show Paramount pictures."

"What did you do when these cards were shown you," asked Marvin Farrington, questioning for the Government.

"I made a joke of it," replied the witness. "I ran a slide on the screen reading this way; "To satisfy patrons who received postcards from Paramount asking why we didn't show."

"Universal Sixty"

Jewels Will Total 20—Hoot Gibson In Special Productions—Two New Jewel Stars

Carl Laemmle yesterday announced that Universal's 1923-24 releases will consist of the "Universal Sixty." The pictures will include 20 Jewel productions, twice as many as have been put out by Universal during the last twelve months.

The increase is due to the addition of three new talent stars, Reginald Denny and Mary Philbin. Denny has graduated into his own Jewel company by reason of his work in "The Leather Pushers," "The Abnormal Brute," and others. Miss Philbin appears in "Merry Go Round." Each will make four during the coming year. These will be in addition to the twelve already completed or now in work. They are "Merry Go Round," "A Lady of Quality," "A Chapter in Her Life," "The Acquittal," "Drifting," "Thundering Dawn," "Up the Ladder," "Dammed," "Whose Baby Are You?" "White Tiger," "The Signal Tower" and "The Troum.

Of these Jewels, "A Lady of Quality" and "Up the Ladder" will be completed first, it was announced.

"It's no longer the case that the public has been told that there are no other pictures on the screen," said Laemmle. "With the increasing demand for good pictures, the public is today demanding more than ever before." The public has been told that there are no other pictures on the screen, he said. "It is the public's right to know that there are no other pictures on the screen."

Exhibitors Worry

Over Proposed Erlanger-Shubert-Circuit—O'Reilly Issues Statement Attacking Plan

Exhibitors are agog over the new proposed Erlanger-Shubert combine, planned for the purpose of using houses of both theatrical organizations for the road shows of large and important pictures.

It was reported in theatrical circles yesterday that several exhibitors had offered their houses to the theatrical firms using telegrams to insure attention, but all offices these reports were denied.

The following statement was issued by Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York:

"The announcement this morning of the formation of the Shubert-Erlanger circuit of legitimate theaters for the showing of specials pictures to take the place of legitimate stage attractions is merely an attempt to gouge the public by tactics. It is exorbitantly high prices to see pictures.

"This is the very thing that the motion picture theater owners have been fighting against stubbornly for years. The theater owners have determined to maintain a fair standard admission price and to present at the public the finest attractions at the regular box office scale.

"If the Shubert-Erlanger scheme is put into effect successfully the public will be forced to pay the exorbitant price. These prices may be anywhere from $2 to $5. The class of films which the Shubert-Erlanger combine proposes to show at this exorbitant scale has hitherto been sold out regularly at $1.00 to $1.50, when the public is forced to pay such prices for the privilege of seeing the pictures, because the road showing of legitimate stage attractions is not as profitable as it once was.

Theodore Mitchell Presents Some Interesting Data to Prove Their Value

In a letter to the editor of THE FILM DAILY, Theodore Mitchell, who, with J. J. McCarthy is handling the "road shows" of "The Covered Wagon," says:

"I issue this June 4th under the caption 'How It's Done,' you refer to the presentation and promotion of two dollar motion pictures as the 'trick,' and citing Chicago as an instance of how the two dollar picture has been killed.

"By an odd coincidence the same day you were writing your editorial, I was directing over big pictures in Chicago the men controlling the presentation of 'The Covered Wagon.' We have exercised our option to extend the run for more than three months from that date.

Believed Realar't Independent

Sanders stated that at the time Realar't was formed he signed a contract with that organization with the understanding that it was an independent concern. He said that he had read articles in various trade papers to the effect that there was some possible connection between him and Realar't, and that he had heard also that Zukor was leaving Famous and was forming Realar't to fight Famous. He was told by Lester Adler, manager of the Realar't exchange, he said, that these reports were unfounded and there was not a bit of truth in that, Realar't was absolutely independent.

Robert T. Swaine told the witnesses that it had kept in touch with stock exchanges in the trade, and he could have easily ascertained that there was no secret about Realar't's being a Famous Players subsidiary. He said, after being made about possible connections, that he explained this to Swaine said, "the answer is no, young man, and our answer is no also, if they want to know.

What would have been your attitude toward Realar't if you had known it was a Famous Players subsidiary?" asked Page. In answer, Swaine said, "Well, retorted the witness, it wouldn't have been quite so sweet if I had known Famous Players was behind it.

Sanders threw the hearing into convulsions of merriment during his cross-examination by Swaine. He had previously testified that he had come to the competition by coming down the street to "lay-off" of Paramount because his competitor had made a big hit with them and was making all the same. (Sanders) fell that he could get as good pictures from other companies.

"Well, since you were so altruistic with your rival across the street, I asked Swaine, "what pictures did he agree to "lay-off" for your benefit?"

"I had about the same arrangement with him that you have with the people on the 16th floor," replied the witness with a malicious grin.

"What do you mean, the people on the 16th floor?" asked Swaine peremptorily. In answer, Swaine said, "Oh, well, let's don't go into that any way," said Sanders. "But the officials of Famous Players behind you then can tell you who I mean.

"He probably means Metro," prompted Harry Buxbaum, sitting behind Swaine. "Just what do you mean by that statement?" again questioned Swaine. "We have no trade secrets.

"Oh, that is so," laughed Sanders, shaking his head with an air of resignation. He then told how Metro had boosted the price of their pictures on him, apparently knowing exactly what he had paid for "The Miracle Man" and other pictures. Asked why he had such a pet aversion against Swaine, Sanders replied, "I always lay off of any company that tries to take the shirt and coat off my back. As far as I'm little boy, (meaning himself), Famous Players wouldn't get away with what they do. No one would Swaine, they do other business. "Maybe they would," agreed Sanders.

Says Famous Has No Trade Secrets

When Swaine told Sanders that Famous Players had no trade secrets, the witness laughed, "You juror at Swaine, and with a twinkle in his eye remarked, "You're only a lawyer, Mr. Swaine.

"Well, I guiltyly admitted, turned the counsel for Famous, but I can't help it. Don't rub it in.

During his cross-examination Sanders explained that one reason why he is not dealing Paramount any more is because "I don't want a gun to be loaded with me to shoot somebody else," and when asked by Swaine in what event he couldn't have been "so sweet" to have known that Famous Players was 100% behind Sanders. "Surely, Swaine, it was well said by Swaine thusly: "well, all Zukor needed was to get several more companies like Realar't together and we expected we could have to sing any song he wrote for us.

The witness acknowledged if he was getting along well without showing Paramount pictures. "Very well, thank you," replied with a broad smile. "In fact, I now have a little balance in the bank.

David Weinstock Next Witness

David Weinstock, who operates the City Hall and Freeman Theaters, testified that he has been using Paramount 100% for the last six years with the exception of one year, when he couldn't agree with them on price. Weinstock said he is compelled to follow Loew's U. B. O. and one of the Fox houses. He stated that he was compelled to do or nothing, and named several pictures which he claimed were only "fair" including "Pink Gods," "Mistress of the World," and "Nice People.,

Exhibitors Worry

"The interests of the public and the industry are identical and we shall make it our business to see that the public is fully informed of the real situation.

In the statement issued regarding their plans it was said that "The Covered Wagon" was being booked next season, and it was indicated that several other large pictures would be booked in the houses in San Francisco, but the producers of the pictures mentioned declared that no plans for showings had been made, and in nearly every instance the picture referred to was not completed.

One very important exhibitor declared it was his belief that the entire affair was just a good press agent story intended to boom the "The Covered Wagon."
Found Prices High
Weinstock testified that the chains or circuits get the big break nowadays, and that the organization is becoming more and more onerous to the independent exhibitor, cutting him off profits to a narrower margin each year.

Weinstock said that just before the completion of the Freeeman last year, which seats 1,600 people, he booked 139 pictures and was told by Paul Swift, the manager of the New York Exchange for Paramount that if any of the pictures in the block were more than 10 years old, they would be eliminated from that program and that there should never be 10 years on the block. Weinstock said he was told that the 41 series was down from 100 series. This Weinstock said, in June, 1923, that the program was sold for over two months and was too old. By that time, he said, to take any of the pictures it would be necessary to make an agreement with the exhibitor to have them taken off the program and an according reduction on the price of the block would be made in his favor.

Weinstock testified that he opened in October of last year, that by that time the 41 series was down to 20 and was too old. He said, to have any of the pictures the program would have to be changed.

Weinstock, who is the owner of the Famous Pictures, said that he is not concerned about the identity of the Famous Pictures. Weinstock said that he had brought in the Famous Pictures by taking the title to the Famous Pictures and that it was not concerned about the identity of the Famous Pictures. Weinstock said that he had brought in the Famous Pictures by taking the title to the Famous Pictures and that it had been filed by the Famous Pictures.

Weinstock said that while on the way to the M.P. T. Convention to Chicago he was talking with Marcus Loew's counsel told him that production costs are going to increase to such heights that the exhibitor is going to have to pay more money for his pictures, so much more in fact, that the exhibitor will be compelled to either raise his admission prices or not exist.

Brooklyn Exhibitor Testifies
Hyman Rachmil, who owns five Brooklyn houses, was the first witness of the Government for the Government, but failed to manifest any sympathy against Famous Players. Rachmil testified that he had formerly used Paramount pictures until 1919, but was running second and run to two of Loew's houses. He decided that Paramount was impossible to cut Paramount off his buying list. One important factor that contributed to this elimination was that the programs of his theaters, the witness testified, was the fact that his theaters would not be able to the same extent as the other theaters, and that he did not consider Paramount pictures melodramatic.

Rachmil admitted on cross-examination by Robert T. Swaine, counsel for the respondents, that Paramount's method of selling “star” pictures was practically the same as the method of other companies, and that he had received as fair treatment from Famous as from any other company.

When asked whether he received any special treatment from Famous Players, Rachmil put out the best pictures during the past five years and had the best pictures. Rachmil failed to come through with the answer he had that what was being elicited from most of the Government witness that he had been called when it came time for their cross-examination and that Famous Players had put out the best pictures during the last five years, but he agreed that the company Paramount had the better pictures, and stated that if he could get first run pictures he would be buying Paramount now.

F. P. Comptroller Questioned
A government witness, F. P. Comptroller for the Government, questioned Richard W. Saunders, Comptroller of Famous Players, at great length as to the system of book-keeping employed by Famous Players.

Road Shows

"The Covered Wagon," which is the newest of the movies to come into the big theater field, is going to duplicate the record of the ones mentioned below, and it would not be surprising to see it surpassed in many of those records. It is now being booked solidly for the season of 1923-24. It is a story of America which is inspiring to Americans and appeals to a tradition that will always thrill the heart of every true American and all the bluffs of an indigent opposition is only going to help it in the long run.

"Chicago is not different from any other big city. Its magnificent boulevard along the lake is a credit to the nation. Any city that can improve so marvelously within the space of two years is not going to be backward in measuring up with the national pride in this great story, which was written by a Chicagoan, and it will take a far more convincing argument that you have put forth in the article, to which we take exception to make us believe that the artistic soul and love of Chicago is limited to a fifty-five-cent amusement palace modeled after the Grand Opera House of Paris, but without any of its traditions.

"Martin J. Quigley commenting editorially upon a famous American film which has grown up in certain circles of the motion picture business, was not enough, to say that the announcement of J. J. McCarthy and myself had decided to handle the road tours of 'The Covered Wagon,'" recalled our former work with "The Birth of a Nation," and described the latter endeavor as one of the greatest promotional influences in motion picture history. He added that it was also of a constructive missionary nature.

"Between these widely separated viewpoints there seems to be a decided difference of opinion. In order to shed some light upon the matter may we be permitted to quote you a few undisputed facts from the records.

"One of the first real steps forward in the motion picture business came in 1913 with the launching of 'The Birth of a Nation' as a two dollar show in New York City, and its subsequent tours as a road show for nearly four years before it was ever shown in a picture house.

In less than four years this single production made a net profit of over $1,000,000, and our books show that over 50,000 people paid these prices to see it. Of this number it is safe to say that at least 40% of these were new patrons who had, prior to this, never seen a motion picture.

It aroused interest, gave dignity to a struggling art and took motion pictures out of the hands of the fanatics. Any exhibitor who says he has not benefited since the forward and constructive movement is lacking in vision or plays hide and seek with truth.

"Another forward movement came with D. W. Griffith's marvelous production of 'Intolerance. ' The baggage and the sweep of that undertaking was inspiring. Griffith put a lot of his individual profit out of 'The Birth of a Nation' into this spectacle. It cost five times as much as any picture ever made up to that time. In the face of this came the magnificent war costs of touring, and yet despite its large loss of money 'Intolerance' was given along the lines of its predecessor and eventually paid out a margin of profit. I'm sure no one will say that this mammoth spectacle did not make a deep impression and add to the growing worth of motion pictures in the field of entertainment.

"After a lapse of time when another constructive movement was needed came the picture version of that old rural drama, 'Way Down East.' It is commonly known in the business that Griffith paid the biggest prize for the picture rights to this story that had ever been paid up to its time. What he did was to show that simple story is motion picture history.

"We handled the big city engagements and the road tours for seven months. Our books show a net profit in that period of $1,350,000 in round numbers

"There is a bit of inside history regarding 'Way Down East,' which might be given ever and over again to the point of annoyance, but as one out of thousands of cases it is illustrative. In the city of Hartford, 'Way Down East' played for three weeks as the leading attraction of the two at $2 prices to a total of over 38,000 paid admissions. The following season it returned and Poli played it in his popular price picture house in one week to 44,000 paid admissions. Does any exhibitor mean to say that such promotion was 'bunk.' Or does he think that the average American is so impressed with the motion that 'Way Down East' would have filled up such a record of attendance for Poli?

"The foregoing facts are from the record. How anyone can call such work 'bunk' is open to question. The record shows that there are people who demand big pictures and who are willing to pay to see these big pictures in a theater where they can secure their seats in advance and enjoy a proper and dignified presentation of it without being annoyed by injudicious cutting of the film and the rush and bustle of piling into a theater in crowds that have been lined up outside for advertising purposes. They become interested in the motion picture and its possibilities and the presentation of big pictures under such auspices is stimulating to the business and therefore of constructive value."

Newspaper Opinions

"Main Street"—Warner Bros.

AMERICAN—"A palpable and entertaining 'Main Street,'" said the AMERICAN, "at six minutes of its length, is one of the most significant character studies that the screen has had in months. * * * There is engaging drama in 'Main Street,' and it is enacted with laudable perception. Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Harry Myers, Robert Gordon, Noah Beery and Louise Fazenda are among the many sterling contributors.

EVENING WORLD—Frankly, we like "Main Street" as a photoplay and really think that we did more so because of Harry Beaumont's direction, and the acting of Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Harry Myers, Noah Beery and Alan Hale than because it was written by Sinclair Lewis.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—There are many factors in the screen version of "Main Street," to recommend it as a fine picture. It starts out with greater promise than the later part of the picture fulfills, but on the whole it is well presented, beautifully acted story and has been skillfully directed to boot.

SUN—"Main Street," * * * is an admirable picture. The types are perfect. It is beautifully acted, and it follows the book to a greater extent than Sinclair Lewis had any reason to hope for. For the first half, say, the photoplay is exactly like the book, both in plot and—what is more important, of course—in spirit.

TELEGRAHAM—* * * and proved to be one of the most interesting cinema's of the season. It is not to life to life but it also has a rich vein of humor and through the story runs a very pretty romance in which Miss Florence Vidor and Monte Blue share the honors. If you want a good laugh go up to the Strand.

TRIBUNE—Why, at the end you realize that the picture has been made for residents of Gopher Prairie all over the world, and they are going to love it and say "Isn't it true to life, the way those city girls have such crazy ideas?" The cast is splendid.

WORLD—The stage version, in its shallowness, never could have approached the picturization in its completeness. Gopher Prairie stood out in gaunt relief when the passenger train, with its sardine packets of laded women, dirty hoboes and stick-fisted streetcar arrived to find the town in Sunday best. * * *

It is interesting to speculate whether the meeting of the best movie minds at the Walton on Friday could have made "Main Street" a better picture than in the present version by the Warner brothers.

Reached Between Federal Trade and Famous—Evidence Regarding First Run Bookings—Cohen On Today

The crux of the Federal Trade Commission-Famous Players case was reached late yesterday just before adjournment when a chart of bookings of first class and first run houses was offered while S. R. Kent was on the stand. The Government claimed it desired information for only the season of 1923-24 and this chart furnished booking data for several years preceding this. After much argument Commissioner Alvord decided to take the case over right and decide this morning just what contents would be admitted at this time. If he rules against certain of the evidence appearing at this stage of the proceedings Famous Players will make an effort to get it in the record later.

Sydney S. Cohen will be the chief witness today and the local hearing is expected to close on Friday after which the hearing will proceed in Philadelphia.

S. R. Kent, sales manager for Famous Players, was the chief witness during yesterday's proceedings. Kent was on hand when the hearings resumed Monday after a two weeks' recess and was finally called to the stand for a second time yesterday afternoon by Government counsel, who two weeks ago were on the point of telegraphing for him to come back from the Famous sales convention at Los Angeles to testify.

Kent explained to Government counsel following inquiries concerning Famous' new contract with exhibitors that the clause making it mandatory for the distributor to furnish a picture contracted for by an exhibitor and the release date was to be later than that mentioned in the contract, is a new contract provision which is part of the uniformity and which is in nearly all of the new contracts between distributors and exhibitors.

The witness explained that the clause in the Famous Players contract allowing that concern the right to withdraw from contract pictures designated as super-specials is a right (Continued on Page 4)

Suit Dropped

Vitagraph Discontinues $6,000,000 Action Against F. P. at Intervention of Will H. Hays

It was announced late yesterday that the $6,000,000 damage suit filed by Vitagraph, Inc., against Famous Players has been dropped at the intervention of Will H. Hays.

The suit involved charges of first run control on the part of Famous Players, with the result that Vitagraph found it impossible to break in. It was for this reason, according to the original complaint, that Vitagraph claimed its profits had dwindled away. The original papers are instances of theater control on the part of Famous Players on Broadway, New York and in other cities throughout the country.

The suit aroused considerable interest in the trade in view of the then impending investigation by the Federal Trade Commission. As a matter of fact, considerable of the charges appearing in the Vitagraph papers also appeared in the briefs filed against Famous by the Commission.

Formal notice of the discontinuance was filed yesterday in the United States District Court.

All the punch will remain, all the honesty, all the sincerity. But you will know all about the picture reviewed much more quickly than heretofore.

In addition you will find a lot of news, just as you always do in the little old daily, the "Danny" column; all about what the stars and directors are doing, and what is going on in production, and—well—take a look. And let's hear from you just how much you like it.

And best of all, you will have it delivered on Saturday morning.

The transfer of control of Allen Theatres removes all competition for Famous Players, which already operates upwards of 20 houses in the Dominion. The corporation will now direct the operation of more than 50 houses. Incidentally, Famous players is allied with Eastern Theatres, Ltd., operating the Pantages; Regal Films, Ltd., with six offices handling various make of pictures; including Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan; Famous-Lasky Film Service, distributing Paramount subjects, and other organizations.

The transaction represents the culmination of an extensive series of offers for the Allen assets. N.L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players, made his first offer for the Allen chain well over a year ago, when an amount exceeding $1,000,000 was bid. This offer was refused, it was stated, because of alleged changes in the Allen circuit, and there were several subsequent offers from Nathanson, Fox and Firt. National also entered into negotiations for the Allen assets and other interests made offers at interest rates. At the time of the offer, Robert Lieber and J. H. Von Herberg of First National visited Canada to consider purchase of the Allen houses.

Change in the policy of various theaters in respect to the competition between Capitol and Allen theatres has been keenly noticed and developments are being watched with much interest.

exercised purely upon the discretion of officials of the company after seeing a pre-view of the picture. He explained various provisions of the Famous Players contract, and gave a detailed account of the sales methods of Famous Players from the time it first was set up until shown by the various exhibitors.

Kent stated that sales of accessories, such as slides, lithographs, etc., are made at the theaters on an average of $1,000,000 annually.

Marvin Farrington showed the witness several form letters similar to others mentioned by Farringon, who had been on the stand as having been used in their territories. Kent admitted that he was familiar with the form letters inasmuch as he said are part of a concerted campaign to stimulate interest in Paramount pictures and that they were sent out to and from the theaters with which they had exchanges with his approval. These are the letters which suggest to the addressee that he or she ask the proprietor of such and such a theater why he is not running Paramount.

Kent testified that Loew through Nicholas Schick runs Paramount pictures in about 45 of his houses, 35 of which are in New York. For the New York houses he said, Loew took practically all of the "39" series and about half of the "41," all except five of last season's output for the two Loew Boston houses in Boston, 75% for the two Wisconsin houses, 85% for the Dayton and 7 for the Toledo.

The Princess and one other theater in Toledo are protected on first runs in spite of Loew, Kent stated. There, Paramount is split three ways between Loew and two other houses. He said that the Libson at Dayton is given protection on first runs, but admitted when questioned by Farringon that Libson has a contract of about 14 houses in Ohio. Tom Moore, in Washington, took 10 or 12 of the current season's output, Kent stated, and wanted a 20% split but was informed that "it couldn't be done."

Kent said that Mike Shea at Buffalo always gets the pick for his Hippodrome and Park and that Loew takes what's left. He said he had no idea if a theater in his area was running the witness if Shea wasn't an old friend of Zuko's, receiving an affirmative answer. Kent said he always had an understanding that Shea was to be taken care of.

Asked if he knew that "The Covered Wagon" was going to be shown in the theaters of the proposed Erlanger-Shubert circuit, Kent said he knew nothing about the reported Erlanger-Shubert contract but supposed that the picture would be shown in practically all the Erlanger and Shubert houses. He said that a number of Erlanger houses had contracted for "The Covered Wagon" but that the contract was not a blanket one for all the houses in the circuit.

Kent said that Loew's first-run protection is now two weeks and in some cases one, but that it used to be three. All first runs, he said, are entitled to protection of this privilege and get it but all exhibitors, according to the witness, want protection more than it is possible to allow them.

Film Standards

Developed by Motion Picture Congress—What Reservations Committee Thinks Will Help

One of the important matters brought to life as a result of the deliberations of the International Congress on Motion Picture Arts last week was the formation of a set of standards, binding both upon the producers and the authors, which, it is hoped, will guide in the further development of the motion picture.

The standards were prepared by the Committee on Resolutions, as part, if I may: "Within the short period of a generation, a new art form and medium has come into being—one that is comparable in influence to the printing press for the communication of ideas. The newest of the arts is the motion picture."

"The transmission of thought and sensation through the eye into the mind is common to all the arts, except music. The motion picture is literal, graphic art, and it has long since advanced from the stage of mere entertainment into a status where, for good or ill, it carries to all classes of all the people of the world the news, the drama and the progress of the day."

"In the motion picture we have the product, not of one mind alone, but of many minds—a composite whole, particularly as it calls for consideration in any attempt to advance from an artistic to a cultural point of view."

"Much has been said in criticism of motion pictures, and this criticism has been concerned with a wide range of interests, extending from the choice of subject matter to the inartistic treatment of the text by author, screen adapter, director, producer and exhibitor."

"Therefore, it behooves us who do creative work in music, literature, painting, sculpture, architecture, dancing, poetry and the drama, to help in the advancement of this art rather than to condemn it; to build rather than to destructive effort."

"Bound up in the motion picture is a three-fold responsibility—the responsibility of the producer, the responsibility of the author, and the responsibility of the public."

"The producers of motion pictures must recognize their responsibility to the public upon which the films exert such powerful influence. This responsibility must take cognizance of—"

1—Good taste—The best accepted standards of taste in American should be reflected on the screen.

2—Fair Play—No producer or director of motion pictures should consciously give offense to any nationality or religion.

3—Respect for Law—Entertainment reaching so many minds must reflect a respect for all the laws of the United States. Producers of screen entertainment can not allow any criticism or suggestion that the motion picture tends to undermine the fundamental respect for law which traditionally has been a characteristic of our civilization.

4—International Relations—In the realization that the motion picture has been the only universal language, producers in all countries should have due regard to the fact (A) that their own people will be appraised elsewhere as their own films present them; and to the fact (B) that the area of other countries will assume their status abroad from the manner in which foreign producers represent them. As a medium of international amity the motion picture is mightier than treaties.

5—As the most powerful form of communication, the motion picture should maintain exact standards in the representation of the facts of history, costume and normal human conduct.

6—Since the motion picture is the general film of the populace, portrayal of the strongest human situations and inevitable sordid human experiences should be accomplished with that restraint which has always been the model of good literature.

7—When a motion picture is represented as the translation of an already published work of literature or a drama which has already been produced on the stage, it should maintain, so far as is possible within the limitations of the motion picture, the original spirit and structure of the story.

8—The motion picture producer should encourage the writers of the motion drama and of novels to cooperate actively in the studio in the screen production of their works.

9—The producer should encourage any form of cooperation between authors writing directly for the screen.

"The creative works of the motion picture authors—likewise have a responsibility to the producer and to the public, and this responsibility should take cognizance of—"

1—The right and duty of authors to establish and maintain the most active cooperation with motion picture producers in the production of those works which have already been published or produced on the stage.

2—The need of authors to acquaint themselves with the art of writing directly for the screen, if they are to avail themselves of the best opportunities offered by this newest art form."

Newspaper Opinions

"The Shriek of Arably"—Allied Prod. and Dist.—Capitol

AMERICAN—For him, the Shriek is a scream, although spectators may see it only as a rearrangement of familiar situations in a new setting.

DAILY NEWS—"The Shriek of Arably" is not nearly as good a picture as the "Small Town Ideal" was. By this we mean that the satire is much less keen and the picture on the whole is not as funny. It isn't even as good as or as devastating as Buster Keaton's little two reel satire on snow pictures called "The Frozen North."

EVENING JOURNAL—Ben Turpin is knocked out at "Capitol," "Shriek of Arably" real comedy.

EVENING WORLD—Of course it is silly, sappy and absurd, but it's a great relief to one who sees as many of the alleged screen dramas as we do. There isn't a plot; the whole affair doesn't need one. But, if you enjoy laughing, take a trip to the Capitol and watch Ben's eyes and watch him ride a camel. It's worth the price, no matter what they charge.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * * the cross-eyed actor achieves some fine moments of comedy and manages to make this latest record of the strange technique of simple desert love a very funny film. Frankly, non-musical from start to finish, the story reveals the fantastic adventuring of an amateur sheik in capturing his woman, breaking her heart, spirit and bringing her to his feet to beg for more of his rough endearments.

POST—* * * * but a few comic situations degenerate into the usual slapstick and speed chasing usually ladied out by Mr. Bennett.

SUN—* * * does not always have moments when the spectator wants to roll on the floor in his mirth.

The film is somewhat bare in those artful and ingeniously funny episodes which are characteristic of Bennett—perhaps he is finding the strain of being funny is getting serious.

TELEGRAM—* * * creates many shrieks on Broadway—shrieks of laughter—for Ben has never been so funny as in this Mack Sennett burlesque of the desert film picture.

TIMES—* * * may not be the most amusing film in which the strabismic Ben Turpin has appeared, nor the best production Mack Sennett has made, but it is sufficiently hilarious to tickle the ribs of most people.

THURSDAY—* * * if you like Ben Turpin, whether he is funny or not, perhaps you will like this very long comedy. It seems to us a dreadful waste of everything to rush into a feature length picture of this sort without any story to work with in the first place.

WORLD—Regarding Mr. Turpin's comedy, we like it a little near the top, but the team work was as terrible as ever. The rest of the film was chiefly glorified by wise cracks among the subtitles and an amazingly active Ben.

GIGANTIC BUDGET

Production Cost for Coming Season $100,000-000. Figures Important in View of Gov’t’s Statistics Showing Producers’ Income

Production costs for the season of 1923-24 will mount close to $100,000,000. This is the largest sum ever expended in the industry.

These stupendous figures offer much food for thought, in the opinion of well posted film men, who, realizing the average business done, year by year, are now busy trying to figure out what profit, if any, will remain in the business when the season is over. This, based on the assumption that there will be good business throughout the coming year.

They frankly admit that if any unexpected reversals come in the general business situation that some concerns will find the situation embarrassing and difficult.

With the figures supplied, in the main by executives of important producing and distributing companies, the negative production costs for the season of 1923-24 will total about $100,000,000. This must be borne in mind, includes the more important companies and does not take in the various state right organizations of lesser standing in the business.

With the exception of five instances—First National, Fox, Goldwyn, United Artists (including Allied Producers and Distributors Corp.) and Vitagraph, the estimates furnished are authentic and are as follows:

Robe Cohen, well-known independent distributor of San Francisco is at the Astor.

Myron Zobel, editor and Frank Armer, business manager of “Screenland” are in New York to establish business offices for the publication which will be printed, as at present, on the coast.

An Innovation

You’re going to find something new; something different, hereafter, in what has popularly been called the “Golden Sunday” issue of THE FILM DAILY. Not only will you find the reviews of current productions; but they will be materially condensed, more to the point, and easier to digest. All the punch will remain, all the honesty, all the sincerity. But you will know all about the picture reviewed much more quickly than heretofore.

In addition you will find a lot of news, just as you always do in the little old daily, the “Danny” column; all about what the stars and directors are doing, and what is going on in production, and—all—take a look. And let’s hear from you just how much you like it.

And best of all, you will have it delivered on Saturday morning.

DANNY.
Bitter On Cohen

While not wishing to stoop to the mean insinuations that Sydney S. Cohen has adopted as the means to vent his spleen upon the Minnesota organization for its withdrawal from the M. P. T. O. A., we cannot permit the unhallowed, the cowardly and venal assault he has directed at the Minnesota association.

His statement, which seeks to explain Minnesota's retirement from the M. P. T. O. A., as a move prompted by First National, is a malicious attack upon the organization of independent theater owners who preferred to destroy the German community rather than sacrifice its independence by permitting the tyranny of Sydney S. Cohen.

Mr. Cohen's vicious attack on the Minnesota organization furnishes but another sample of the high handed manner in which he dares to refuse to merely accept the dictate Mr. Cohen sought to impose upon them. Loyal leaders of the organization have been unutterably sacrificed at the whim of this tyrant, seeking to perpetuate for himself the autocratic office he has created behind the cloak of prejudice and intolerance.

The charge in the indiscreet attack of Mr. Cohen, has, in the past, been influenced improperly by First National, which had no steps to thoroughly investigate the facts he infers are in his possession. As president of the national organization, it is his duty to safeguard its interests against its enemies, and to build up its component parts into one strong and independent organization, independent of outside interference. Why, if the conditions he alleged, existed, did he receive the state unit which can never amount to more than a fraction of the strength, and to build up its component parts into one strong and independent organization, independent of outside interference. Why, if the conditions he alleged, existed, did he receive the state unit which can never amount to more than a fraction of the strength, and to build up its component parts into one strong and independent organization, independent of outside interference. Why, if the conditions he alleged, existed, did he receive the state unit which can never amount to more than a fraction of the strength, and to build up its component parts into one strong and independent organization, independent of outside interference.

As a matter of the claim that First National controls the Minnesota organization, is Mr. Cohen's statement that Thos. L. Hays, our vice-president, is its dominating figure. This is an attempt to cast aspersions on the honesty, integrity and ability of our president, the man who has made and maintains our organization. Mr. Cohen's statement, which has been confirmed by the death of our organization, is an effort to destroy the rank and file of independent theater owners of the United States.

And so far as Sydney Cohen threatening to invade Minnesota to establish another paper unit to affiliate itself with his monarchy is concerned, we in Minnesota accept the challenge gladly and will welcome Sydney Cohen or any of his henchmen to come into our territory at any time.

Sydney S. Cohen's office had no comment to make on the Minnesota statement yesterday.

“Kine” Editor Guest at Lunch
Frank Tilley, editor of The Kinemetograph Weekly, ("Kine") of London, was the guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon at the Astor, arranged by Bert Adler, New York respondent for the publication.
Harry Rittenbach acted as toastmaster and brief addresses were delivered by J. Stuart Blackton, Nathan Burkam, Abe Berman, John Flinn, and others including the ed-tor of THE FILM DAILY.
Tilley in a brief address declared that English exhibitors were somewhat behind American ingenuity and doubted if the form of preparation of prints in Broadway would ever be popular in England.
He warned English producers to consider making pictures which he termed “American” as well as American producers for making “English pictures.” He said the important point was to make a good picture and nothing else mattered at all; urging producers to get more simplicity and sincerity in their work.

Institutes Suit For $95,000
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Buffalo—James C. McKinney, of Tiskiville, Pa., has filed suit against the Morriso Holding Corp., for $95, 000. In the writ of attachment, Mc-Kinney charges that in 1922 he gave subscriptions to the holding company for 500 units of stock involving $95, 000. This was done on condition, he sets forth, that the theater organiization would erect a new house on McKinney’s property. The plaintiff charges violation of contract, inasmuch as the house was never built.

value had been accomplished by Hays than bringing to an end such actions, that would endanger the virtue of the complaint. Incidentally, that this action would serve as a precedent in future matters, was pointed out as signif-ificant.

Greenwich Exhibitor Says Famous Pushed Own Product Ahead of Cosmopolitan

The Federal Trade Commission's anti-trust proceedings against Famous Players-Lasky assumed all the secrets of a hotly contested legal battle yesterday, during the examination of Fred J. Wilson, exhibitor of Lexington, Va., publisher of "Reelland Reviews," with attorneys on both sides claming for Ex-P-L's interest in a series of current phonographs at each other.

Shortly after Wilson had testified that signing up for Paramount's
"41" series he had paid higher prices for the Paramount pictures than the Cosmopolitan pictures listed in the contract, Marvin Farrington, one of the Government counsel, was questioning Wilson with regard to Paramount's distribution of its own product as compared with that of Cosmopolitan. Robert Swaine, for the respondents, jumped to his feet and accused Farrington of attempting to get into the record statements that were nothing but "propaganda," and which were unfair to Famous Players.

"I demand that Mr. Farrington's remarks be expunged from the record," exclaimed Swaine. Alvdor had to pound the table for several minutes before either Farrington or Swaine would subside.

The Government intends to show as the case goes on," explained Farrington, "that Paramount was charging much higher prices for its pictures, regardless of their merit, than for Cosmopolitan. We are going to develop the point that Paramount always gave preference to pictures over Cosmopolitan."

Swaine wanted to know why Wilson, if he had such a grudge against Famous Players, had not sought pictures from some other company when his contract for the "41" series was cancelled.

"Because I had run some of the pictures and I demanded that he be cut out as a matter of principle," I also knew that this contract would be governed by the uniform contract which was then being drawn up, and

Every Day in Every Way
Everywhere It's Breaking Records!

William Randolph Hearst, Esq., Cosmopolitan Productions,
2478 Second Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Hearst:

You will be interested to know that "Enemies of Women" established a record for business and for a long-run picture at the Roosevelt Theatre.

What is even more agreeable to us, it was a positive one hundred percent picture.

We are so gratified with its showing that we have already booked it for the Tivol, Riviera, and Central Park Theatres.

Here's hoping that "Little Old New York" will be even better.

Yours very truly,

ENEMIES of WOMEN
by Vicente Blasco Ibáñez with LIONEL BARRYMORE and ALMA RUBENS

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN" ran seven weeks at the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago, breaking all records for attendance and for length of run.

In New York it is now playing its ninth capacity week on Broadway. It is in its fifth capacity week in San Francisco, and in its tenth in Los Angeles.

In Washington, it opened Sunday to turn-away crowds at Moore's Rialto, and will play there indefinitely.

It is the year's biggest box-office sensation!

and if you want to make a statement yourself you are at liberty to do so." Swaine—"I don't want to debate the matter, or make speeches."
Moss—"That is entirely up to you."
At one point during Swaine's cross-examination, Farrington made a remark to the witness. "Don't attempt to conduct the cross-examination, Mr. Farrington," objected Swaine rather hotly. "You can ask every-

Paramount 100% for the last five years, and that shortly after he had signed for the "41"

It was a general understanding that copies were not actually approved until the pictures were running. He was then two months later, with a letter explaining that the pictures were sent because of the short notice of the cancellation, but that after these, the contracts would be cancelled as the terms of his cancellation notice.
Wilson denied the cross-examination by Swain that he had ever "slandered" Faamous Players in his "Redland Review." He said he sent Kent copies of all the issues and that if it could be shown that he had such statements would be retracted. He said Kent never replied to this and told Swaine that for this reason he objected to the latter's inspection that he had slandered Famous The witness testified that he had published a statement urging exhibitors to sign no contracts with Famous Players, and admitted so that he himself had signed a contract with Famous after the publication of his statement, but not until, he said, he was formed by the T. O. C. C. that the new uniform contract would exclude the clauses to which he objected in the old one.
Farrington on re-direct examination asked the witness to look through the copies of his tar and find the famous articles about that Swaine had referred to. Farrington also some copies of Wilson's letter before him and turning to an article which was an open letter to Will Hays, remarked "Here I think that is their sore spot."
Wilson said that the article in question was published after an exhibitor had written him enclosing a letter which had been sent to his patrons. The exhibitor wrote Wilson that he was unable to show Paramount pictures because the prices were not out of his reach, and that his patrons were receiving letters of this type, from the Paramount exchange.
"I sent an advance copy of the article to Will Hays," Wilson said, "and he wrote me that a meeting was soon to be arranged to go into the matter with a view to eliminating this practice. After hearing from Hays I discontinued publishing facsimiles of these letters. I am still waiting for some further response for Mr. Hays or for some action on this matter."

Blue Sky Optimism

And talking of millions is all right. Even when you get up into the hundred million class. But all the “blue sky” and all the optimism in the world ends somewhere. And perhaps this is a good spot to slow up in and take stock.

What about the coming season? And production costs that mount somewhere close to, or above a hundred million dollars. What about it? Yes, say the optimists, what of it? Business is fine, things are all right, and it will work out. But the grave question is, will it?

An analysis of the figures appearing in Thursday’s issue of this publication presents many interesting angles. In the first place some of the figures vouched for by companies as to their production costs for next season can be discounted. Just how much is a question. In the next place you know, as do many others, that some film companies are prone to promise much and then leave to unnecessary the question of making good those promises. But even allowing discount for this, some problems to be ironed out inevitably develop.

For instance the best year of this business to date, according to Government tax figures, was from September, 1920, to the following September, when producers, according to the tax figures, received from exhibitors a total of $120,724,000. There isn’t any blue sky about these figures. Don’t forget that. Government statistics are dry, and usually uninteresting. But they are correct. That you can bank upon.

Now then, is there anything to indicate that business will be any better next season than the 1920-21 year? If so, what is it? On the other hand some business analysts, like B. C. Forbes, Babson and others, are suggesting keeping your ear close to the ground to see what may happen. No prediction, mind you, of things going wrong—but just a warning, for the benefit of protection. So let’s assume business will be all right. But, will it be better than 1920-21? Will it be as good? Let’s assume it will. And then what? If producers and distributors figure approximately $121,000,000 for their share from the box offices of this country, what good will it do? Where will it take them with a production schedule mounting to $100,000,000? Because this hundred million does not include distribution or print cost—which, totalled, will certainly cost an additional 35 to 40 million more. You cannot escape that, try as you may. And if these figures are correct, or even approximately correct and the production costs, less discount, are anywhere near correct, then gentlemen, it would seem as if there were many things to think about. And one of them is this: what are you going to do about it?

REGARDING MISTER EXHIBITOR

Some other interesting figures develop from this analysis. For instance: according to the Government statistics during the 1920-21 season, beginning with September, the “10 per cent” admission tax on admissions showed that during that period there was spent for amusement in this country over $880,000,000. Now the Government does not segregate the various amusements, and it is impossible to ascertain exactly how much of this huge sum

came from motion picture houses. But a conservative estimate will certainly allow 75 per cent of this figure as admissions to picture houses: because it can be readily seen that admissions to legitimate theaters, vaudeville (many of such houses showing pictures, incidentally), races, fairs, carnivals, circuses, etc., would surely reach more than $300,000,000.

So, in rough figures, it might be conservatively estimated that admissions to picture houses were approximately $600,000,000.

Now then—if admissions totalled $600,000,000 and exhibitors paid for box office rental $120,000,000, what became of the balance of $480,000,000?

Some exhibitors may say that there is no way to prove that the box office business totalled $600,000,000, but regardless of the preceding estimate there is still another way to show that these figures are pretty close to being right—and that is the well known, and more or less admitted fact that film rental generally constitutes from 20 to 25 per cent of the gross of a house. It is true that some small exhibitors pay as high as 50 per cent of their intake for rental, but this is unusual, and it is also true, and unusual, that some large chains do not pay as much; but, salesmen and others, including exhibitors, agree that as a rule about 25 per cent of the gross can be figured as rental cost.

A SUBJECT FOR DISCUSSION

The result of this analysis has developed such interesting ideas and angles that THE FILM DAILY will present a series of articles dealing with distribution and production beginning in Monday's issue. It is sincerely hoped that from this forum will result some suggestions and developments which will aid in the improvement of existing conditions and bring about a saner and safer method of conducting and operating this business. Certainly it is needed. Even a casual glance at the above figures demonstrates this. The first of the series will be prepared by Alexander S. Aronson, formerly vice president and sales manager of Goldwyn, now sales manager of Transart Pictures, and will appear in Monday's issue.

A SUMMER SHOW

Educational presented a novelty a few days ago in presenting a special summer program, made up exclusively of short subjects. Just the sort of idea developed in the "Suggested Programs" found in the last Short Subject Quarterly. Very good material; very interesting; an inspiration and idea for any house big or little.

ABOUT SMOKING

Larry Urbach in the M. P. Journal, the New York regional, also takes up the cudgels in behalf of allowing smoking in theaters as a business booster.

That's good. After awhile a lot of people will see the wisdom of this move.

A NEW STAR

Hoot Gibson is so impressed over the probably future starring of the latest Gibson acquisition that he is wiring all his friends in the East of the advent, and from what he wires, he should be. Well, Hoot, here's hoping Carl signs up the latest Gibson girl.

EXPERIENCES

Henry King. Just back from Italy. Has a lot of good stories on his production experiences while "shooting" "The White Sister." One of them concerns the feeling which exists between the Fascisti and the Bolshevik inclined Italians who work as they are constantly in a row. Usually any engagement in which they appear ends in a fight. One of these fights broke up the "shooting" for several days of an important scene, but it could not be helped. According to King you can get any mob effect you want, without planning it in advance, if you employ these succors who can be guaranteed to deliver a street riot by the drop of a hat.

DANNY,
Reviews of the Newest Features

Thomas Dixon presents

“The Mark of the Beast” Producer: Thomas Dixon
Distributor: Hodkinson
As a Whole.....Very unusual story with development containing one mystery after another; has fine dramatic action and acting.
Players....All especially well suited and thoroughly capable; several roles particularly well handled; Helen Ware gives excellent characterization, also Warner Richard and Robert Ellis, Madelyn Clare and Gustav Von Seyffertiz do very well.

Type of Story—Mystery drama; conveys a tremendously sustained interest and you never know from minute to the other what will happen next; calls "a drama of the subconscious mind" and presents interesting but not always entirely comprehensive nor convincing ideas.

Box Office Angle.....A first rate number if you know they like something novel; should appeal authors to the thinking.

Exploitation.....Thomas Dixon’s picture is certainly entitled to be termed unusual, for it is all of that. The picture is decided out of the ordinary, and if you know that it is what your patrons want you can go to it on this one. First of all you might clarify the title a bit as it is doubtful if they will get any idea of what it is about from “The Mark of the Beast.” Since the story deals with a form of medical or scientific theory you might have a preview showing for the physicians of your town or community so secure they can come. If there happens to be any sort of club that is interested in a study of subconscious power, you could also enlist their support.

The picture will appeal more readily to intelligent people to whom it will undoubtedly prove interesting not only in its theory, but also in its dramatic action and acting. You can promise several excellent performances and tell them they will not be able to figure this one out prior to the end.

There isn’t very much in the way of stunt exploitation that the story would suggest, so you had better aim to interest them through readers and whatever space you can get your local editor to allow you.

Direction by....Thomas Dixon, shows fine sense of dramatic values and tells story in smooth, quick style without unnecessary detail; always carefully to the point.

Author...Thomas Dixon
Scenario by...Thomas Dixon
Cameraman...Harry Fischbeck
Photography...Excellent
Locales...York and Catskill Mountains
Length...5,988 feet

Warner Bros. present

“Main Street” Producer: Warner Bros.
Distribution: State Rights
As a Whole....When cut to moderate length, will doubtless have big appeal in big cities because of popularility of book, but small town folk may object to caricatures of Main Street types which are enormously exaggerated.

Players....Florence Vidor gives a splendid performance of the heroine. Is beautifully photographed, Monte Blue excellent. Many well known and the cast including Noah Beery, Harry Myers, Alan Hale, Louise Fazenda and others. Robert Gordon poorly cast.

Type of Story—Drama of small town with small town ideals that city bred ideals tries to make over to conform to her own way of thinking; at times rather appealing but usually quite far-fetched and unconvincing.

Box Office Angle—Many clever aids to get them in; popularity of book should prove helpful. Warners have developed a number of ideas which should help in getting them in.

Exploitation.....You'll have to cut this one. No matter what they say about it the length will kill the rest of your program and in small communities the footage will prove unsatisfying and to build up the right kind of a program you will have to cut it.

This done, it should be easy. Your crowd will want to see it, and you can use the names of the players, all of whom are well known to help get them in.

Have old fashioned lamp posts placed in front of your theater with sign posts reading ‘Main Street’. Joseph Plunkett, the Strand, is using a novel idea, that of having an old bus going about the streets inviting folks to have a free ride to “Main Street” at the Strand. Let them know Florence Vidor and Monte Blue have the principal roles, and you might readily arrange a tie-up with your local book store.

Direction by.....Harry Beaumont; has done about as well as could be expected. There is no tiresome story; too many close-ups; some good humor.

Author...Lawrence Sinclair
Scenario...Julien Josephson
Cameraman...Homer Scott and E. Dupar
Photography...Excellent
Locales...Any small town with a Main Street.
Length...8,500 feet

Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire in

“The Shrick of Araby” Producer: Mack Sennett
Distributor: Allied Prod. & Dist.
As a Whole....Plenty of laughs for those who like Turpin, slap-stick comedy and “wise-crack” sub-titles.

Stars....Turpin at his funniest in more after will make another hit with his followers; Kathryn McQuire quite pretty in some scenes.

Cast....Subordinate to stars; includes George Cooper, Ray Gray, Louis Costello.

Type of Story—A burlesque on the recent shiek pictures; furnishes good amusement.

Box Office Angle.....Should be good for any crowd unless you know they kept to Turpin and his brand of comedy; seemed to be well liked at the Capitol.

Exploitation.....There are many good stunts for you to employ in putting over Mack Sennett’s latest with Ben Turpin. First of all be sure to let them know it is a feature. Have a man dressed up to represent Sultan. They’ll be at the blank cross-eyed man so much the better — and have him parade about town on horseback just as Turpin does in the opening scene when he is advertising a picture for a theater, falls asleep and dreams the rest of the picture. If you have some of the popular shiek films let your folks know this is a burlesque on such pictures.

Another stunt would be to have an automobile full of harem girls in company with the man described above, drive around town with signs reading: “Here’s Ben Turpin and his new film. They’ll be at the blank theater on (give date).” Should you use the stunt mentioned in the above paragraph, it would attract considerable attention. Supply the right musical accompaniment and good short reels.

Direction by.....F. Richard Jones; has gotten in a good many laughs and kept the audience rather spontaneously; injected a lot of genuine comedy touches.

Author...Mack Sennett
Scenario...Allen McNeill Cameraman...Homer Scott and Bob Walters.
Photography...Excellent
Locales...Chilly on the desert.
Length...4,357 feet

“Penrod and Sam”
Producer: J. K. McDonald
As a Whole.....Delightful comedy of youth with plentiful amount of the author’s well known, but with much humor and human touches; an enjoyable picture.

Players....A fine line-up of youngsters who seem to catch the spirit of the story without appearing self-conscious; includes Ben Alexander, real Penrod, Buddy Missinger, Newton Hall and an inimitable colored duct, Joe McGrady and Gene Jackson; grown-ups of minor importance, Arthur Rockfiffe, Fellows, Gladys Brockwell, Mary Phillipin and Garth Hughes.

Type of Story—Sant’s narrative of events in the life of the young hero, Penrod Schofield; splendidly produced and a hearty entertainment.

Exploitation.....Looks like a very safe bet. “Penrod and Sam” seems to have considerably more honest to goodness juvenile comedy appeal than any of the Peardon stories that have preceded it, probably because it sticks to real kid stuff without any get-up and-go. It will please them young and old. They can’t help but like it if they are human. Your folks will glory in it because it will bring back their own youth.

The picture is one sure to be effective to family trade. You couldn’t get anything more suitable. If you are looking for a good wholesome, pleasanter entertainment don’t fail to put “Penrod and Sam” on your list.

Exploitation should occupy much of your time and effort. If you can secure the use of one of the traveling merry-go-rounds—and the owner of one might easily find more remuneration by working for you for one week than in picking up pennies for himself—it should be a good stunt to get them interested. Get some children to accompany it on a tour of the town and have it properly labeled to advertise the show. Another good stunt would be to have some ingenious boys rig up a circus and call Peardon’s cavalry, tell them it can be seen in the picture at your theater, giving the date.

Direction by.....William Beaudine. Shows a genuine appreciation of kid days—a lot that will appeal to both young and old with happy results. Have used just a little too much footage.

Author......Booth Tarkington
Scenario....Hope Loring and Lewis Mitchell Cameraman...Ray Jane and Edward Uman
Photography...Very good
Locales...The vacant lot next door to Penrod’s home.
Length...6,275 feet

W. R. GREENE
Richard Talmadge in "Through the Flames" Producer: Phil Goldstone
Distributor: State Rights
As a Whole. . . . . Has good action, a likeable star and will probably prove a satisfying number.

Star. . . . . Pleasing and usually has some new stunts for his admirers; they'll like him in this.

Cast. . . . . Charlotte Pierce, the lead; includes Maude Gypsy, Edith York, S. J. Bingham and others whose names are not given.

Type of Story. . . . Melodrama with a fireman hero who furnishes plenty of excitement and some good thrills.

Box Office Angle. . . . Good for the average crowd wherever they like melodramas.

Exploitation. . . . It isn't a big picture in the sense of production or story either, but it is a good average picture that will undoubtedly satisfy the majority of any audience. It is a very short special exploitation but you are the better judge of that and can tell from the story, it will go well enough with your particular crowd to make it worth your while going to see if you add an effort which, it depends largely upon those you cater to. If you have a meller loving crowd and know that they'd be satisfied with an exciting fire picture which will gain them some of those thrills it might be worth your while to go after them on this one.

If you want to work on this one, it might be wise to take many pictures that will interest your local fire department to help you exploit it. The story deals with a fireman and the fire department in general which shows many instances where the public hero, their lives. It should be a good bet both ways and if the department happens to be wanting recruits they should welcome the opportunity to help you and incidentally help themselves. Where Richard Talmadge is known or where he has many pictures have been shown, use his name conspicuously with the title and let them know how much to supply thrills for his admirers benefit. A trailer of the rescue stunt where he saves his mother from a burning building would undoubtedly bring them back.

Direction by . . . . Jack Nelson; has kept it down to five reels which is usually a pretty good bet especially in the picture's favor.

Gene Stratton Porter presents
"Michael O'Halloran" Producer: Gene Stratton-Porter
Distributor: Hodkinson
As a Whole. . . . . Many good touches completely hidden in mass of unnecessary detail, far-fetched situations and other sentimental bits.

Players. . . . . True Boardman, as Michael O'Halloran, a pleasing chap and capable if only they'd have given him a chance to act naturally and do natural things; a good cast but handicapped by far-fetched roles; includes Irene Rich, little Ethelwyn Irving, Charles Clary, Claire McDowell, Josie Sedgwick and William Boyd.

Type of Story. . . . Human interest theme; a sentimental yarn about a little boy, a regular polished Pollyanna with many pleasing touches but many exaggerations.

Box Office Angle. . . . Rather doubtful especially in the extreme footages presented.

Exploitation. . . . If they can see their way to re-editing this one and toning down the sentimental business that creeps in right along, "Michael O'Halloran" and his Pollyanna adventures will prove far more interesting, and reasonable, than they are here. The picture is shown of 1,600 feet for review. There usually is, and should be, a good market for worth while pictures with juvenile players since they offer a decided contrast to the customary cut and dried society stuff or eternal triangle theme. But with a sentimental child play it has to be reasonable. The things that young Michael does and thinks of are far too advanced for the mind of a young boy.

The human interest touches of the picture, a delightful rural atmosphere and child performers that do very good work, in other words the things they are asked to do, are the features of appeal. You can tell the story has to do with a boy who made a little orphan girl, a cripple, happy, and through his prayers brought her recovery, that he was the means of bringing a reunion between a man and his wife. The production will have to be cut considerably in order for you to use it to its advantage. It runs far too long now for you to use much of anything else with it.

Direction by . . . . James Lee Mahan; at the time this book was written there was no one who employed too much detail in telling story which makes picture run so long; production values not good.

Locales . . . . Mostly pretty rural locations

"The Ragged Edge" Producer: Distinctive Prod
Distributor: Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
As a Whole. . . . . Average picture that combines Oriental and South Sea atmosphere pleasingly; a fair story though not especially new.

Players. . . . . Mimi Palmeri and Alfred Lunt suitable and give satisfactory performance; Miss Palmeri attractive but looks a little too young; Mr. Lunt never beautiful; her make-up poor in close-ups; "Lunt shows an improvement over his performance in "Backbone"; his personality doesn't register as well as his looks; others Charles Fong, Wallace Erskine and George MacQuarrie.

Type of Story. . . . Romance and mystery; quite scant for the nearly seven reels accorded it; latter reels move slowly.

Box Office Angle. . . . Will probably please a majority.

Exploitation. . . . You should be able to get this over fairly well and it will probably satisfy the majority of your audience. It is a picture that combines Oriental and South Sea Island atmosphere in interesting fashion and contains a story that is somewhat out of the ordinary in its combination of situations. The interest is satisfactorily sustained throughout and there is a pleasing romance interwoven with the dramatic and mystery sequences that should make it attractive to many of your folks.

The title can be played up and exploited and competition looked for with a billboard poster showing Mimi Palmeri and Alfred Lunt against a South Sea Island background. There has been a large display going to the poster in New York from the standpoint of Miss Palmeri's one piece bathing suit. If you want to consider the familie trade angle you might look at "The Ragged Edge," and decide whether or not the touch of sex appeal in the situation dealing with hero's attitude toward his "wife in name only" would make it undesirable. It is not really offensive but some parents might rather not have their children see it. This is the first screen appearance of Miss Palmeri and on the second of Alfred Lunt so there is little drawing power in their names in the box office.

Direction by . . . . Harman Weight; has injected touches of mystery that help to sustain the interest; might have made less of sex appeal.

Author . . . . Harold MacGrath
Scenario . . . . Forrest Halsey
Cameraman . . . . Harry Fischbeck
Photography . . . . Good; some pretty two-shot shots.
Locales . . . . China and a South Sea Island
Length . . . . 6,896 feet
Adapted by Forrest Halsey from Harold MacGrath's famous novel of the South Seas. Directed by Harmon Weight.

Mimi Palmeri—

The Find of the Year!

New York critics heard she was beautiful, they saw she was beautiful and here is what they wrote:

Mail: “In addition to her unusual beauty, Miss Palmeri has the ability to act with such admirable restraint and poise as to make one eager to see her again.”

Journal: “Her work gives promise of gaining for her an enviable professional career.”

Sun and Globe: “Miss Palmeri has an eye with a melting softness which makes a gazelle seem like a hard-boiled egg.”

Telegram: “Miss Palmeri is a fortunate find; she is beautiful to look upon.”

Evening World: “Mrs. Arthur S. Friend, wife of the president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, is credited with having discovered Miss Palmeri. Her name ought to be carved alongside that of Columbus, for she surely has made a real discovery.”

“Only 38”

Producer: Paramount
Distributor: Paramount

As a Whole.... Slow moving story that lacks dramatic action; human interest element hardly prominent enough to make it score on that account.

Players... Lois Wilson miscast in role of widow of thirty-eight although she succeeds pretty well in putting it over; May McAvoy and Robert Agnew her prejudiced children; Elliot Dexter, her lover and George Fawcett appears in a few scenes.

Type of Story... Romance dealing with the love affair of a middle-aged widow whose children object to her becoming modern; is quite pleasing in places but in-between drags irritatingly.

Box Office Angle... May please in dividends but it won’t do for a general audience number.

Exploitation... This one isn’t so long so if you do chance at playing it you should be able to build up your program with good strong short reels to counteract the displeasing influence the feature may have. The majority will undoubtedly find “Only 38” too slow-moving to hold their attention.

About the most interesting angle with which to attract your patrons’ interest would be that of the woman who had been cheated of her youth. If you have any local women’s clubs that you could interest in the idea of preserving women’s right to enjoy life, even though she be the mother of grown children, they might be able to help you exploit it. Of the players the most prominent is the names of Lois Wilson, Elliot Dexter, May McAvoy and George Fawcett. If you want to dress the lobby you could use college pennants and other college paraphernalia but you’ll have to be careful not to have them think this is a college story. There is only a suggestion of college atmosphere.

Direction by... William de Mille: has used too much repetition; it makes story arbitrary and tiresome as a result; one moment the woman is convinced that she should enjoy herself and the next her children change her mind for her.

Author... A. E. Thomas
Scenario... Clara Beranger
Cameraman... Guy Wilky
Photography... Satisfactory
Locales... Mostly the interior of heroine’s home.

Length... 6,175 feet

Katherine MacDonald in

“The Lonely Road”

Producer: B. P. Schulberg

As a Whole.... Matrimonial drama with some fairly good points but isn’t more than average entertainment.

Star.... Katherine MacDonald has a role similar to several she has done previously; without spirit and makes it rather convincing.

Cast.... Orville Caldwell not the best lead; others Kathleen Kirkham, Eugenie Bessercr, Win. Conklin, Frank Rich.

Type of Story... Domestic drama; draws a good comparison between lives of two women and has some true-to-life twists.

Box Office Angle... May please a family clientele, young married folk especially.

Exploitation... One angle of the story which deals with the question of marriage versus a career for women offers a rather good twist when you might think about getting them interested and is that of the husband who neglects to take his wife into his confidence in matters outside the home as well as in. The often argued question of who should handle the money will also furnish good material for discussion if your folks like something to debate on. The theme will appeal to individuals rather than classes.

It is a matter of personal taste mostly. There are those who don’t find their entertainment in domestic dramas of this order. But for the house catering to family trade it is likely that “The Lonely Road,” will be an appropriate number. They will be interested in the problem and will have a large variety of views held it furnishes good material for argument.

Any film from which the name you might circulate throwaways with the lines: “Wives, Attention! Are you your husband’s partner or just his housekeeper.” Others reading: “Are you traveling ‘The Lonely Road.’” Follow these up with the announcement of your showing. Your local women’s clubs might like to help you put the picture over if they are sufficiently interested in the problems presented. You might put sign posts about town if you don’t infringe upon any laws, reading, “This way to the lonely road. Follow your partner to the leads.” You can have them all over the town and always pointing or directing them to your lobby giving a hint that it is an exploitation stunt for the picture.

Direction by... Victor Schertzinger; average; supplies an appropriate product and usually makes good use of material.

Author... Charles Logue
Scenario... Lois Zellner
Cameraman... Joseph Brotherton
Locales... In and around home of newly married couple.

Length... 5,112 feet

Alice Brady in

“The Snow Bride”

Producer: Paramount
Distributor: Paramount

As a Whole.... Has good dramatic value though a fairly cheery theme and occasionally quite slow moving.

Star.... Alice Brady; thoroughly capable actress. Good for role and does very good work.

Cast.... Maurice B. Flynn, lead; a suitable supporting company including Mario Majeroni, Nick Chalis, Morgan Jack Baston and others.

Type of Story... Drama of the Northwoods; told against attractive backgrounds and with some interesting situations though none of them strikingly new.

Box Office Angle... Will please those who favor strictly dramatic entertainment; not a very bright theme.

Exploitation... Alice Brady is always best suited to a story that gives her ample opportunity to display her dramatic ability and for that reason they probably selected “The Snow Bride,” as a suitable vehicle for her. The general box office value of the offering, nevertheless, does not depend particularly on whether or not the star is suited. The general public direct audience appeal that the picture itself has, or has not, that concerns the exhibitor. You will have to judge whether or not dramatic entertainments of this order usually appeal to your particular clientele. In “The Snow Bride,” you have a story that offers little outside of dramatic appeal although it is strong in this one quality. If your patrons show an inclination to disfavor themes as cheerless as this, it may not please them since there is no comic relief whatever. You might have your atmosphere to talk about, a pleasing and thoroughly capable star and a title that can be used in conjunction with a stunt such as having a girl dressed in white fur and call her “The Snow Bride.”

If your folks were pleased with Maurice “Levy” Flynn when he appeared in Fox features you might use his name as the star’s leading man. Many of the more dramatic scenes displayed in the lobby will attract and a trailer of the avalanche scene wherein the father of the girl’s death, would give promise of a thrill.

Direction by... Henry Kolker has provided splendid production and arrangement in air. Atmosphere may have speeded story up in early reels and gotten it off to better start.

Authors... Sonya Levien and Julie Webber

Scenario... Sonya Levien
Cameraman... George Webber
Photography... Usually very good; lighting occasionally too dark.
Locales... Trapping grounds of the Northwoods.

Length... 5,375 feet

Harry Carey in “Desert Driven”

Producer: P. A. Powers
Distributor: Film Booking Office

As a Whole.... Prison story that starts off fine but drifts into conventional man hunt; has much that is interesting nevertheless.

Star.... Harry Carey at his best in role of a man desiring to drive pride in doing; much better than his recent vehicles and sure to please his admirers.

Cast.... Marguerite Clayton pleasant lead; a romantic twain with Warner, Charles Le Moyne, Ashley Cooper, Dan Crimmins, Alfred Allen, and little Buddy Johnson.

Type of Story... Melodrama that has good Bits of action and a thrilling prison escape that comes early in the picture.

Box Office Angle... A good audience feature and one that goes especially big with men and boys; romantic angle for the women.

Exploitation... Exhibitors catering to an action loving clientele have probably been giving them the Carey features right along. They usually know what to expect of a Warner Carey entertainment and he seldom fails to give them a certain amount of action and thrills even though the stories provided occasionally are not what they might be. Nevertheless Carey always works hard to get his pictures over and he has a difficult time of it because Wyndham Martin’s “The Man From the Desert,” from which “Desert Driven” was adapted is a much better vehicle than the star has had recently.

You will find this a good one for your house and for the men folows play up the escaped convict idea by telling them about the daring prison break made by Carey. There is a fine thrilling scene or two in the sequence for his recapture that is threatened at every turn. For the women folks let them know that the story has some romance in it. Although Carey seems more or less out of place in love-making scenes. Let them know that the action is derived from Carey’s continual attempts to evade recapture and if you use trailers, secure a bit of the prison scene or Carey’s daring escape when Carey drags his captor, to whom he is handcuffed, on to a horse and dashes into the desert.

Direction by... Val Paul; has done good work and supplied rather good development and maintained interest rather well; might have kept it down to three reels.

Author... Wyndham Martin
Scenario... Wyndham Martin
Cameraman... Win. Thornley and Robt. DeGrasse
Photography... Very good
Locales... In and around state penitentiary.

Length... 5,850 feet

Short Subjects

"In the Days of Daniel Boone"—Universal—Plenty of Action

Type of production.. .15 episode serial

Following immediately upon the heels of "The Oregon Trail," this, the third of Universal's historical serials, deals with the troubles of the Colonials, immediately before and during the Revolutionary War. There is much of historical value in the first three chapters which were reviewed and also plenty of excitement, incorporated by means of actual historical happenings and also some fictional ones to keep the interest alert. This last idea has one drawback, however, inasmuch as the serial purports to be "Incidents of American History vividly and accurately portrayed." In exhibiting this to children as such, they are very likely to get the fictional incidents and characters mixed up with the historically accurate ones.

There is a good cast headed by Eileen Sedgwick, and Jack Mower with Ruth Royce, Albert J. Smith, Duke R. Lee and Charles Brinley in prominent roles. Duke R. Lee has been cast as young Colonel Washinton and also the villain—Simon Girty. The story and scenario are by Jefferson Moffit and William Craft and directed. The first episode gets off to a good start with the English and Colonial troops marching against an ambushed Indian force under General Braddock, and picturizing the historical episode of Braddock's defeat, in which the English troops are saved from entire annihilation by Braddock's aide-de-camp, Colonel George Washington.

Where they like historical costume plays its serial form, and where you have placed either of the preceding Universal serials of this type, you can in all probability satisfy them with "In the Days of Daniel Boone."

"In Hock"—Universal—Best One of Series

Type of production... .1 reel comedy

Neely Edwards with Bert Roach make this a very laughable reel. It is quite a bit ahead of the usual run of these comedies and Roach gets all the laughs. His facial expressions are in a class by themselves and his make-up and is also very good.

The plot isn't so much, consisting of a man's struggle to regain possession of a dress suit which has been pawned by his secretary, the reason being that they are poor. Edwards and Roach, "borrowing" the suit from the pawnbroker and leaving his "valet" as an exchange. He in turn hears the owner of the suit offer five hundred dollars for its return and then the chase begins. It is not so much the plot that makes the reel enjoyable—it's the players.

"Fresh Eggs"—Hal Roach—Pathe—Amusing Slapstick

Type of production... .1 reel comedy

This latest Paul Parrott comedy contains several laugh-provoking situations and is a bit above the average maintained usually in this series. The situations are far too small to qualify in particular part of this film is that although it is a slap-stick comedy and eggs are among the chief factors of the plot, the cartoon has been brought to a fine point, even though they are scattered in dozens on the ground and thrown around promiscuously. For which your audience will be grateful. Parrott is seen as a farm hand with scientific ideas about hens and eggs. The result obtained from his methods are astonishing to say the least.

"Shooting the Earth"—Lyman H. Howe—Educational

Type of production... .1 reel novelty

This time Lyman H. Howe has attempted in his "hodge-podge" reel to give actual views of happenings in nearly every country of the globe and in addition intersperse them with cartoon comedy touches. The subject takes in New York, Panama Canal, China, Japan, the Philippine Islands, Egypt, Scotland, Ireland, and Italy. It is a decidedly interesting way to handle an educational reel and the cartoons contain really amusing material. Even the titles savor of novelty.

Pathe Review 22—Excellent

Type of production... .1 reel magazine

Pictures of cloud formations open this issue of Pathe's Review in a subject entitled "The Ceiling O' the World." More material things are next dealt with in a bit called "Pies is Pies," which shows the contrast in the way mother makes them to the method in a pie factory. Next comes some beautiful waterfall shots taken in Yellowstone Park, and then some flashes of deer caught unawares by the camera. A thoroughly interesting short reel.

"Pathe Review" No. 24—Interesting

Type of production... .1 reel magazine

Some excellent shots of a fog-bound coast open this number of Pathe's magazine. The swirling waters with the fog cloud making them almost indistinguishable have been finely caught. A decided contrast is the next subject which is entitled "Famous Founders," and screens the process shot by the Eastern line which shows machines by manufacture. An introduction to the young ones of the Kingdom follows an interesting series of close-ups of these peculiar birds who make their home deep in a sand-tunnel. Other subjects include glimpses of the duties of a trained nurse and a Pathe color scenic bit.

The Man from Glengarry

from the story by that Great Box Office author

RALPH CONNOR

Produced by Dominion Film Co. Inc.
"Take Over Metro"
became a real race when At Lichtman, then with Famous, approached him and began talking percentage.
When Mr. Loew was asked about this yesterday he said he might have put in a word of caution on the time but that he would never repeat it about Metro today.
Cohen's ideas covered a lot of ground and many New York exhibitors that the Cameo, in his mind came as near to being a first run as "near beer does to real beer." Pictures usually get a first run at the Cameo because they can't get a date at one of the Broadway houses, he said, pointing out that the present showing of "Enemies of Women" is an exception this rule. He expressed the opinion that there should be at least four more first-run houses in the statistics in his possession the number of daily amusement seekers who come to New for entertainment, the 250,000. Cohen took a rap at the management of the first-runs, stating that there are many inferior pictures and a great many pictures of real merit denied a showing at these houses. The witness asserted that some of the proprietors of big houses on Broadway made the failure of attempting to operate smaller local theaters and added that "it doesn't matter if we operate a theater on Broadway."
He said, however, that "a men of real ability would do better with theaters on Broadway than men of little ability."
He sketched briefly the steps leading up to the organization of the M. P. T. O. scrambling of the campaign that acquired the role of a "man general and few thousand," which becomes of its imperfect organization "had the against the industry in Chicago, he was invited to attend but decided that caution was in order and remained away. About this time, he said, executors felt the necessity of getting to gether for their own protection. Exhibitors, he said, had their safety and inter-tedations from Famous Players; it was deed unfair that the exhibitors of the country should alone shoulder the extra taxes imposed during the war, and the announced by Famous Players of the purchase of the Moss Theaters in New and their intentions of expanding their theater exhibition activities throughout the country finally brought this growing exhibitor sentiment to a head.
Cohen testified that his own interest in thoutheater business was jeopardized by the policy of Famous Players, who through A. G. Whyte had informed him that if he not accept a new set of terms on price and playing dates they would be forced to build up in his theater in order to secure representation. Cohen said that Famous teaters were to meet him when Whyte told him that Famous would have to take a new set of terms that he advise such a policy as "a colossal blunder."
"I told Whyte that Famous Players was sitting on a mountain of spurious gold and that the exhibitors of the country were going to spit at them. They would cause a big explosion," Whyte replied to this prediction of Cohen's, "and destruction." At this time seems Cohen's says that he has seen him soon after. He saw Zuko, Cohen said, who told him that it was all new to him and that he would have to make an agreement and report to Cohen. Cohen said that he felt that Whyte he had not been handled in that he had known many Famous Players representatives "who have exceeded their feedback." At this conference with Zuko the latter, Cohen related, it was agreed perfect organization of their own Cohen said that he thought if he hearing that the exhibitors of the country would never be able to organize Mr. Mayer, who has been appointed for the Government, what he thought of the Cohen, explained: "The housing was not because of his control of the theaters in other cities or this buying power to get the pick of films for his New York territory, suming some 40 odd theaters. The justified that exhibitors have been the extremity of buying in blocks in order get any film at all.
Cohen's testimony then led to correspondence between himself and Zukor relative to theater complaints and the meeting between Zukor and a committee appointed by the Municipal commission to investigate this rule.
Cohen testified Zukor had never kept the pledges that the M. P. T. O. relative to the Los Angeles writers. Zukor, according to Cohen, admitted to the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. at the Municipal meeting that these pledges had not been kept. He said that the complainants were given "another chance."
In the case of the Elrae, in which Cohen statement was made, Zukor was that of Mrs. Grace Dodge. He said that he told Cohen that Mrs. Dodge might get back her theater. Cohen went to New England and upon his return reported to Cohen that he was able to do anything for Mrs. Dodge because of Black's attitude. At a still later period Cohen said that he had told him that it was shame that the Dodge matter was not settled once and for all. And Zukor agreed, stating that he intended seeing that the matter was cleared up.
he was "having terrible time with Black," and told Cohen that "Black was backed away" (Cohen). Cohen testified that the M. P. T. O.
finally settled the matter covering the Dodge and Schwartz matters.
The witness testified that he was quite known with the case of J. C. Ross, of McAlester, Okla., who has previously testi-fed before the Commerce in the United States, and that he had the matter up with Zukor who said the matter would be settled in a satisfactory way.
Cohen testified that practically all of the complaints he received were taken up with Zukor, particularly those against independent theater owners. Cohen, discussing communications from New England, said that Black had gone through New England telling exhibition house owners to Famous Players, "threatening, coercing and corrupting," telling theater owners who not sell a 20% interest in their houses that they could not build a new house would be built near them or they would be unable to get pictures from Famous Players.
He said that there were also complaints from exhibitors who felt they were not getting full from Famous Players and that also, with regard to Famous' "shockning."
The hearing was adjourned until Monday at 10.30 when Cohen will be on the stand.

Syracuse Meeting

Starts Tomorrow—Hays, Walker, Wadsworth and Peter Brady to Speak—Runs Three Days

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of New York State, Inc., will be held at the Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, beginning tomorrow and terminating on Thursday.

The Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce will be represented by about 75 exhibitors. Arrangements for transportation of exhibitors has been completed. Many leave tonight via the Albany night boat, with the schedule so arranged that the boat delegation will meet the train delegation in Albany at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. From there, the two groups will travel to Syracuse together.

The probable highlight of the convention will be the address to be given by J. H. Hays, State Senator Walker, U. S. Senator James W. Wadsworth and Peter J. Brady, of the New York Federation of Labor.

It seems quite certain that in some way during the convention, the Chicago convention will come up for discussion. It is likely that some of the state leaders, outside of New York will be present to discuss the general situation caused by the machine tactics of the Cohen group at Chicago and the recent moves of Minnesota, Michigan and North Carolina. Some are under the impression that the nucleus of a new national body will be formulated at Syracuse with New York the leader.

Marin and Sherry to Attend

N. H. Marin will go to Syracuse tomorrow to represent Distinctive at the convention. He will be joined there by W. L. Sherry.

"U" Meeting Closes

Following several night sessions, the Eastern sales conference of Universal closed yesterday at the Commodore. Productions for the fall were discussed thoroughly and sales policies mapped out.

The Golden Bubble

(By Alexander S. Aronson, Sales Manager Truart Pictures)

Those who have studied the production and distribution of motion pictures must also have given some thought to the question as to whether or not the vigorous infant will ever grow up mentally. Or whether the present economic waste will ultimately burst the golden bubble.

The production end of this industry has been surfeited with temperament, which is also another name for waste and extravagance. This starts with the ninth assistant stage manager and runs the exchange at retail assistant "props" and on up the highways and byways gather together all the big and little stars, directors and near-directors, cameramen and those who proclaim themselves to be cameramen and all the big and little technicians (7) that go to make up a studio or company unit. Most of the executive heads of producing units are laidmen to whom lighting, tempo rhythm drama, etc., mean nothing, and when told that the building of the big set which will hold 9,000 people (count 'em) is the big punch of the picture, sanction the expenditure and most times it is a good guess that it never was needed and some times it is even cut out after days have been laboriously spent in getting the effect.

Obviously the shooting at a cost of $1.25 to $4.00 a foot of upwards of 60,000 feet of negative to get five or six thousand feet that are suitable, is a great economic waste, and burden that is passed to the ultimate consumer (the audience). Further, temperament knows no commercialism—witness out of the 700 or more features produced each year less than 10% have a reason for their existence (box office value). This situation eventually creates the schism between the producing and distributing units. The attempts of the one to alienate the consuming public and of the part of the one that the other is incompetent, and in some cases both are right. There have been productions created at a cost of $200,000, and upwards that had not first run possibilities.

No matter how efficient the distribution machine, the production was doomed to a big financial loss. These conditions have not been isolated either.

It is not the purpose of this article to deal with production. It will be left to better minds. Today, every producer is working at top speed regardless of cost. Even second-hand cameras are at a premium in Hollywood. Yet these conditions must reach a point of saturation and, stars, directors, and the lesser ilk will yet receive salaries on a basis where they will stand like German marks.

If the waste in production is so great as to alarm those who look on the economic side of this industry, surely the other little brother of the rich, distribution, has nothing to be proud of either. For the basis of this article we will consider that there are about 23 natural exchange centers in the United States. Basing it on the present method of distribution and the present output of production, it seems fair to assume, having due regard for the independent distributor as defined from an old-line company, that each exchange center represents of both groups about twenty distributors. These figures will square themselves because some exchange centers have more than this, although others have less and that several of the national distribution systems have more than 23 service stations or exchanges where a few have less.

Taking the "independent" and old-line companies as a group it would appear that there are about 20 units serving 23 centers of distribution with about 700 features per year (which excludes short stuff). We have about 35 features per year per unit. To man each unit as a national distribution system, calls for an expenditure of more than $20,000, per week in the field system, calls for an expenditure of more than $20,000, per week in the field.

Therefore, we reach the conclusion that it costs in round figures only.

The Golden Bubble

not less than $25,000,000. per year to distribute the feature product of America and based on observation, these figures seem ultra-conservative.

This, together with the production and distribution and success profits as there might be in this business are passed along to the ultimate consumer.

To have attempted to write this article pointing out some of the glaring problems without offering suggestions for improvement would then say nothing that is new and unknown to the industry as a whole. It may be, that this industry which is economically wrong, is ready for the next conservative move both in production and distribution, and leaving to others who have a more intimate knowledge of production, its problems and solution. I boldly undertake to suggest that the next vital move in distribution is the elimination of the duplication that the present exchange system entails.

If the statistics of the industry were available we would likely find upwards of 2,400 men engaged in the selling of feature motion pictures to the exhibitors of America. In round figures these men represent with their salaries and expenses an expenditure of about 125. per week per man, or about 15 million dollars annually. If there are fifteen thousand motion picture theaters in the U. S. of all kinds and descriptions, the actual charge the industry makes as to the selling of each theater is $1,000 annually and the industry creates besides this a charge of $666. per theater for branch exchange overhead. This average applies to the theater that is open one night a week as the theater that operates seven days. If it were possible to reconcile these figures with seating capacities and populations to grade them in accordance therewith, it certainly would be very interesting to find out what it cost the exhibitor with a 1,000 seat house in a town of 75,000 people to shoo away most of the film salesmen that call on him daily.

It might here be stated that the merchandising of film is not kindred to any other line or product as presently conducted. Rental of film to exhibitors is distinctly a marketing problem formulated in this industry through various stages of its growth, and its method of distribution is not followed by any other commodity.

The greatest revenue derived from motion pictures comes from first city and first zone runs. The revenue that comes from circulation is admittedly smaller. As presently conducted, the worthwhile pictures are heralded and press agented long in advance to the foremost exhibitors who represent the buying power that the distributor is anxious to reach. The methods used vary somewhat but come under the following heads: national advertising, bill posting, trade papers, broadsides, the mails, telegrams, ballyhoo stunts, all directed to create publicity and bring to the notice of the prominent exhibitor the individual picture or product.

This largely results in the exhibitor knowing of the individual picture and its merits long before the salesman calls and in these instances the selling resolves itself into whether the exhibitor wants the particular product or not. Price is secondary. In other words, the selling is done before the salesman arrives. The lesser or small-town exhibitor takes his cue from what the prominent or big town exhibitor runs and bases his payment for the individual picture on its success in his local community or key showing. And to a lesser degree, he, too, is sold on the individual picture before the salesman calls on him.

It is intended to bring out that selling is not done by salesmen. Most of their functioning consists of price-haggling, an unthinkable procedure in this day and age which also proves that this is a unique industry.

That great duplication of effort in any industry is an economic waste has often been proven, and the present method of motion picture distribution reeks with duplication. While others may disagree, the writer is firmly convinced that the ideal and yet practical method of distribution and price stabilization must come from some method of operation that will have some semblance to that which is hereinafter stated:

1.—That the traveling salesman, insofar as film distribution is concerned, be abolished, and that the exhibitor come in to each exchange center to contract for his film supply.

2.—That the United States be zoned off into 23 exchange centers, more or less.

3.—That each exchange center to have two or three “union exchanges” to house all of the product distributed in the zone.

4.—That each “union exchange” be in charge of an executive employed by all of the companies distributing through the exchange and be paid by them.

5.—That in each “union exchange” the distributors are to have one or more floormen whose duty will be that of selling to visiting exhibitors the product of the distributor he or they represent.

6.—All manual labor and clerical work including shipping, inspecting, etc., being a union or community matter will be paid for by each distributor as accounting research will determine.

7.—Each “union exchange” will establish a rating board composed of exhibitors and film representatives who will ascertain the possibilities of each theater served through it for the purpose of setting up a percentage plan of booking pictures, thereby doing away with the constant problem of the exhibitor and exchange as to price.

Under this plan, price of film will become standardized. Each theater will, under this plan, have a standard percentage rating determined through the local rating board and himself, and in this way giving to both the theater and producer its just due. Under this plan controlled chain theaters would pay their just proportion of film rentals and not saddles the additional film rental on highly competitive points.

In connection with the above point it might be well to here mention that a large number of the key centers of the U. S. are controlled by combinations in consequence of which every small community exhibitor can attribute a large proportion of increased film rental charged to him as being handed down because of the inability of the distributor to secure from many first run exhibitors his legitimate revenue.

Under the “union exchange” plan the cost of distribution of motion pictures in the United States would likely be reduced upwards of $15,000,000 a year. The standardization of distribution with saner principles back of production and a more equitable distribution of the film rentals must in the nature of things create a lesser price for the product and it may be that pictures will yet go back to be a poorman’s amusement.

Otherwise the industry is slowly driving away the mass audience, and when the price of admission to picture theaters becomes a burden to the mass, the golden bubble must burst.

There are many things herein that may be revolutionary in thought. But this industry needs a revolution.

London—The case of Goldwyn, Ltd., against Stoll Films has been terminated after a six days' hearing in the English courts. Stoll's decision to proceed with the Goldwyn film distribution system has caused considerable friction in the English courts. The case, which will be decided by the court, will set a precedent that will be closely watched by the film industry.

Syracus Convention May Result in New Nat'l Exhibitor Move
Stefess of Minnesota and Richey of Michigan to Attend New York Meeting—Their Presence Considered Significant—Local Delegation Leaves by Boat and Train
There seems to be a definite impression in New York that the annual convention of the M. P. T. The impression prevails that national exhibitor problems and organization will be touched upon.

Sees A Menace

and 5100 1/2 Street. The witness said that no matter how good a theater could be built above 51st Street in the neighborhood of 53rd, it would be dwarfed by the patrons that would be enjoyed at 46th and Broadway." I would like to own a theater in 1924 and 1925," said Cohen, "but not today. In mentioning the possible few theater sites that might be obtained for the new first-class theaters Cohen suggested that it might be possible to purchase the Fulton and the Goyert, "but you might as well go through a pump to even look at the price."

Swaine asked Cohen if First National's sub-franchise selling policy did not have a tendency to generally raise the price of all pictures, and if the policy inaugurated by First National was not aimed at the output of that company in theaters to the exclusion of others.

The witness replied that this may be true, but it was not in First National's intention, but that "conditions would have been worse for theater owners of the country if First National had not come into the field."

It was explained that he believed that the original First National idea was a good one, but in that the late policy of the company did not meet with his whole-hearted approval. He admitted that the complaints received by the M. P.

T. O. from exhibitors were not confined to Famous, and said that he had had a large number of conversations with the company.

"I believe that Mr. Zoruk and Mr. Kent sincerely tricked to cooperate and help in adjusting these complaints," said Cohen, who explained that one of the difficulties in straightening out complaints against

First National was the fact that the company did only with members of the M. P. T. O. who were

First National franchise holders.

Cohen said some smaller houses were about 3,000 First National sub-franchise holders, but that he had never been able to trace more than about 300. He said that at one time J.

D. Williams, then with First National, offered him five sub-franchises and told him he could write his own criticism. Cohen denied the offer.

Cohen said he didn't think First National had any set prices on their product, but sold it according to the willingness of the individual exhibitor to pay.

Swaine asked the witness if First National's policy would not, if fully carried out, have resulted in the cut-out productions of other companies.

Cohen replied that he knew of First National sub-franchise holders who also run pictures of other companies.

"Undoubtedly," returned Swaine.

"They haven't yet put over their 52 yard policy."

A witness direct from the floor of several

M. P. T. O. conventions that the organization was getting fine adjustments from Famous Players caused Cohen to say, "Yes, I heard of that.

Sees A Menace

Cohen stated, but expressed the opinion that he had been assured by sources unfriendly to Zukor and himself. Swaine suggested that perhaps the situation resulted from the fact that Zukor was temperamental and the situation was a result of the exhibitors' difficulties.

"No, I don't think so," replied Cohen. "In my opinion the average exhibitor is not a temperamental man. Exhibitors are just plain, very, very people."

When Swaine asked the witness if he had customarily sold pictures to them, Cohen said he had never sold a picture to them before they were made by Famous Players as well as other companies. Cohen had stated that if he had been asked if he was a customarily a sell the crop before the seed is planted. Block booking was employed by other companies as well as Famous Players, the witness admitted.

The tenor of the cross-examination was designed to indicate that the methods of selling, theater acquisition, and other practices concerning pictures were, in effect, the same as those employed by Famous Players, and find a parallel in the practices of other producing and distributing organizations.

Discussing the first-run situation in Broadway, Cohen said that the Park theater at Columbia Circle would undoubtedly be a first-class first-run for Copperplast pictures, and would be surrounded with tone.

Cohen said that the M. P. T. O. has a membership of about 10,000. Sketching the growth of that organization, he said that at the time of the Cleveland convention there were about 500 members, $5,000 when the Minneapolis convention rolled round and 10,000 by the time the convention was held at Washington. There are in excess of 16,000 pictures in the country, he said, and the organization is now estimated that about two-thirds of the exhibitors of the country are members of the M. P. T. O. Cohen also stated that the organization is now providing films to over 200 theaters and that these are not all paid-up memberships, but said that the exhibitors now pay direct to the state organization which sends its quota to national headquarters of the organization.

Cohen said that the Capitol is generally recognized by the exhibitors throughout the country as being the how window for Goldwyn, and that Strand is a 95% First National house, while the Kiso and Rivoli are the Famous Players show windows.

He admitted that 42 complaints for Famous Players in 1920 and 3 years was not many for Famous Players. Swaine at this point said that Famous sells pictures to 8000 theaters in the country, and that the complaints of such a number was numerically small, the question of premiums relative to these complaints as very important. He said that the complaints out of such a number was numerically small, the question of premiums relative to these complaints as being very important. He said that he had received a letter from Mr. S. S. Black, who had asked him if he had been wrong about the situation with Famous Players.

Cohen stated, for the reason-able figure stipulated, and shortly afterward brought checks covering both the Schwartz and Dodge matters. Cohen said that the M. P. T. O. advanced Mrs. Dodge sums in excess of the check from Famous Players, of which she received the greater portion.

Names of several dozen exhibitors throughout the country who had written in to the M. P. T. O. with various complaints against Famous Players, were read into the record from files of the organization furnished by the Government by Cohen, in order that these disgruntled exhibitors may be gotten in touch with and given an opportunity to air their grievances during the hearing. Cohen pointed out that a number of these complaints had been satisfactorily settled by Famous, and that attempts had been made to settle others.

Asked if he had received any salary as president of the M. P. T. O., Cohen replied that he had been voted $85,000 for his services for the past three years, but has received none of this, and so far has served without salary. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, was on the stand for a short while and identified a report prepared by Young & Co., following several conferences between himself and Alfred S. Black. whereby the acquisition of a chain of theaters in towns of around 50,000 population. He stated that the idea of acquiring a chain had been in the back of his head for several years, and that when Black was in his office at one time he suggested the idea to him, immediately arousing his interest to the point of attempting to secure financial backing for such a proposition. The report, which was temporarily withheld from the record pending the establishment by the Government of evidence that will link Famous Players with the Black interests, was prepared that the proposition might be carefully laid before financial interests, Shallenberger testified.

He said that Black later told him of a conference with Marcus Loew, on the subject, at which the latter had expressed interest in the proposition if it could be linked with a good distributing company. Shallenberger said that the proposed corporation was never formed.

Cohen will again be on the stand for cross-examination today, and will go into the various complaints that he received as president of Famous Players.

Van Dyke At Odds With Edison

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Murray professor of English literature at Princeton in addressing the Conference on British and American Professors of English at Columbia took exception to Thomas A. Edison's statement regarding the educational value of films. Van Dyke thinks the education of the future generations will continue through study by books and not through the visual appeal of motion pictures.

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice Tierney has dismissed a suit of Mrs. Ruby Graves Locklear, widow of Lieut. Orman Locklear, the aviator who was killed making a film for Fox, against the Fox Companys for $50,000. The court ruled that Mrs. Locklear had not set forth in her complaint with sufficient definiteness of the ground upon which she bases her claim, but permitted her to file a new complaint.

The complaint alleges that Lieut. Locklear made a contract with the William Fox Vaudeville Corp. for $1,809 a week to do aerial stunts with Miss Alice McDonald and substantially $1,236 with Lieut. Milton Elliott, who was killed with Lieut. Locklear. She alleges that in order to win public attendance at theatres where the picture, "The Sky, Highwayman," was shown, Fox agreed to divide 10% of the profits with the families of the two aviators. Mrs. Locklear alleges that the profits have been $1,800,000, and that her share is $30,000, and sues for it.

Allen Rock has sued Tiffany Prod. in the Supreme Court for $53,000. He alleges he was engaged in 1920 as general manager until a contract with Mae Murray and Robert Z. Leonard for the pictures "Peacock Alley," "Fascination," "Broadway Rose" and "Jazmania" was completed and for further pictures if contracted for. He alleges that "The French Doll" and "Fashion Show" were arranged for, and that he was to get $250 a week and 25% of the stock. He says he performed the service from May 10 to July 10, 1920, and got only $800 on account, and that M. H. Hoffman was then appointed to supersede him. He contends that the value of the quarter interest in the stock is $500,000, and asks $26,450 for unpaid salary.

A jury in the City Court gave a verdict for $1,809 against Vera McCord in a suit of Howard Harron, a San Francisco lawyer. He alleges that he appointed Miss McCord in a suit against one Perine and earned $1,500. Miss McCord contends that she hired the plaintiff on a contingent basis, to get possession of the film, "Mona, Spirit of the Heights," and that if she got the film and it was sold, the lawyer would receive $5,000. She says that the film has not been sold and that nothing is due.

Bernard A. Rosenberg has filed suit in the Supreme Court against Allianc Film Corp. and the American Releasing Corp. for $5,000 on a note executed by Harley Knoles and delivered to the defendant. American Releasing alleges that it had no interest in the transaction, got nothing from it, and had no power to endorse the note.

In a suit of Antonia Sawyer against the Joan Film Sales Co. Inc. to recover for rooms on the 18th floor of Aeolian Hall a default judgment for $1,236 has been filed in the City Court.

A default judgment for $420 has been filed in the Supreme Court against the Freepoint Theatre Corp. by the Independent Movie Supply Co. for a balance due.

Don't Expect Slump

From Pittsburgh comes a report of a steady increase in play dates for the summer, indicating that more exhibitors are planning to stay open. Chicago states succinctly that there will be more theatres remaining open this summer than last year, and expects them to remain open.

The same optimistic note is sounded throughout the entire East and in some portions of the South. Charlotte, N. C., reports: "We are not affected very much through the closing of theatres during the summer months except in the very small towns in the extreme southern portion of South Carolina. In the mountains of North Carolina there will be at least 15 more theatres opened during the summer."

Eastern Pennsylvania, free from the coal strike which persisted throughout the summer of last year, is expecting 165 theatres, which closed their doors last year, to remain open during the coming hot weather, each on an average of three days a week. This means 315 more play dates in that territory.

Seattle sees no greater number of theatres open during the summer, but limits the closings to those houses in the very small towns of less than 500 population. In all other cities and towns exhibitors are optimistic. The crops in the Eastern part of Washington are better than in 1922. In San Francisco, a slight falling off in theatre attendance is expected during the vacation season. This is in San Francisco and Oakland where the change in temperature is negligible. An added factor against increased attendance, which is growing this summer more serious this year, is the after-dinner riding. However, approximately 100 play dates will be added to the summer movie by the opening of airshows and resort theatres in this territory. Summer will find conditions in Oregon practically the same as last year.

Certain sections of the Middle West are more sanguine than the East in their forecast of the strength of summer patronage. A great many societies have enjoyed a late spring, and this proved a boon for exhibitors, who have reported an unusually prosperous month of May, but months of July and August are looked forward to with apprehension. Plentiful rainfall and favorable market conditions forecast good crops but it is not until the fall that the money will be in circulation.

In explaining why Omaha will experience poorer business this summer, the report reads: "The majority of our territory is a farming country and the past failure of last year draimed the resources of the majority of farmers, with the result that they will be hard pressed for money until their next crop returns, which will come in this fall."

This, and the habit of working in the fields until nine o'clock at night, causing fewer trips to town, will be the cause of fewer summer theatres in Nebraska. The Oklahoma report is substantially the same.

Kansas City reports: "At the present time conditions for this summer are very good. The farmers have been blessed with considerable rainfall which is the indication of prosperity in this territory. We believe this summer will not be anywhere as bad as last in respect to a slump in business."

St. Louis: "Roughly, 150 more play dates per week in our territory compared with last year."

Denver: "From the exhibitors' standpoint, the summer period looks black but the majority are optimistic with respect to the fall season." The harvesting of the season's crop will bring back prosperity, states the report.

Cincinnati: "If we do not have an extremely bad summer as far as weather is concerned, we believe, on account of industrial conditions having improved in a great many sections in the territory, we will have much better summer business than we had last year."

Salt Lake City: "There has been nothing to indicate better summer business. However, all exhibitors seem to be optimistic for the winter there is nothing to indicate the contrary."

Minneapolis: "Indications are that there will not be any more theatres remaining open this summer than last year."

Chicago: "After a thorough investigation, we believe there will be more theatres remaining open this summer than last year."

The conditions in Canada will be approximately the same, and there, like the Middle West, the prospects for a big fall crop, is making the exhibitor optimistic for the fall season.

Rothchild Strengthens Position in Frisco By Closing for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Output
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
San Francisco—The contemplated date between Herbert Rothchild and the West Coast Theaters, Inc., may never materialize because the position of the Rothchild theaters has now been strengthened with the acquisition of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

James R. Grainger, en route to the East, stopped here and sold Rothchild his organization’s entire series for this year. With the Paramount product which Rothchild already has for the Imperial, Portola, Granada, and California, his position is considered sufficiently strong by many to evacuate the need for a tie-up with any other organization.

At Broadway Theaters
Capitol
The Capitol orchestra renders “Raymond” and “Capitol March” as the opening musical number. A Hodger Podge, Jr., Mrs. Higgs, is next, followed by “Newfoundland Impressions,” with the ballet corps and soloists.
The magazine is then screened just before Ernest Lecuona, Cuban pianist, makes his debut. He revives three selections: “Daughters of the Rich,” is the feature, after which comes an Interlude, “Parade of the Working Soldiers,” “The Covered Publican,” an Aesop Film Fable and a closing selection on the organ.

Rialto
At this theater the overture is a selection from “Garmen.” The orchestra then plays the now famous “Rienstock’s Classical Dances.”
The next numbers comprise “Your Eyes Have Told Me So,” by Gladys Rice, soprano, and the feature, attraction, “The Woman
With Four Faces,” starring Betty Compson,
C. Sharpe-Minor at the Wurlitzer (“American Fare,” A) and Pol “Tuttle” in “Near Nerve” are the last two numbers on the bill.

At the Rialto this week consists of the overture “Golata,” Symphonized House Tunes, “The Sweetest Story Ever Told,” the Pictorial News, Martha Graham, dance in “Oriental,” Dorothy Davenport in “The Law of the Lawless,” and a shadow song from “Dinora,” by Helen Sherman, coloratura soprano, “Hold Tight,” an Educational comedy closes the performance.

At Other Houses
“Black Shadows” is playing the Broadway this week, while the Cameo continues to house ен “Shriek of Araby” and “The Shriek of Araby” are the features at the Brooklyn Strand, while the Court Street’s “Oberworked Wagon” is still at the Criterion. The

Mrs. Wallace Reid

took San Francisco by storm when her sensational photodramatic drug expose opened at Ackerman & Harris' Century Theatre on June 9th for a 4-weeks' run. The San Francisco Examiner said it was "the most important motion picture ever made." The Call & Post said it's "in a class by itself" and that "it registers overwhelmingly." The Bulletin said: "Hold the attention from first to last." The Chronicle said: "finely produced . . . good entertainment."

The thundering San Francisco opening is just the beginning. Watch for the oceans of praise it will receive when it opens in Los Angeles, at Sid Grauman's Million-Dollar Theatre; watch for the tremendous ovation it gets at its gigantic Chicago opening; watch for the colossal furore it makes when it opens at the Lyric, New York, on June 27th—and, most important of all, make application NOW to your nearest F. B. O. Exchange for an engagement at YOUR theatre of the photodrama that will stagger the nation—

"HUMAN WRECKAGE" Hearing Ends Here

During the discussion of several complaints that reached the office of Cohen of Alfred S. Black's activities, Cohen said that "Black had a mind of his own and used same for purposes of his own." Yes, he was; and Cohen and Kent were continually trying to check Black, he was making so many blunders.

Of the complaints taken up, Cohen admitted that some of them had been satisfactorily settled. He was, in some cases, of the opinion that Cohen's activities, both in and out of the theaters, were needed to the public. Cohen said that the chief of the department was to be congratulated on the fact that the complaints were being settled satisfactorily.

Most of the complaints were from the New England territory, where Cohen's activities caused considerable bitterness on the part of independent theater owners, and from the South where exhibitors complained of the tactics of the Southern Exchanges.

Cohen said that Southern exhibitors viewed Lynch as "an overpowering monster, a man who could walk into a town and obtain a majority interest in the local theater by putting up a penny. He was great and feared, and while he was not different from the average man, he was great and feared. In the case of the majority of the small exhibitors, he was too powerful to deny that they were all-powerful, or to do anything that would allow the fear in which he was held by exhibitors to grow.

The witness expressed the belief that his organization had received only a very few complaints from exhibitors who felt that they had a grievance against Famous Players, because of the fear of reprisals by Famous if they were to air their grievances.

Of the complaints that were taken up, Swaine would state the facts in connection with it as he saw them. He said that the practice of some companies, asking Cohen if the facts were correct, was wrong. In most cases Cohen would state that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted, but in several instances he said that his information had been different. He said that the information was subject to certain changes. In the case of H. H. Jackson, of Columbia, Tenn., Swaine said the company's record showed that Jackson had been accused of "slacking". In the case of another company, Swaine said that the facts were correct. In these cases Cohen would state that the matter had been satisfactorily adjusted, but in several instances he said that his information was subject to certain changes.

A new theater was opened up by someone not connected with Famous, the new exhibitor was given Paramount service, which was denied Jackson. Cohen said he understood that Jackson had been treated very seriously.

Newspaper Opinions

"Daughters of the Rich"—Lichtman Corp.—Capitol

AMERICAN—Here is a picture that goes back to the dear old days of intrigue with intrigue. "Daughters of the Rich" is distinctly out of the present run of film. What it lacked in realism, it more than made up for in its imaginative dimensions.

DAILY NEWS—Miriam Cooper has succeeded best in her pictures in a phase of French life. Here is the audience picture, her first, skillfully photographed, wallowing in luxury. Hundreds of thousands of the world belong to it, be entertained by it. This makes the fact that we dislike it all the more quite beside the point.

EVENING JOURNAL— holds the attention. Its development is not along the lines of the obvious and it possesses a certain richness of texture that is to Gassner's credit.

EVENING WORLD—Frankly, we liked "Daughters of the Rich,"  the picture, with its long list of capable screen players, was most decidedly interesting. As in all of Gassner's productions, great attention has been paid to detail and photography and the results along the latter lines are very soothing to the eye.

HERALD— a tedious affair, entitled "Daughters of the Rich," which was produced in the cheap manner honed to the box office angle.  The direction of Gassner is sometimes poor, but the shallowness and unreality of the story is too obvious to be hidden behind psychological draperies.

MAIL—On the whole the amount invested in production, "Daughters of the Rich" is just about at the head of the list and should prove a good producer for exhibitors in the provinces. No expense has been spared and the inevitable result is a film devoid of any meaning, played in the same manner, as a tear and comedy stock company would do "Camille." The spectator leaves the theater with the sensation he has come in consuming a box of bonbons.

MORNING TELEGRAPH— slowed every dramatic sequence which may befall a daughter, the pitch of interest around was hardly sufficient to constitute the affair a success. "Daughters of the Rich" are fortunately elopemented by an excellent cast

POST—All the old time worn devices are there.

SUN—The picture begins very well, holding the interest through the early part vigorously, but presently is overcome by an attack of perversity. Ethel Shannon, a new starring shot with promising, and Stuart Holmes, Gaston Glass and Miriam Cooper are other saving graces.

 TELEGRAM— is an absorbing story, lavishly mounted and entertainingly told.

TRIBUNE—Such nice people as Gaston Glass, Stuart Holmes and Truly Shattuck acted with ardor worthy of a better cause. Miriam Cooper is nice and pretty and sincere, too, but the stuff she has to deal with are old at least a decade ago. The other young women who misbehaved in the picture are Ethel Shannon and Ruth Clifford. Louis Wolheim is the Rialto, and it is a Preferred Picture, though not a masterful one.

WORLD—"Daughters of the Rich" in this form is true to the generally employed formula.  It has a milk bath scene, several hand-carved beds, an American man and married off by a heartless mother to a pugnacious French Duke, and a young Yankee in the background who appears losing the heroess against a sunset as the curtains drop. It is just another can of the same.

 TIMES—Elaborate sets and dresses together with elaborations in the story.  It is not a production to take too seriously, but if approached in a nonchalant mood, with an eye to photography and fashions, beauty and complications, one can retreat to the lower feeling that one had enjoyed the entertainment.

"The Woman With Four Faces"—F. P. L.—Rialto

AMERICAN—Each scene is filled with action, and the whole should have been divided into separate parts, for each part runs in a different manner.

DAILY NEWS—Except for the parts which are hard to swallow, this picture will probably entertain you. It moves quickly and has a real thrill when the convict escapes from a police box by pulling a place where a place descends, dragging a ladder.

EVENING JOURNAL—Miss Compton at her best in new film, "The Woman With Four Faces." Interesting picture.

EVENING WORLD— contains about everything that a producer could contain, yet it is so splendidly handled by Sir Gerald in Compton, it is hard to believe that it doesn't seem to be in the ten-twenty-thirty class at all.

MAIL— plays the part of a crook and does it admirably. Any success the film may have will be due to her excellent acting.

SUN—This is a picture which triumphs.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It gets one and holds one by the sheer force of suspense, by the power of curiosity. Written loosely and rather amaterously, with several impossible situations and a trail or two which leads nowhere in particular, the piece nevertheless holds the attention of its audience.

POST— Well told and directed.  over its impossibilities, each scene being so well and briskly put together that one is apt to overlook the fact that the whole chain of events ads considerably.

TELEGRAM— proved to be a deeply thrilling picture at the same time initial production at its premiere at the Rialto Theatre is melodramatic, yet Breon's handling of his theme and the acting by the players are debt and reserved.

TIMES—The sets are quite interesting and the photography is good. One might almost say that there are some impossible situations in the story. Richard Dix is easy in his part and Miss Compton seems to have a lot of fun making faces and being saucy.

TRIBUNE—Miss Compton is very good as the crook. Nobody on the screen is quite as convincing as Miss Compton in these roles. Richard Dix is fine and upright as the District Attorney and George Fawcett is as good as ever as Judge Westcott.

 TRIBUNE—Such nice people as Gaston Glass, Stuart Holmes and Truly Shattuck acted with ardor worthy of a better cause. Miriam Cooper is nice and pretty and sincere, too, but the stuff she has to deal with are old at least a decade ago. The other young women who misbehaved in the picture are Ethel Shannon and Ruth Clifford. Louis Wolheim is the Rialto, and it is a Preferred Picture, though not a masterful one.

WORLD—"Daughters of the Rich" in this form is true to the generally employed formula.  It has a milk bath scene, several hand-carved beds, an American man and married off by a heartless mother to a pugnacious French Duke, and a young Yankee in the background who appears losing the heroess against a sunset as the curtains drop. Fear Unfounded
Texas Statute Against Credit Organizations Not Expected to Affect Film Arbitration
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Dallas—Speaking of the new arbitration system and F. I. L. M. Clubs, the M. P. JOURNAL says editorially:
"Each case is a unit in itself. Even before a Film Club was well under way here and was functioning effectively, but course there was no question of the Texas law and the club disbanded. At that time the Attorney General was willing to issue a charter for the club with a guarantee of its activities, and was ready to be account-ably held. but which, nevertheless, illegal in Texas. At that time the attorney for the film exchanges advised against continued operation.
"Now the plan is somewhat different, the operation of the scheme being a part of the contract between the exhibitor and the Distributor. It is hoped that this contract feature will enable the plan to be legally adopted, and in an effort to fill this plan, lawyers have been consulting with officials in Austin.
Definite information as to the outcome of these conferences are not available, but probably will be next week.

It was learned here yesterday that what S. G. Howell, editor of the Dallas Motion Picture Journal has talked to is a Texas statute aimed at credit organizations and the practice of price fixing. One man familiar with the situation expressed the thought that the Texas law would not affect the workings of the arbitration board in any way since it is not under that plan, price fixing was not a part of F. I. L. M. Club's work.
The opinion was offered that the M. P.
Journal had written its editorial under the impression that the Hoy system, although Charles Hoy had never established a branch there.

It was stated that the possible illegal angles of such a body had been thoroughly gone into before it had been placed in operation.

Attachment Against Valentino
An attachment for $48,000 was served on Rudolph Valentino by Arthur B. Graham yesterday and a deputy sheriff served as an order against an uptown branch of the National City Bank where it is believed about $60, on is deposit. It is not yet known whether the account is held by Valentino or his wife. Graham who has represented Valentino in the latter's fight with Famous Players services are worth $650,000 of which he has secured $20,000. The remainder including $3,925 for excences is claimed. Graham says he

New Copyright Rule
Washington—Refusing to grant a writ of certiorari last week, under which case brought by Isaac Silverman against the Picture Producers Corp., for an injunction to prevent intrusion of copyright in the case of the picturization of the novel "At the Mercy of Tiberius" would have been reviewed, the United States Supreme Court, in effect, served notice that only such copyright cases as plaintly showed a problem which has not heretofore been brought up would be heard.

In the case at question, all rights except that of publication of the novel were assigned, during the period of new-revised copyright, to Public Health Films, under which assignment Silverman claimed to be the only legal owner of the privilege of dramatizing the story. In 1921, Silverman obtained an injunction against Sunrise, restraining them from exhibiting the film, "The Price of Silence," on the ground that the picture told substantially the story of "At the Mercy of Tiberius." The injunction, originally temporary, was later made perma-

Dinner Closes Convention
(by DANNY)
Syracuse—William Brandy, organizer of the T. O. C. C. of New York was elected president of the M.
P. T. O. of New York State at the Syracuse convention yesterday. Sam Benneman of Chicago and Elwood and Charles Hayman, treasurer. Jules Michaels of the Buffalo chapter was named chairman of the executive committee.

The meeting closed last night with a dinner at the Onondaga at which Will H. Hays, Marcus Loew and others delivered addresses. The New Yorkers here, he said, worked by a business-like method of procedure. One of the outstanding features was that not a resolution was passed.
Louis F. Blumenthal of New York was the first speaker on the floor yesterday. He discussed the general situation with its bearing on the book that exhibitors must secure lower prices on film. He attacked the practice of forcing exhibitors to buy product unseen and at one point took a slam at the sub-first of First National. He called it unfair and asked that a committee be appointed to take up the matter of adjustments.
Blumenthal also stated that the practice of exchanges interchangeinformation relative to prices should be done away with.

Waste in distribution and the excessive of features were two additional points touched upon by Blumenthal.
He said he had been given to understand that rentals would be higher than ever in the fall and urged the appointment of a committee representing the M. P. T. O. to meet with Will
H. Hays regarding this matter.

The question of film rentals played a prominent part in the discussions.
John Michael followed Blumenthal and when he was given the floor touched upon the same subject. He said something should be done to replace the distributing overhead so that rentals might be cut. He added that the Hays office needed an exhibitor organization to work with as much as the producers needed an organization among themselves. Michaels took a general slap at other conventions where, he said, "too much resolution had been done."

When Davis of Albany spoke he made the interesting assertion that, after an expert investigation of the rental situation, he had discovered that exhibitors paid from 55 to 83 3/4% of their gross for rentals. He char-acertified the average exhibitors as too emotional and said as a result of their own dealings, he knew instances where exhibitors had made a very small percentage of profit on large investments. He urged that exhibitors by persuading and driving the wisdom of keeping a careful set of books.

W. A. Dillon of Ithaca then spoke and, like the others, touched on the rental situation. Complete, he said, was necessary among exhibitors so that they can jointly effect ways and means of saving money. He said at present most exhibitors don't know how much it costs them to run their own business.

In the afternoon, State Senator James J. Walker delivered one of his typical Walker addresses. He said:

"Your business needs business men. Regarding the national exhibitor organization, I say that not only might a new deck of cards be dealt, but there must be a new dealer as well. What had been done can be done again. There can be developed an effective national exhibitor organization."

After Brandt was elected, he commented on the talks made by Rudolph Valentino on picture matters in the various dance halls throughout the country.

Charles L. O'Reilly, the former president, was not present because of the severe illness of his wife. A dancer was thrown midst the New York delegation when word was received from New York that Samuel Peyser, one of the prominent T. O. C. C. members who lived in Staten Island and died yesterday morning, following a severe illness.

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice Delahanty has denied the application brought forward by Alexander Gaden and Charles Hanna, to bring forward on the court calendar, the trial of the suit the picture was entitled against Selwyn & Co. The suit was brought by Gaden and Hanna, who claim that that amount is due them for negotiating the sale of the pictures rights to "The Fool."

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has affirmed a decision of the lower court striking the answer of Park & Co. in a suit by the plaintiff Oland for breach of contract, and giving him judgment for $5,000 sued for. Oland alleged that he was engaged to play a leading part in 15 episodes of the serial, "The Phantom Foc," and that when his serial was finished, he was to have a similar part in another. He alleges that he was to get $800 a week in the first until it was finished and $1,000 in the second. The defense was that it is understood in the film industry that an actor may have finished all the scenes in which he was engaged to appear long before the picture was finished, and for that reason cannot claim salary during the entire period of making the picture.

Charge Exhibitors Dodging Tax

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

BUFFALO—The United States District Attorney is making criminal investigations of several picture theaters for alleged tax dodging on complaint of the Internal Revenue Department, according to the deputy collector of internal revenue here. Several exhibitors are charged with falsifying their returns, and the investigation is, it is understood, to be extended to cover 14 counties of Western New York, including the cities of Rochester and Elmira.

Eastman POSITIVE FILM

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths—it is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" recessed in black letters in the transparent margin.
"THE CHEAT" has a happy ending. In it Miss Negri appears as the luxury-loving wife of a young American (Jack Holt) torn between her love for her husband and the riches offered her by a handsome Prince (Charles de Roche). The story is one of the most intense dramatic interest. There is not a flaw in story or production. Miss Negri has never been so beautiful, never has she had an appealing role, never has any star worn such marvelous gowns. You need take no one's word for these statements. See it for yourself.

Gloria Swanson as "BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE" is an announcement that will bring in the crowds. And after they're in they'll see a flawless representation of this famous French comedy—filled with laughs, with surprises, with gorgeous beauty, with drama, with real human interest. This is a "big-time show, double A numbered 1," one of the really big money-makers of the new season.
Newspaper Opinions

"The Law of the Lawless"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—The entire cast is colorfully worked and textured; the backgrounds are delightfully picturesque, and the action is thrilling.

EVENING JOURNAL—Lots of action for star in new film, "Law of the Lawless," at Rivoli, its Dorothy Dalton in a T.

EVENING WORLD— * * one of the best things Dorothy Dalton has yet done on the screen.

MAIL—The romantic atmosphere of the film is refreshing and interesting and serves to overcome any weakness in plot. The story takes place within the walls of a Mekomedan city and in the hills nearby, where dwell the gypsies.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * picturesque background * * * is an interesting picture and has a quick pace which is a welcome change after some of the slow-moving pictures that recently have been offered.

POST—Theodore Hoskoff the chief feature.

SUX—* * * rather well done pictures of gypsy life.

TELEGRAM—The setting of this story is unusual and picturesque, depicting the glamour and romance of gypsy life.

TIDES—The story is fine, but the setting and the settings make it a fair entertainment.

TWICE—This production is really more of a spectacle than a photoplay.

TRIBUNE—We think he (Charles De Rocher) is the most alluring of all the leading men. Famous Players ever has brought forth with a celluloid match. * * * one of the most entertaining and thrilling pictures we have seen through for a long time.

WORLD—* * * the story has a certain exotic flavor that lends it picquency.

London Paper Reports French Film Men Think Their Product Is Systematically Barred Here
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The Cinema reports from Paris that an impression has taken root in France that French films being boycotted systematically in America, not because they are not suitable for exhibition there, but simply because they are French. The Cinema's correspondent says: "The French films which have been sold in the United States, always for a ridiculous small price, have, it is said, been so mutilated and edited before their presentation to the public, that their authors could hardly recognize them."

"On the other hand, it is hinted that American producers, with the confluence of certain French confederates, are financing a vigorous campaign in France itself to discourage further production in that country, as it is secretly feared that in time it might interfere with American productions in the world market."

"It is with the object of investigating the whole subject on the spot that M. Costel, a well-known personality of the French cinematographic circles, has just left for the United States on an unofficial mission."

"It seems clear, in any case, that the French industry means to make a determined effort to cut off further reciprocity in the exchange of films with America than exists at present."

Messrs. Costel and Trespeuch of the French Gaumont Company, left for Paris about two weeks ago, spending several weeks here. Efforts to learn if their business here was connected in any way with the talk of a boycott failed yesterday.

Louis Aurbach of Export and Import Film Co., stated yesterday that all talk of a boycott on French, English or any other kind of pictures was pure rot; that if a foreign-made picture is found to live up to American production standards it will find a market here.

Famous May Build at Norfolk

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Norfolk—It is reported here following the visit of a Famous Players representative that that organization is contemplating erection of a new theater. The Famous Players representative made a thorough inspection of available sites.

Harold B. Franklin, of Famous Players, yesterday denied that there was any foundation for the above report.

Cut In Insurance

Local Rates Reduced 25% by Fire Underwriters—T. O. C. C. Responsible for Move

New fire insurance rates are now effective in New York City covering theater hazards. There has been a 25% reduction made as a result of the insurance committee of the T. O. C. C., which has been working on the matter for fully a year.

One of the strong arguments used by the committee was the fact that although Greater New York theaters had paid $270,000 in premiums in the last year, the fire loss to insurance companies was only $3,000. The T. O. C. C. expects that there will be a further reduction made in the near future.

Tippett Here Again

John D. Tippett, of Loudon, is in New York again on one of his frequent trips. At the Astor.

Closes New England Deal

Arrow has sold "The Fighting Skipper" and the "Tom and Jerry" series to Progress Pictures, Inc., for New England and "Western Justice," "The Lone Horsemen," "When Lad Came Home" and "High Speed" to Alfred Winnic for the same territory.

Immediate Release for Arctic Film

Through H. A. McAllister, Max Fleischer has arranged with Lee-Bradford Corp., for the immediate release of "Kleinschmidt's Adventures in the Far North," the five reeler, which had a premiere at the Rivoli and Rialto about two months ago. The picture will be state righted.

Foreign Deals Closed by 1st. Nat'l.

Thirty-five first National pictures have been sold to France and Cooliete, of Manila, for the Philippines Islands.

The right of "Daddy" and "Circus Days" have been sold for all of Africa south of the equator to Jack Sneiger, of Johannesburg, South Africa.

Future Product To Go Through Associated Exhibitors, Inc.—Arthur Kane Returns

It is understood that Charles Ray's future product will be distributed through Associated Exhibitors, Inc., beginning with the release of "The Countship of Miles Standish."

The deal was closed on the coast while Arthur S. Kane was there. Arrangements have been made for the roadshowing of "Miles Standish" beginning in the fall. Kane returned from Los Angeles yesterday, but did not appear at his office during the day.

It is understood that Associated has several other deals under way for additional series of pictures.

Wars Warns Atlanta to Be Wary

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Atlanta—Anna Alken Patterson, in speaking of the Chicago convention, says editorially in the Weekly Film Review:

"And now with the South utterly disfranchised Cohen says the national organization will open a service station in Atlanta. Perhaps, after all, it is not the valedictory waistcoat of the independent exhibitor that concerns Mr. Cohen so deeply. Certainly he has not chosen a propitious moment, nor has he picked a welcome field for his activities. And it is not more than probable that this service station that suddenly projected upon our vision is but the beginning of a chain of distribution points for the product which Cohen hopes to release through the American Distribution Corporation, whose formation he fostered as an adjunct of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America. This service station will bear watching.

New York State Organization Plans Intensive Campaign to Line Up All Exhibitors Quickly

(By DANNY)

Syracuse—Full of enthusiasm, and with a program planned to bring every exhibitor into the state organization the new officials of the New York State body have closed their convention.

It is anticipated that the first drive for membership will take place within a few days at Albany. Exhibitors receiving film service from Albany will be invited in to see how the organization functions, listen to real addresses, along constructive lines, be heard from Will Hays, Senator Walker, Marcus Loew and others, as to the importance of organization. Later, a meeting of the same kind will be held in Buffalo. It is expected that the 1500 exhibitors of the state will be lined up into a concrete hard working organization.

One of the first matters to be taken up will be the removal of the admission tax. This will be the paramount issue of the organization. In view of the election for the next Assembly, work will be started in the Fall to see it that friends of the industry are elected to the Assembly to be able to remove the existing censorship law.

The Banquet

On Wednesday night the banquet proved a great success. Jimmy Walker acted as toastmaster, and was in great form. He got a big laugh when, commenting on the heat, said he hoped the exhibitors would meet in the winter so that exhibitors could at least see the for costs of the producers and distributors.

THE FILM DAILY
Two years ago, Rothafel upset precedent two weeks in succession.

The first was in giving the laugh to an imaginative popular aversion to costume plays — and presenting Pola Negri in "Passion" at the Capitol, world's largest photoplay theatre.

And the second was in holding Pola Negri in "Passion" for a second week! Vindication of judgment in the first instance, by a box-office return which overwhelmingly shattered records, prompted the overriding of precedent the second week — when the first week's record-breaking business was topped!

And now Rothafel again smashes precedent! Again with the same picture! For, recognizing its altogether superlative merit as an entertainment, and wishing to enthrall additional thousands by its wonderfully realistic depiction of an immortal topic, commencing June 24th, SAMUEL L. ROTHAFEL is presenting at CAPITOL THEATRE,

POLA NEGRI
The famous continental star in PASSION
The Intimate Romance of a Wonder Woman
A First National Picture

Now here's food for thought, Mr. Exhibitor.

Not anywhere have the possibilities of "Passion" been exhausted. The time for re-showing is ripe. The star has, since your showing, achieved tremendous popularity, and is today at the zenith of her career. And "Passion" remains her picture beyond compare.
Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Sells $300 Worth of Tickets

Peoria, Ill.—Manager Fred McMullen of Asher's Palace, sold $300 worth of matinee tickets for "Adam and Eva" on a tie-up arranged with a new cafeteria. He sold them the idea of buying 3,500 matinee tickets and giving them away. McMullen gave the restaurant a 10% reduction.

"Adams Rib Society" Formed

Lowell, Mass.—Two Paramount explo- ters organized an "Adam's Rib" society for the showing of the picture at the Palace Theatre. A local school teacher was secured to act as secretary, who sent out application cards to every house in the town. Many girls joined the club. The newspapers gave front page stories.

Dairy Company Exploits This

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Through an arrangement made between the Blackstone theater and the Hermes-Grooves Dairy Co., the milk dealers sent out the following letter to all the confectioners in the city:

"Announcing The Mad Love Sundae."

Pola Negri's latest production, "Mad Love" opens at the Blackstone Theater Monday, June 19. And on this occasion we have originated the special "Mad Love Sundae" directions for which are as follows:

"A dip of vanilla cream—a bit of chopped pineapple—cherry syrup—and a small rash of chocolate syrup—top off with cherries.

"Enclosed you will find strips for your windows and soda fountain.

Hermes-Grooves Dairy."

Big Campaign In Richmond

Richmond, Va.—Goldwynner Bill Robson, Jake Wells, and Harry Bernstein, put on the following campaign recently when they played "Souls For Sale," at the Bijou.

In addition to heavy posting and newspaper advertising a special front was built for the theater with 24-letter posters a large heavy board cutout star 10 ft high and a one-sheet upright easel.

Fifteen merchants tied up with the theater in double truck advertising on which was printed a questionnaire and the first ten girls who filled one out and took it to one of these merchants received a free ticket to see the show. Each merchant had the privilege of nominating one of the girls to have a screen test made at his store. Robson got three dramatic girls through a tieup with the local dealer and in these he loaded the cameraman and his paraphernalia, newspaper men and the girls themselves. They then went to the various stores where films were made. This created an advertisement for the merchant as the picture showed his store and his merchandise.

Hyman Up To The Minute

The Brooklyn Strand pulled a good stunt when Edward L. Hyman engaged a battery of cameras to secure exclusive shots of the Brooklyn Shrine- ers at the National Congress in Washing- ton. About 500 feet were taken showing the nobles on parade, visiting the White House, close-ups of Con- rad V. Dyckman, elected imperial potentate, and many other interesting events. Before the convention was over the Brooklyn delegation was thoroughly impressed with the progressiveness of the Strand, and this they carried back home with them, as well as the intention of bringing all their friends to see them in pictures. The stunt was advertised big and after the run it was given to the Kiss- met Temple of Brooklyn to preserve as a part of the record of the 1925 convention.

Gigantic Campaign On The Coast

Los Angeles—A big exploitation campaign was accorded "Daddy" when it opened at Loew's State.

A tie-up was made with the Salvation Army, then carrying on a local drive for the poor. Under the auspices of the Army, an old clothes mat- inée was launched, the admission price being a bundle of old clothing for poor kiddies of Los Angeles. Much free newspaper space was derived through this, in addition to the stories, pictures, and features published.

Another tie-up was made with a newspaper for a military school parade. Every military school in Los Angeles and surrounding towns was invited to participate in the event. Jackie Coogan and the paper played host to the boys in uniform who met at the paper and marched with ban-ers, bands, and police escort to the theater. Arrangements were made for several public speakers to address the military lads.

A contest was then arranged between the theater and another paper which called for essays on "My Dar-day" to be written by children between the age of eight and twelve. The paper played it on the front page for a week. Thousands of letters from children were sent in. Cash prizes were given the winners. Another stunt arranged during the engagement was a tie-up whereby a music college offered a year's lessons on a violin to the best child player. A age limit was placed between eight and ten, the con- testants playing minute and a half on ten in the stage of the theater. The music school derived the publicity desired and gladly offered the lessons for the year period.

THEATRE MANAGER WANTED

who is big enough to be a managing director

ARE you the theatre manager whose ability has been proven, not by one successful season, but by steadily increasing and satisfied patronage? Are you the creative showman who can conceive an appealing program in presentation and exploitation? Then you maybe the man we are looking for.

If you are the man we have in mind, you desire a proposition where the ultimate in theatre equipment is at your disposal. You have been looking for a chance to combine your showmanship ability with the best this industry has to offer in photoplays productions, talent and musical accompaniment. You desire to associate with a group of theatres, each the representative house in its respective community, backed by men of vision who are looking for more capable men to meet the ever increasing needs of expansion.

The man we want is an artist who can build a program to win the applause of the classes, but who appreciates the necessity of directing his efforts to the masses. In other words, a combination of the commercially practical and theatrically creative man.

It is useless for you to reply to this ad unless your past record amply proves you to be possessed of all the necessary qualifications of personality, adroitness and thoroughness. The man to whom this ad appeals will recognize it as an opportunity to promote his creative ambitions, salary and advancement limited only by his ability.

Your response will be held in strict confidence. Address stating your past experience in fullest detail and qualifications. ONE now employed preferred.

Dean Flint of the Syracuse University, made a strong address, and Will Hays was also in great form. He said he wished that exhibitors could attend some of the meetings of the Board of his organization so they could know the feeling which existed for their good, as discussions occurred. He said that he felt the era of confidence and cooperation between all branches of the industry was rapidly assuming definite shape.

Wires were received from Adolph Zukor, Harry Schwalbe, Tom Meighan and others, and there was one from John A. Silha and 21 others of Illinois, in which Silha said that Illinois was watching with interest the proceedings of the Syracuse convention. H. H. Ritchey, secretary of the Michigan organization, was on hand looking things over, and a wire was received from Theodore Hays of Minnesota, relating to the inability of that state to send anyone to the convention.

Marcus Loew commented on the business-like proceedings, said he was glad there were no resolutions, because he always laughed at them, and added that he had never attended a convention which was so well conducted.

Regarding the proposal to remove the admission tax, he said that by working with the film clubs, and through the Hays organization, every exhibitor in the country could be reached, that trailers be used, and urged immediate action, declaring that something must be done regarding admissions for the coming season else exhibitors would find themselves in difficulty. He said his organization expected to raise admissions in the fall. He pointed out that this was the only business, he was a part of, where, when increased production costs developed, that they were not passed on to the consumer. Millions are being spent making better pictures than ever before he added, but advancing prices in the box office seems to be ignored.

Peter J. Brady, of the Federation of Labor, told of the willingness of his organization to work with the exhibitor body, and also commented on the business-like convention. President Brandt told of the saving of 25 per cent affected recently for insurance of the TOCC members, pleaded for cooperation from his organization and said he intended to make every man work to bring about a 100 per cent organization in New York.

Notes
It was a great gathering for Charley Steiner. Lucky? Oh, no; ask 'em.

Sam Zierler, Bobby North, Sidney Samson, and other independent operators were seen about the on-and-off. "Buxy" was there, of course, as was Harmon Otis, of Famous, and many of "the boys," and exchange managers of all the old line companies.

M. H. Hoffman of Truart, as usual, one of the best dressed men in attendance. Snappy and stylish.

Agnes Egan Cobb was in distress. She lost one of her ear rings. But she found it later during the banquet, and the world was all smooth again.

Mrs. Cobb was the life of her table, at which were "Pop" Linton, Utica; Ed Dillon and Mrs. Dillon, Charley Hayman, Niagara Falls and others.

James Davis of Albany—one of the kind of men who belong in the front line of exhibitor organizations. If the New Yorkers get busy on a national campaign for the removal of the admissions tax—as is planned—one of the men who could be used mightly well would be Davis. He's a real hustler, and a splendid talker.

The New York crowd left for home after the banquet Wednesday. They had two cars and reports are to the effect that the pajama colors compared with those of the rainbow.

Edgar Lewis, excepting for Marcus Loew, was the only producer on hand. Edgar is getting to be a regular convention bound.

Mike Walsh of Yonkers, Exhibitor, politician, banker, and best of all—a regular fellow. Dead set for a real exhibitor organization. Says it must come.

Syracuse proved this—that a day and a half of real business is all a convention needs, and that you can accomplish a lot—if you stick to business and forget politics.

Two St. Louis Houses Sold
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
St. Louis—The Virginia, Virginia near Walsh, has been bought by Reeves Espy and W. Pappas. Espy is publicity director of the St. Louis Amusement Co. Pappas was formerly interested in the Majestic.

The Famous has been purchased by M. Steinberg, who recently took over the New Wilson.

"Bella Donna" Showing Stopped
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Muskogee, Okla.—A restraining order was granted in the District Court against the showing of "Bella Donna" when the film was booked for one of the local theaters. County Attorney Green issued the order. It is said that Green acted for Muskogee Ku Kluxers who had previously branded the picture as "detrimental to public morals."

Start Jolson Film This Week
D. W. Griffith expects to start shooting on the new Jolson film at Mamaroneck this week. It will be an adaptation by Anthony Paul Kelly of a stage play submitted to Griffith four years ago. Irma Harrison will be the leading woman. Jack Noble is just in from the coast to act as Griffith's assistant. Two months will be required to make the picture, after which Griffith may make a picture in England. Edna May Sprey has been cast for one of the chief roles.

Pictures—or Big Pictures?

THERE was a time in this business when ordinary, average pictures—"program" pictures, were all an exhibitor needed to run his house at a profit.

But with the growth of competition, and the raising of standards generally, the public became more discriminating. They stopped "going to the movies." They began to select their entertainment.

And today the average, the mediocre, picture will draw something less than an average house. In fact, exhibitors know from experience, the day of the "good program picture" is past and done.

The public wants something big, something especially fine, something extraordinary. If you don't give it to them—they go elsewhere to find it.

Paramount will release this season 52 pictures—one a week.

Some of those pictures you know about. You can see "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" at your exchange now. "Hollywood" will soon be ready for your inspection. And then "The Cheat," "Lawful Larceny," "To the Last Man," "The Silent Partner" and the others announced for the first three months—August, September and October.

But what of the rest of the year?

Simply this—if you think the first three months' Paramount Pictures of the new season are big ones—and when you see them you'll know they are—the succeeding Paramount Pictures for 1923-24 are even bigger.

For the protection of the exhibitor they will not be announced too far in advance this year, but Paramount can sincerely and truly say that its second block for 1923-24 will be even greater than its first.

Hylan Signs Ordinance Effecting Important Changes in City Exhibitor Fees

Mayor Hylan signed an ordinance Friday increasing the fee of picture houses seating between 601 and 1000 from $25 to $150. Houses seating over 100 will pay $200 and those seating under 600 will pay $100, as in the past.

The ordinance was enacted following strong complaints by local exhibitors over the tangle in the city ordinance which permitted the larger Broadway picture houses to operate at a considerably less fee than the smaller theaters.

The apparent inequity existed from the enactment of an ordinance (Continued on Page 2)

The Chain
Endless in length. Running in a circle all the time. Getting nowhere. Referring to the controversy of the chain buying system invoked by exhibitors against producers, or whether producers started it by listening to the tempting offers from competitive buyers. At all events regardless of who started it, the mess is on. And in full blast, too.

All over the country the condition exists which drives sales managers to kick and complain and try to devise means of offsetting the evil. But so far they have reached no cure. And the problem now confronting exhibitors is this: how long will producers and distributors operate against the "closed" town before starting something for themselves?

No matter what started it, or what, it so happens that when the exhibitors compete long enough against each other by outbidding for pictures they eventually get together, or one of them sells out and the other fellow takes over the house. Then what has been a competing territory automatically becomes a "closed town."

Just as an instance of how difficult this condition is becoming, in the Western New York territory something like 490 towns are served. Of these towns it is understood that but 47 of them are "open" or "competitive." If this is so no wonder distributors are alarmed.

They have a right to be.

REGARLING LUBITSCH
When Ernst Lubitsch came to this country he was under contract with Hamilton. Or, in other words, Famous. Then Lasky proceeded to farm him out. And he went with Mary. And then his contract with Famous ended. And the Warner boys were smart enough to grab him. Good move. For both. Lubitsch doing "Deburau" should mean much.

GOING SOME
That Goldwyn crew are sure working. Talk about trick in first runs—look at the record. They close with Billy Goldman for St. Louis. And then Jimmy Grainger shoots off and deals with Herb Rothschild for the Frisco lay out. And for the time being blocks Sol Lesser. And the West Coast crowd.

THAT ROACH-LLOYD SPLIT
Augurs a lot more than appears on the surface. So far as distribution goes Pathe still has two more Lloyd's to deliver. So that's that. But Lloyd probably will have to go a long way to find an offset to his relations with Roach. That's certain. And just how he will fare in his own studio remains to be seen.

Just where Lloyd will distribute his contract is closed is to be determined. But if Jaydee Williams lines him up—and this is possible—well; what a nice Fall we'll be having.

EXHIBITOR ORGANIZATION AND ORGANIZATIONS
Something to think about. Now that Bill Brandt has started the New York crowd on a militant campaign. Because Minnesota is interested; Illinois, also, as well as Michigan. And outside of

Plans Film Epic
D. W. Griffith May Picturize America's Development—Has Offer to Go to India
For a number of years, D. W. Griffith has had in mind the filming of an elaborate production, epic in scope and to cover the development of America to date. He originally planned to make it at the time "Way Down East" was purchased but abandoned the plan in favor of that. If anything material develops from it, the production would cost from $800,000 to $1,000,000 and would be made in a broad, sweeping fashion to do the subject justice. Aside from this, Griffith has been approached by British financial interests to go to India to film an epic of Indian life. This project is said to have the support of the Indian Government. The story was written by a man named

Pathe Not Affected
Pathe issued a long statement Friday relative to the Harold Lloyd—Hal Roach matter in which it was stated that Lloyd's relations with Pathe are not in any way affected. The statement adds that arrangements have been made for Lloyd to take his entire staff with him and that Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer will continue as directors; Johny Balson will be the leading woman while several of Lloyd's best "gag" men will go over to the new organization. It was stated that Lloyd would not announce his new producing headquarters until after his return from New York.

Florence Vidor in “Alice Adams”

Producer: King Vidor
Distributor: Associated Exhibitors

As a Whole....AN INTERESTING PICTURE WITH AN INTERESTING STAR, HAS GOOD SITU. As with so many small town girls of moderate circumstances who tries to imitate her rich friends.

Cast....Careful selection and well smiled; Harold Glasson fine as his brother; Claude Gillingwater, Margaret McVade, Vernon Steel, Thomas Ricketts, Gertrude Astor and Margaret Landis complete it.

Type of Story....Drama of small town society; very attractively presented with many really fine touches, although toward the close it becomes a trifle too exaggerated; woman urges husband to establish his own business with results that threaten the happiness of the family, but ends agreeably for all.

Box Office Angle....Looks very good; should be a decidedly worth while enterprise perhaps in the smaller towns; star a big asset, or should be. Has pleasing humorous bits and excellent sub-title.

Exploitation....There are several good stunts that can be used in connection with getting them interested in "Alice Adams". In the first place you have the title for teaser purposes by distributing throw-aways bearing the line: "Alice Adams is coming next". If you have got them sufficiently curious let them know that "Alice Adams" is the title of Florence Vidor's latest picture.

Get all the Adams' in your town interested in the picture and if there happens to be an Alice Adams you might arrange some sort of stunt whereby you could use her picture in conjunction with Miss Vidor's. Or you might offer free tickets for those whose Christian name is Alice. Get your local ice cream shops to introduce an Alice Adams Frappe. If you do not have a program tell them about it with a slide on your screen.

Since this is a Booth Tarkington prize story and it is so well done and created the just right sort of atmosphere; comedy touches very good.

Herbert Brenon Prod. “The Woman with Four Faces”

Producer: Paramount
Distributor: Paramount

As a Whole...EXCEPTIONALLY FAST MOVING AND CLEVER CROOK TEAM...ACTING AT A STUNTING RAPID FIRE ORDER WITH EVENTS OCCURRING IN UNSUSUALLY QUICK SUCCESSION; LIKE SPLENDID BOX OFFICE BET.

Players....Betty Compton appears to better advantage here than she has in months; Richard Dix also excelling in the lead at the George Fawcett, Theodore Von Eitz and Joseph Kilgour; a first rate cast.

Type of Story....Crocket melodrama; a cleverly compacted plot with quite improbable but certainly interesting and generally absorbing; district attorney employs girl crook to help him secure evidence that will convict leader of drug ring. It brings about girl's regeneration and eventual marriage to him.

Box Office Angle....With Particularly promising; you ought to be able to do a thriving business with it if you take the trouble to go after it; has a real audience appeal.

Exploitation....It may be a bit difficult to exploit this one since there is not much in the way of spectacular advertising that the theme would suggest. But it should prove well worthy while hammering away carefully, and perhaps, in some months. It may appeal to some even more than "Within the Law," because it is a faster moving story with much more action.

There are several fine sequences with thrilling climaxes that would easily serve to arouse their interest if used as trailers, such as the daring prison escape with the crook leaping to a rope ladder suspended from an aeroplane, the genuinely thrilling hold-up at the start of the picture or the triple hold-up in the final climax.

Be sure to tell them it is the best Herbert Brenon picture so far done, and many months. Use Richard Dix's name prominently.

Direction by....Herbert Brenon; has done a fine job on this picture; keeps it speeding along at fine pace, made it more or less plausible in spite of the improbable and handled play excellently; injected a lot of realism.

Author....Bayard Veiller
Scenario....George Hopkins Cameraman....Jimmie Howe
Photography....Very good
Locale....In and around prison and interior of country house.

“Slippy McGee”

Producer: Oliver Morosco Prod.
Distributor: First National

As a Whole...EFFECTIVE HEART INTEREST BITS GENERAL COMPARE FOR RATHER WELL WORN CROOK THEME; QUITE SLOW MOVING AT TIMES.

Players....Wheeler Oakman gives good performance in the title role; Colleen Moore pleasing but photographed very poorly. Sam DeGrasse satisfactory as the priest; others are notably Fredric March, Edith Yorke, Lloyd Whitlock and Pat O'Malley.

Type of story....Crocket regeneration theme; crook loses a girl to criminal good heart interest touches; might have been speeded up considerably and the ending made less disappointing by the heroine's marriage to the hero; reformed crook "does one more job" which preserves the happiness of girl he loves but who returns anyway.

Box Office Angle....Should give average satisfaction; will please a majority and unless they are familiar with the type of story should not prove disappointing.

Exploitation....This may be a bit difficult to handle cleverly since there isn't a great deal in the way of unusual exploitation that suggests itself either from the theme or the title. You will have to resort mainly to catchlines used with the title and paragraphs in your program that will indicate the nature of the story.

A trailer would be about the next best means of attracting them, Slippy, which the railroad accident in which Sippy loses a limb. Or a bit of the sequence where Slippy robs a safe to preserve the happiness of the lady he loves might also interest them.

Let them know that the story deals with a crook who reforms through the kindness of a priest who befriended him after he had been injured while evading the law. If you know any local organizations interested in the reformation problem you might get them to cooperate with you from a standpoint of interest, the crook's regeneration through modern methods rather than the old forms of punishment. This might be all the basis of exploitation if you can work it.

Direction by....Wesley Ruggles; has handled theme very well and injected considerable heart interest that creates genuine sympathy for crook hero.

Scenario....Edward E. Rose
Cameraman....J. C. Hutchinson and Ade Stieglitz
Photography....Very good

Glady Walton in “Sawdust”

Producer: Universal Distributor: Universal

As a Whole.....THOROUGHLY PLEASING LITTLE PICTURE WHICH IS GOOD BUSINESS; SUGGEST PHERENCE AND STAR AT HER BEST IN TYPICAL ROLE.

Star....Always can be depended upon to put over a part of this kind; dressed to represent Gladys Walton's emotional bits toward the close.

Cast....Niles Welch a good lead; others Herbert Standing, Edith Yorke, Mathew Betz, Frank Brownlee, William Robert Daly and Mattie Peters.

Type of Story....Comedy drama of circus life; has genuinely pleasing humorous touches and slight heart interest sequence toward end that offers good contrast; girl of circus poses as long lost daughter of old couple and after making them happy confesses but she remains as their child.

Box Office Angle....Delightful summer attraction that should get over anywhere; it is short and with it you can use a good variety of short reels; star should go very well.

Exploitation...."Sawdust" should be a particularly easy one to work on since it suggests so many new stunts in the way of exploitation. In the first place the circus atmosphere will give you a number of ideas or paragraphs for advertising. If you cannot get any actual circus paraphernalia you can readily secure substitutes such as trained animals. If you have got a circus or you can rig up a parade with automobiles trimmed with ribbon and crepe paper and have people dressed in circus attire riding in them.

Another stunt would be to get a truck load of sawdust and a girl dressed to represent Gladys Walton to ride around sitting on top of the load. At first give no explanation until their curiosity is aroused and then follow it with the announcement of the showing.

Dress your lobby up to represent the entrance to the big tent and have a girl dressed to represent Gladys Walton to see the big show, after the fashion of the typical side-show barkers.

Direction by....Jack Conway; has handled this one very nicely, supplied colorful atmosphere of circus life and told the story thoroughly, gotten over the heart interest touches pleasingly.

Author....Courtney Riley Cooper
Scenario by....Harvey Gates
Cameraman....Allen Davy
Photography....Good
Locale....Circus ring and a country home.

“Counterfeit Love”

Producer: Murray W. Garsson
Distributor: Playgoers

As a Whole... HAS GOOD COMBINATION OF ENTERTAINING ELEMENTS THAT SHOULD MAKE IT A FIRST RATE CHOICE FOR MANY EXHIBITORS

Players... None whose names will mean much at the box office but a pretty fair cast and capable of various roles; includes Joe King, Marion Swayne, Norma Lee, Jack Richardson and Alexander Giglio.

Type of Story... Melodrama that includes all the stock tricks with an occasional new twist; makes it slightly different; has considerable of what is generally conceded to be good audience appeal; secret service prevents counterfeiter from marrying unsuspecting Southern girl, saves her brother's life and wins her hand as a reward.

Box Office Angle... Likely to do a good business where you have a clientele that favors melodrama; a good deal if you talk about it and it is quite fast moving.

Exploitation... Should you consider your patrons in a receptive mood for a good old fashioned melodrama with the regulation murder, mystery, romance, horse race, fire and all the rest that goes to make it up, you will do well. Find it and work it. You should send them out feeling right.

Exploitation... Secure a supply of stage money and have the bills stamped with the title of the picture and distribute them. After you have gotten them sufficiently curious as to what it means, follow it with the showing date of the picture.

Have a man dressed as a jockey ride about on a dapper horse displaying a sign telling them of the race in “Counterfeit Love.”

You haven’t any names to use in combination with this one so you will have to depend entirely upon your exploitation and advertising to put it over. The press sheet suggests a good idea to try. Have a boy leading a donkey about the streets, bearing a sign reading: “This is the slow mule from Missouri—but there’s real speed in ‘Counterfeit Love’.” Secure a copy of the book for further suggestions.

Direction by... Ralph Ince and L. R. Johnson, quite satisfactory throughout the whole; injects several good bits of action and the usual elements of appeal for melodrama.

Author... Charles P. Enright, possibly the best story in any of the pictures this week.

“The Law of the Lawless”

Producer: Paramount
Distributor: Paramount

As a Whole... A RATHER UNUSUAL AND COLORFUL ATMO-SPHERE AND LIVELY STORY THAT FURNISHES GOOD ENTERTAINMENT.

Star... Well suited and pleasing in the role of Tartar girl; her admirers will like this real well.

Cast... All right; includes Charles de Rochef, the hero, Tully, Marshall, Theodore Kosloff, Fred Huntley and Margaret Loomis.

Type of Story... Combination of drama and romance; high spirited type of picture with quite a pleasing romantic sequences has some first rate action; Tartar girl auctions herself to highest bidder to pay father's debt; is bought by gypsy king with whom she falls in love when her former lover proves a coward.

Box Office Angle... Will undoubtedly please for its interesting atmosphere and fast moving sequences; story not new but atmosphere makes it worth while and production is good.

Exploitation... A gypsy caravan parading about the streets would be a good stunt to advertise the picture. Have the occupants dressed in gypsy attire, and if you could secure the services of a fortune teller to install in a booth in front of your theater you might in some cases create a stir.

Have your ushers dressed as gypsies and rig up the front of your theater to represent the entourage to a gypsy tent.

Another effective means of advertising, particularly effective for the hot season, is the distribution of fans advertising your theater and with a space wherein you can stamp the name of the attraction you are playing at the time.

Show them a trailer of the fire sequence in which Dorothy Dalton tries to rescue her gypsy husband from a burning tower. This offers a fine thrill and should easily serve to bring them back to see the entire picture.

A girl riding horseback and attired in the garb of a Tartar girl would also be a good stunt to arouse curiosity. At first use no mention of the picture, then later follow the stunt with the announcement of the show.

Direction by... Victor Fleming has produced a picture that is a real pageant of beauty and has done a lot of good touches that make the picture satisfying; handled players very well.

Scenario... F. Lloyd Sheldon and Edrill Bingham.

Cameraman... George R. Meyer

“Daughters Of The Rich”

Producer: Preferred Pictures
Distributor: Al Lichtman Corp.

As a Whole... VERY LIKELY A GOOD BOX OFFICE NUMBER WITH A STORY ESPECIALLY PRESCRIBED FOR AUDIENCE SATISFACTION

Players... Miriam Cooper quite pleasing and Gaston Glass a suitable hero; Stuart Holmes surpasses Will Rogers for being “homely,” judging from his make-up in this; Holmes overacts frequently; Ruth Clifford capable but occasionally poorly photographed; others Ethel Shannon, Josee Swickard and Truly Shattuck.

Type of Story... Society drama that is quite illogical in its situations and gives characters very foolish things to do, but it carries considerable audience appeal nevertheless; rich American woman buys a Duke as a husband for her daughter with much resultant unhappiness and the eventual suicide of the girl.

Box Office Angle... Has first rate possibilities for the right audience and will satisfy; probably hasn’t as big a chance where they are critical on the sort of stories they want.

Exploitation... The title on this one can be attractively exploited. You can have your ushers, where they are women, dressed up in the latest gowns, and have them appear on a platform in front of your theater where signs will invite the crowd inside to “see how these Daughters Behave.”

Direction by... Gascier; has mounted picture very well and given it a lot of good atmosphere in connection with the story, makes appropriate use of material.

“The Rapids”

Producer: Sault Ste Marie Films, Ltd.
Distributor—Hodkinson

As a Whole... STARTS OUT TO BE QUITE DISTINCTIVE BUT WANDERS INTO FAIRLY UN-CONVINCING AND CONVEN- TIONAL PLOT

Players... A good cast that includes Harry T. Morey, Mary Astor, Walter Miller and others; Morey good type and gives first rate performance; Mary Astor not given a great deal to do.

Type of Story... A combination of lumber camp atmosphere with a strike for excitement and a romance woven in; promises to be somewhat different at first but gets back into a rut. One of those pictures which shows the effort made by community leaders to boost their neighborhoods and, as usual, fails.

Box Office Angle... Will probably satisfy the average audience; not big enough for extraordinary business—should do medium business.

Exploitation... To get them interested in this one you might pile up a wagon load of logs and have a couple of men dressed as lumber jacks drive it about town with signs announcing the showing of “The Rapids” at your theater, and explaining that it has to do with the making of paper from wood pulp and the process is shown in detail from the chopping of the trees to the making of the paper.

In principle you might go after business from an instructor standpoint in view of this phase of the story. The scenes showing the industry of the mill and also those of a steel manufacturing plant, would easily warrant your making promises of its being interesting educationally.

Where you usually run trailers of coming features you could secure the hit showing Walter Morey being hurled off a bridge into the rapids below. Or possibly scenes of the fight with the strikers would promise them some good action and entertainment. Give them what you know that is what they want.

Use Harry Morey’s name prominently in your bill and let them know that Mary Astor is also in the cast.

Direction by... David M. Hartford; average would have been better in several instances, particularly in latter reels.

"The Courtship of Miles Standish"—Hal Roach—Pathé—Amusing Burlesque

Type of production ..... 2 reel comedy

The opening of this 2 reel Roach comedy which has in its cast Snub Pollard, Marie Mosquini, James Finlayson and Noah Young, shows a Thanksgiving dinner with the father of the family being pestered by his young son who repeatedly asks "Why is Thanksgiving?" The rest of the action deals with the story told him of the story of the Pilgrim and the love affairs of John "Aldone" and Miles Standish. There is some good burlesque stuff and the backgrounds of real snow make it a good hot-weather offering. Pollard’s friends and down-town comics pleased with it, and even where he isn’t a favorite they’ll get quite a few laughs out of it.

"Forgetting the Law"—Universal—Fast Action Western

Type of production ..... 2 reel drama

Jack Daugherty is the star of this two-reel western drama which has been directed by William Craft, and while the story by George W. Paxon does not differ much from the average western, there is action aplenty all the way through. It’s just crowded full of action and will surely satisfy those who enjoy a fast-moving exciting story. There is the usual consignment of gold given for safety-keeping to the youthful sheriff who is sought by a masked agent for the mining company who is caught after a wild chase. Incidentally there is some excellent riding and roping done by Daugherty.

"Collars and Cuffs"—Hal Roach—Pathé—Slap-stick

Type of production ..... 1 reel comedy

Stan Laurel’s latest comedy, is of the messy slap-stick variety and where they still like to see damage done, the bumbling chase up and down stairs and finally the overflow of the washing machine and the consequent flooding of the "Wet and Rough" laundry with all the different players slipping and sliding continuously in the wet. "Collars and Cuffs" may be considered good entertainment. The film puts it over with great amount of pep at any rate and there are still people who may be amused at the idea of a man’s trousers ripping as he bends over while all the laundresses shriek in horror.

"Don’t Get Fresh"—Century—Universal—Good Kid Comedy

Type of production ..... 2 reel comedy

Buddy Messinger is the youthful star of this Century comedy which derives many of its gags from somehow what messy happenings in a kitchen but which are funny nevertheless. The punch line place at a kid’s party and they have also got a little kick out of a situation which leaves Buddy out on a ledge high above the street. He just stays there long enough for the tick to register, however, and then comes back to the party through a window. Kids will be kids, pleased with this one and it also offers some amusement to the older folks.

"Three Strikes"—Jack White—Educational—Fine for Baseball Fans and Others Too

Type of production ..... 2 reel comedy

About a reel and a half of this Jack White comedy in which Lige Conley is the chief fun-maker, is taken up with the rough handling accorded a freshman at the University of Southwick-on-the-Siwash. The stunts, while sometimes rough, keep the action moving rapidly. However the punch of the picture comes in the last half reel or so when Caesar, the nervous freshman, saves the day for the college when his score is 1 to 0 in the last half of the ninth inning with the other team scoring the 1. The baseball game looks like the real thing and the fans will eat it up.

"Dogs of War"—Our Gang—Pathé—Sure-fire Stuff

Type of production ..... 2 reel comedy

Our Gang this time stages a real battle on the lots in back of the West Coast studios. There are five commanding officers, all dressed up in the linens of helmets, and other paraphernalia, and one lone private—Little Farina. After she has been killed four times, they decide to call it a truce. Still on missionary bent they sneak into the Studio on a truck carrying dummies. The action deals with their pranks in and about the different sets and the final wallops comes when they take the pictures with the camera in which is the punch scene of a feature as yet undeveloped. The film is finally flashed on the screen of the projection room double-exposed upon the tears and emotions of the heroine are shown. Some motion picture legend.”

"A Radio Romeo"—Universal—Fairly Amusing

Type of production ..... 1 reel comedy

Walter Forde is starred in this one reel western which is built around the radio craze in a small town. Forde is a poet whose rendition of poems over the radio is captivating the hearts of the women-folk of the town. The husbands get together and resolve to beat up this village shiek, but through a misunderstanding select the wrong man. There are a few mildly amusing situations, and quite a bit of slapstick.

"The Beauty Parlor"—Aesop Fable—Pathé—Good Cartoon

Type of production ..... 1 reel animated drawing

The popular beauty parlor comes in for its share of fun in this Aesop Fable and this permanent wave is taken from a real one. The turns are made to the tail of Mary Mouse. Mr. Hippo has his weight reduced in a steaming machine and Gerty Grayhound has a lovely crop of long hair raised by means of a magic hairtint. The moral this time is “He who laughs last laughs best” and in quite a few cases this will apply to the audience.

"A Lyn’l Hunt"—Lyman H. Howe—Hodge-Podge—Educational—Excellent Magazine

Type of production ..... 1 reel magazine

Although the main title of this Lyman Howe “Hodge-Podge” may be trifle misleading, the entire reel is one of the best magazine subjects we have seen in many a long day. The subject matter is varied, beautifully photographed and some of the scenic shots have been exquisitely tinted. In addition, the scenic bit deals with the town really there, and they have been accorded novel treatment. The reel has a dull moment.

Pathé Review No. 23—Entertaining

Type of production ..... 1 reel magazine

Demonstrations to prove that the body possesses certain degree of magnetism open this number. Next, under the title “All Wet” is a clever animated cartoon bit telling the troubles of a poet who jumps into the sea to make love to a mermaid. Unbobbing the Bobs” shows the methods by which milady’s bobbed tresses may be hidden, now that the bob is no longer in the thing. There is also an interesting collection of so-called “god dolls,” which are really toys made by the early American Indians for their children. A Pathé-color scenic bit deals with the “Laughing Cascades of the Pynes.”
The Chain

Connecticut these states are better organized than any of the others. Just now they are wide apart. But from their movemen-something may be expected to coalesce. If it does then the Cohen M. P. T. O. will have a battle on. If it doesn't—well, that's too much to worry about in hot weather.
But this is sure; something has been started in New York. And a lot of people will look to see what happens. Including Sydney S. Cohen.

SIGNS OF REVIVAL
"Selznick hires 21 salesmen" says headline. Who says business isn't good?

WELL, WELL, WELL!
"Johnny," says teacher, in first grade elementary school: "Who brought Valentino's suit against Famous Players?"
And Johnny replies to the schoolmarm: "Mister Arthur Butler Graham."
The teacher asks: "And who is now suing Valentino?"
And Johnny replies: "Mister Arthur Butler Graham."
The rest of the class says: "Oh, ain't that funny, teacher?"

FORE!
Inspired, doubtless, by the success of the golf tournaments held under the auspices of the little old paper "Greater Amusements of Minneapolis" is planning one. For Dan Chamberlain, and the Movie Age of Omaha is also starting one. That's the idea. All the regions should have a tournament working and the winners can come into the Grand National every Fall. And add to the gayety of the party.

WORKING A HARDSHIP
Film salesmen working in the Buffalo section are all upset. They are getting a terrible break from the Tickhoffs circuit of Rochester. The Tickhoffs have just put up a sign which reads: "No salesmen admitted after 11 a. m."
"Why" said one of the boys. "Most of us are just getting up about that time. Most of our business is done with exhibitors after 11 at night."

SYSTEM
Testimony at the Federal Trade Commission-Famous suit. All the complaints, film service, etc., and otherwise. That M. P. T. O. officials could dig against Famous in three years totalled 45. And one of the Famous figures figured this: Famous has 8,000 accounts on its books. Figuring five contracts a year to each account, for three years means handling 120,000 accounts, and figuring 10 pictures to each contract means 1,200,000 transactions. Of which but 45 errors were found.

FIRST RUN STUFF
Harry Buxbaum "Bux" walks into the hearing with his check suit shrieking for attention. Emil Shauer walks in wearing a suit of identical pattern. Harry says: "I got this suit first run. And here you are wearing the same suit day and date with me. Quit it."

SWEARING TO IT
Hodkinson publicity. Issues copy of an affidavit sworn to by a notary. Signed by George Kofsky, Nemo, Cleveland. To the effect that a women patron laughed so much over "Faint Hearts" that she fainted away; causing the picture to be stopped, until she was removed and revived.

Publicity! Affidavits! Harry Reichenbach take note.

FROM SIAM
Comes a letter from Henry MacRae, who is doing a sort of "Nanook of the North" over there, in a big super special going into the manner of living, customs, mannerisms, etc., of the people of Siam. From what Henry writes, there is an affinity between Siam and, elephants, tigers, etc., plus snakes, that makes picture producing in Siam far from a pleasurable indoor sport. Some time when we have space, part of his very interesting letter will appear. You won't hear a lot from Henry, because it takes six weeks to get mail to him.

ANOTHER TRAVELLER
Is Theodore C. Deitrich, who writes from Berlin, that there is a cale on Friedrich Strasse, Berlin, the proprietor of which is named Joseph Dannenberg, and who is a perfect 96. That last crack puts that Berliner in the family—and Theodore "out."

THE RETORT COURTESOUS
Famous officials have never quite forgiven Goldwyn for putting out "Souls For Sale," in advance of "Hollywood." And with this as a preface, let's record that a Goldwynite and a Famous Playersite were discussing their new big coming pictures.
"Well," said the Goldwynite, "what do you think of 'Ben Hur'?"
"Oh," yawned the Famous man, "I guess that will be the first burlesque on 'The Ten Commandments.'"

TYPES
Out on the West Coast when Ernest Torrence arrived, after making a bit in "Tol'able David," the casting directors branched him a "dirty dog heavy."
Isn't this a polite business?

DANNY.

"The same determination to deliver the goods"
M. P. NEWS: Through a splendid treatment of its salient points, coupled with a first-rate production and a capital interpretation, "The Critical Age" will prove entertaining to every audience that sees it. The sponsors deserve credit for telling it in five reels, thus heightening the action and making the scenes compact. It is thoroughly pleasing and capitaly conceived and executed in every department.

M. P. WORLD: Pauline Garon is a type that is immensely popular right now and proves in this picture that she is well qualified to act. It is an interesting picture because it is in some ways apart from the stereotyped and is wholesome and youthful.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: It is a delightful little Canadian tale of romance at the "puppy-love" stage, and easily holds the interest. It is an outdoor picture and includes many lovely scenes of natural beauty. "The Critical Age" should be satisfactory entertainment for any audience.

FILM DAILY: ... is handled in the right way, given a good production and played by a company that is well suited and capable, as well as being carefully directed. Pleasing offering that is short and can fit on any program.

Pauline Garon, the latest screen flapper and a very busy one judging from all the pictures she has appeared in recently, will be well liked in the role of Margie Baird and will gain more friends for her work in this. This is pleasant entertainment that should satisfy almost any audience. It is a short picture and should satisfy the demands of exhibitors crying for features that do not run into seven and eight reels. With this one they can use a good program of short reels and with the feature offering a good entertainment, it should give their patrons a nice bill.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: It is a good picture, light and agreeable, and should meet with success.

Doubts Plan's Success

Earl W. Hammond Sees Hitch in Aronson Campaign Because of Money Control by Distributors

"I have read Mr. Aronson's article with a great deal of interest. "I agree very thoroughly with a number of Mr. Aronson's remarks and it would indeed be an ideal situation if his plans could be put through, although I doubt it greatly. "The only way that I can see that would suit Mr. Aronson is for his plan to be workable as far as the distributor at least is concerned would be when the distributing of pictures is more or less controlled by the money interests. The weight of money necessarily brings into play the power of money. "However, in my opinion there would always be a group of distributors that could not "pull together" on any matter. As an illustration, suppose the principal distributors agreed to try out Mr. Aronson's plan—they would be a great many more who (Continued on Page 2)

"The Perfect Showman"

Seven decidedly worthwhile hints to showmen, here and everywhere, are contained in an article written by W. A. Northam which appears in "The Idealert," published by Ideal Films, Ltd. of London. "Here are Northam's hints to showmen:"

(1) Have you ever shot out a cheery "Hullo, Sonny!" to a youngster entering your show, and watched the mother's eye light up with pleasure? If you have you will know the joy of showmanship, for if you have hailed the boy (who is your coming man) you will also have proffered a helping hand to the old lady, and you will have made that humble patron feel at home and your friend for life (or what remains of it).

(2) Some managers have never realized that their patrons are divided sharply into two sections—those who simply love a greeting or a gossip, and those who have no such desires, and might resent any advances. There are managers who feel that their position is such that they are entitled to a certain amount of tips in speaking to their patrons, and such invariably omit to pay courtesies to the old and humble folk who welcome a word and appreciate a little assistance; and they fail to appeal to the children.

(3) Have you ever had a man ejected from your house? If so, it is as much an admission of failure of management as the amputation of a limb is a failure of surgery. If the fellow has imbued just invite him to the office to "have one" with you, and, when he is out of the auditorium, pilot him to the front door.

(4) The patron is always right. If he or she says a film is not good, then it certainly has not been enjoyable for that patron, and you should proffer your sincere regrets. "Tam true you cannot accommodate all the requests of crazy people, but you can be patient and deferential. That type of patron is a gas-bag who chatters; so if you can convert him you will be considered the perfect manager by all who know him. You must agree with people as well as be agreeable or charming.

(5) You may have a notice, as obvious as a bull in a field, saying "Standing Room Only," yet some dreamy individuals are sure to complain that they did not see it. To such it is so easy to be rude if they are offensive (as is often the case), but sarcasm will be found to be the charm which parts patron and manager.

Niobe, All Smiles

(6) Like begets like—warmth of manner creates warmth—but a face like a frost-bitten apple will make the sweetest temperament turn to vinegar. To see some long-faced managers standing under an announcement of an appealing comedy is as attractive a picture as a gaunt gargoyle holding a soup plate.

Golf

The Fall Golf Tournament will be held late in September, probably at the Belleclair Golf Club, Bayside, L. I., where the Spring event proved so successful.

Here are figures of the Spring event:

Balance carried from Fall 1922 event $15.79

Receipts, Spring tournament $1,315.90

Total $1,331.69

Expenditures

Prizes $34.99

Belleclair Golf Club, $70.85

would think that that was the ideal opportunity for them to send out their salesmen and try to put the other fellows at a disadvantage and if they succeeded in getting a certain amount of business with these salesmen it would naturally have no doubt the effect of having some of the companies considerable competition pull out and everyone would be just where they started from. Nevertheless, bear in mind that it is the druggists, who finally makes the progress of the world and very frequently the thing that people say cannot be done is just the thing that will be done.

Putting It Over

Street Car Used to Advantage

Springfield, Mo.—When "The Christian" was shown at Landers Orpheum, Goldwynner Homer Gill, rented a street car for seven days and used it on the streets of the city for three days prior to the showing. On each side of the car was placed the 24-sheet poster of "The Christian," framed. The sides were also covered by moving billboards.

Tie-up With Biscuit Company

Joe Weil, "Big U" exploiter, has arranged a national tie-up on H. A. Snow's "Hunting Big Game in Africa," with the National Biscuit Co., and as a result, the biscuit company has published a special ten-color window card and window hanger, tying up their animal crackers in conjunction with the picture. The poster, shows an open box of animal crackers with the animals piling out and the words: "A circus For Children—Take Along—Barnum's Animal Crackers to "Hunting Big Game in Africa," with Gun and Camera, by H. A. Snow."

The biscuit salesmen will work in conjunction with Universal in arranging grocery store tie-ups wherever the picture is showing. Another part of the arrangement provides for the distributing by exhibitors of little pay envelopes containing animal crackers to children attending matinee performances of the film.

Screen Test Puts This Over

Seattle—Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum stopped traffic in the town when he advertised "Screen Tests for Sale." The screen test stunt in which local aspirants to screen honors were photographed on a truck in the principal streets of the town was used.

The Times carried a story daily, beginning three days in advance of the opening, while two other local papers each carried a story, prior to the opening.

An announcement was made that 30 girls would be given screen tests. Forms were provided which the applicants filled out, giving in detail those qualities fitting them for film work. Each afternoon and evening, beginning on the opening day, five girls were given tests.

The Mack Truck Co. furnished a truck on which the tests were shot. A special light wire was run out from the theater over the marquee and hooked to a battery of five Klieg lights mounted on a truck. In the afternoon the truck worked on location on the principal streets and at night with the battery of lights going the tests were made in front of the theater. An announcement was made that the tests would be shown the following week at the Coliseum.

In the Courts

A jury in the City Court gave a verdict for Fox Film in a suit brought against it on an assigned claim for $1,250, as a balance due for film-mending machines. Fox contended that it paid the bill in full for $2,773.

The Nu-Art Picture Corp. has contested judgment in the Supreme Court favor of the Commonwealth Film Corp., for $28,237. The confession, signed by Jacob S. List, as president, states that on Nov. 10, 1921, Commonwealth lent Nu-Art $18,000 and on Nov. 18 that year lent $10,000 more. The balance of the judgment is for interest and costs.

Kansas City—A jury in the Federal Court here has awarded a verdict of $76,070 against the Orpheum Theater & Realty Co., in favor of the Clark estate. The plaintiff charged that the theater company did not keep the house in good condition and charged neglect during the time of the lease. The suit has been active in the courts since May 21, over 50 witnesses having been called.

Auburn, N. Y.—Judge Farmer, of the Municipal Court, in dismissing the suit of Marie Wilsey against the Robbins Syracuse Theater Co., decided that patrons must wait for an usher in a theater when the lights are dimmed or assume the risk of injury while trying to select a seat. Miss Wilsey filed suit against the theater company when she sustained a broken knee cap while walking down the aisle when the lights were dimmed. She sued for $2,000.

The Verona Theater Co., Inc., has sued Abraham L. Sichman in the Supreme Court for alleged false representation in the sale of the theater at 856 Mt. Prospect Ave., Newark, N. J. It is alleged that Sichman said the expenses were not over $300 a week and that the profits were not less than $50 and that there were contracts for only 30 features, none of which had been shown before. It is alleged that the expenses were more and the profits less than represented, and that Sichman had contracted for 250 features, many of which had been shown previously. The plaintiff signed a lease on the property for ten years at $3,500 a year, agreed to pay $3,000 for the good will, of which $2,000 was in cash and $1,000 in notes. The plaintiff sues for the $2,000 and to cancel the notes.

Hearing in Philadelphia Revolves Around Money Borrowed by Stanley From Famous (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Philadelphia — That the Stanley Company of America borrowed $2,000,000 from Famous Players-Lasky in July, 1918, one month after the organization of the Stanley Company, was the outstanding bit of testimony offered by John J. McQuirk, Vice-President, at the opening session of the Federal Trade Commission investigation yesterday.

According to terms of the agreement, the money was to be used in the expansion of the exhibiting end of the business in this territory and called for a cash payment of $500,000 and 50,000 shares of stock of Famous Players, 7,500 of which were to be redeemed at the call of the Stanley Company. For this advance Famous Players was required to set aside 25% of Stanley giving it less than a 50% interest.

It developed later that Famous Players had been given notes to the full amount by the Stanley Company. For collateral, Stanley gave Famous Players 26,600 shares of Class B stock in the former company. Of the 15,000 shares of Famous stock turned over to Stanley, it was brought out that 7,500 shares had been turned back to Famous by Stanley for $750,000. This testimony made by McQuirk was designed to show that the Famous Players loan to Stanley was for $1,250,000 and that Stanley only held 7,500 shares of Famous Players stock.

"At the time this loan was arranged, wasn't it understood that you would take 10% of Famous Players out?" (Continued on Page 2)

Says Hugo Riesenfeld, Back from Abroad—Europeans Think Our Stories "Too Filmy.

"In Europe the stones are living and the people are dead," declared Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rialto and Rivoli theaters, just back from a two months' vacation abroad. Europeans are today in a morbid frame of mind, according to Riesenfeld, an aftermath of the war. For this reason, he said, morbid pictures and pictures of intense dramatic value are liked. At the present time, he said, European picture patrons are criticizing American productions because they think our stories "too filmy and uniform." (Continued on Page 6)

Griffith Office Claims Comedian Never Informed Them of Proposed European Trip

The D. W. Griffith office intimated very strongly yesterday so that unless some sort of settlement was made by Al Jolson upon his return to the States the matter will be taken to the courts.

G. J. Lloyd of the Griffith forces, yesterday that the producer had been set back about $70,000 on the Jolson production. Lloyd stated that all of the sets had been completed and two weeks of preliminary work gone through. It is asserted that Jolson failed to appear at Mamanonck on Friday and again on Saturday and that, despite repeated efforts to reach him, no information was secured. Lloyd also stated yesterday that officially his organization had not even been informed that Jolson had sailed. The agreement, it is claimed, covered 10 weeks.

Yesterday morning papers quoted Mrs. Jolson as saying that the comedian was won out by his long tour in "Bombo, " and that the picture would be resumed upon his return. Actual shooting was to start yesterday morning. Griffith will not go ahead with the picture with Jolson replaced in the case.

The trouble is understood to have arisen over the screening of some "crushes" at the studio which were seen by Jolson. He is said to have remarked that he would never do a screen actor.

Memory Contest

Plan of New Company—Prominent Producers in Line With New Scheme

The Cinema Contest Syndicate of Hollywood has been formed with J. C. Jessen the active head in charge of production and John S. Wooly, Fred Grainger and Ralph Proctor in charge of distribution.

The company plans to wage a battle in production, involving the distribution of $100,000 in cash prizes to patrons of theaters on the following basis: first prize, $10,000; second, $7,500; third, $5,000; fourth, $4,000; fifth, $3,500; sixth, $3,000; seventh, $2,500; eighth, $2,000; ninth, $1,500; tenth, $1,000; next hundred, $200 each; next four hundred, $100 each.

The contest is to cover 13 weeks. Thirty-nine productions will be used as the basis from which scenes, each from 40 to 50 feet in length will be selected and the main title examiner for the theater goes to guess. Three subjects will be shown weekly. After the 13 weeks have elapsed, there will be a contest review week in which all of the 39 subjects will be shown at once. A tie-up has been made with the National Newspaper Service of Chicago to secure material which will be available to one newspaper in each city or town. Each contestant will be required to answer four questions on each subject: the name of the producer, the name of production; the name of the star and an outline in 25 words of the moral taught by the picture. Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles will act as trustee of the awards.

The new company plans to sell the service to exhibitors. A directory of names of producers and the like will also be sold. The producers who will contribute material include: Universal, Prinipal, Mack Sennett, Thomas H. Ince, Famous Players-Goldwyn, F. B. O. Hodkinson, Selnick, Marshall Neilan, Irving Thalberg, James James, William Griffith, Al Lichtman, Preferred, Metro, Triart, Arrow, Cosmopolitan, Hope Hampton and Jesse Robbins.

Europe Tired

Riesenfeld said that he replied to these criticisms by pointing out that the next crop of pictures, which have not yet been shown in Europe, will show a marked improvement.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the theaters I visited abroad were bad. Exhibition is sadly neglected. There is not much of a picture theater going public in Europe. The attitude of the bourgeoisie toward pictures is about the same as that of our better class 10 years ago.

Europeans now only care for pictures depicting strong emotion. This is natural, for the war cut eight years out of the development of pictures abroad, which would be equivalent to 800 years in the development of any of the other arts. European orchestras are very good, but as a whole the conducting is mediocre. The orchestra is not the specialty there that it is here, and there is little or no attempt to vary programs by introduction of prologues, song and dance numbers and other specialties."

"Picture actors in Europe think America is a paradise and are looking longingly toward America hoping that a Zukor, a Fox or a Laemmle will give them the coveted chance."

"Central Europe is afraid of American competition. They feel that they cannot compete with us, for in the first place it is hard to raise money to finance production on a large scale, and they haven't the market. There is hardly any theater building in Europe to speak of."

$1,614,044 In Rentals
Spent by Stanley Co. in 1922—Famous Players Got the Largest Amount, 1st Nat'l Second
(By Long Distance Phone)
Philadelphia—The Stanley Company of America spent $1,614,044 in rentals during 1922 and of that amount Famous Players received the most, with a total of $483,722. This was brought about by cross-examination of Jack Belmar, booker for the Stanley Booking Corp. at yesterday's Trade Commission hearing here.
The testimony revealed the following amounts paid by Stanley and the companies that received them:

Famous Players $483,722
First Nat'l 317,905
Metro 113,775

Total $915,402

Of the remainder, $302,317 was paid by Stanley for short subjects, and features not considered competition products, likewise $360,275 paid in rentals for pictures produced and handled by companies considered in competition with Famous, First National and Metro. Further facts revealed disclosed the following paid out in rentals:

- Fox $170,000
- Pathé $81,000
- Electric Theater 75,000
- Masterpiece 68,047

Of the Fox total, from 25 to 33% was paid out for short subjects of the Electric Theater Supply Co., which handled the materials from the above companies. It was developed that $396,275 was paid in rentals for pictures produced and handled by companies considered in competition with Famous, First National and Metro.

Resign? Untrue

Says Cohen Relative to Article Published in Trade Paper—Issues Statement
(Special to THE FILMDAILY)

Chicago—The Exhibitors Herald, says, in part, that H. S. Cohen, re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America for his fourth successive term at the recent Chicago convention, is ready to resign.

"The only thing standing in the way of his removing himself from office is whether he can obtain "terms," which will satisfy him and the men standing with him. Cohen is in no mood to surrender completely to his critics."

Regarding which Sydney S. Cohen yesterday issued a lengthy statement saying in part:

"The statement which appeared in the current issue of the Exhibitors Herald, published by Martin Quigley of Chicago, that I agreed to resign the presidency of the M. P. T. O. A. is untrue and manufactured out of whole cloth. Whatever negotiations or arrangements existed regarding the withdrawal of my name as a candidate for presidency were made to the election of officers in the Chicago [Continued on Page 2]

Urges Central Depots

Arthur S. Friend Favors Concentrated Distribution—Finds Aronson Article Interesting
Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive Pictures Corp., finds "much that is interesting" in the Aronson article on distribution, published recently.

In that connection, Friend again urges for the establishment of Central depots to handle distribution.

"Reismic," says Friend referring to concentration of studio production, maintained his peated allegations of waste in the production of pictures merely as a preface to what he has to say about distribution and the cure of its ills. I am not able to follow him all the way, but I do think he has much to say which is interesting and which is worthy of serious consideration on the part of everybody concerned in the industry. Whether a given thing is or is not waste in production is hard to determine, but it is very often what seems to be waste adds value; but as I have said before in addressing this audience, there is no compensation possible for the loss of anything that is waste in distribution. The selling cost that the exhibitor pays in excess of a rational profit is cost that nobody can assess.

"Human Wreckage" the anti-marriage film opens at the Lyric tonight. Mrs. Wallace Reid who arrives from the coast this morning for the premiere will be met at the station by the Exceptional Photoplays Committee.

Advance Deal with Ray

Associated Exhibitors, Inc., officially announce what THE FILM DAILY has already stated on several occasions: that the company will distribute the future Charles Ray Prod.

Ray Incorporates for $1,000,000
(Special to THE FILMDAILY)

Los Angeles—Charles Ray, has filed articles for incorporation for the Charles Ray Enterprises of California. The capital stock is $1,000,000.

Ince Buys Maxwell Story

Screen rights to "A Little More," by W. B. Maxwell, have been sold to Thomas H. Ince by Brandt & Kirkpatrick. They have also sold Dan Burnet's "The Shining Adventure" to Robert Edgar Long and Charles Bryant.

New Allen Failure

Distributing Company in Difficulty—Handles Many American Brands
(Special to THE FILMDAILY)

Toronto—H. M. Goodman has been appointed interim receiver of the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., under order of the court. This is the company operated for many years by Jule and J. J. Allen.

This notice indicates the financial collapse of a second Allen enterprise. Famous Players Film Service is one of the oldest exchange systems in Canada, has held the Goldwyn franchise since Goldwyn entered the field and has marketed various well-known Makes of productions. The company has been operating offices in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and St. John. Only recently an announcement was made that the company would take care of the physical distribution of Edwinson releases in Eastern Canada.

The company has been conducted under a comparatively small capitalization. Recent figures showed that the outstanding stock was $500 share, with a par value of $50, of which $22,475 had been paid up. A large business had been transacted in prior years and the profits until some months ago were considered large.

Jule and J. J. Allen still have other interests, including Dominion Films Ltd., which handles numerous British features in Canada.

To Meet in Paris

(Special to THE FILMDAILY)

Paris—F. Bruce Johnson, foreign manager of First National plans to meet Robert Lief in Paris in a few weeks. They will both return to London where a sales convention will be held.

Ince Buys Maxwell Story

Screen rights to "A Little More," by W. B. Maxwell, have been sold to Thomas H. Ince by Brandt & Kirkpatrick. They have also sold Dan Burnet's "The Shining Adventure" to Robert Edgar Long and Charles Bryant.

Courtland Smith Off to Coast

Courtland Smith of the Hays office has left for the Coast where he will address the National Education Association at Oakland July 28 and later visit the Motion Picture Exposition at Los Angeles before returning East.
URGES CENTRAL DEPOTS

"For a long time I have agitated the creation of central film depots for handling national motion pictures. But I don't believe that one can successfully combine the selling of the pictures of various producers in one central office, exchange, depot or exposition. It would be a big step in advance, and enough to start on the much needed practice of economy in the industry. If the film depots for the physical handling of pictures only were established in the present exchange points, the films should be owned and managed independently of any producers or distributors who avail themselves of their facilities. No exhibitor cares who delivers the package. Selling, I think should be done away from the depots and as small, directly by the producer himself."

Owen Moore in "Thundergate"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—First National has engaged Owen Moore to play the lead in "Thundergate."

Fox In Texas

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Austin—The Fox Film Corp., of Texas, with offices at Dallas, has been chartered in the Secretary of State's office with a capital of $5,000. Incorporators are J. H. Gardner, E. V. Ederott and T. O. Mitchell.

Goldwyn "Dark Room" Abolished

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Culver City, Cal.—As a result of a recent experiment, the "dark room" on the Goldwyn lot has been abolished. It has been found out that orange light does not hurt film and thereby the room can be brightly illuminated with the lights of this color.

FINDS BIG PRODUCTIONS FAVORED

Los Angeles—James R. Grainger in the Examiner says:

"Big productions are more and more in demand. In fact, I believe that in the smaller communities the demand for spectacle and lavish productions is going ahead even of that in the larger cities."

Jesse D. Hampton Back in L. A.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Jesse D. Hampton has returned here from New York. He has given up his plans for a European trip this summer.

Karl Anderson, formerly with Hampton, has joined the Tod Brown in "Day of Faith" company.

BLANK MANAGERS CHANGED

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Des Moines—The Blank Theatrical Enterprises has made the change of two local managers, D. C. Burgum, who has been handling the Garden, has assumed the management of the Rialto, while M. Overman, who formerly ran the Rialto goes to the Garden at Davenport.

convention. The voice of the convention as expressed through the delegates attending it has determined my course.

"The persistence with which Mr. Quigley has misrepresented events connected with the Chicago convention of our organization, his very manifest desire to create dissensions in our ranks, may have a reason more deep-seated than surface manifestations indicate."

The statement then discusses Quigley at some length, ending with the declaration that Quigley is wrong, but despite this Cohen "beats him no ill will." The statement continues:

"Our time now is being taken up with the effect of the plans formulated at the convention, and by our Board of Directors since, in working constructively for the benefit of all theater owners. Our program is an extensive and important one."

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Des Moines—A permit has been issued by the building department for the erection of a new $50,000 exchange building. The site is at 10th and High Sts. First Nat'l and Universal have already signed for space.

GERMAN PRODUCTION BETTER

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Berlin—Despite the many complaints of film producers that the cost of production is so high, the studios are busier than ever. The smaller companies have not as yet recommended work but they are expected to follow suit soon.

Ku Klux Favors "Blue Laws"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Austin—As a result of the recent upstart made by some local exhibitors, who when arrested for opening their theaters on Sundays, contrary to the new law, the Ku Klux has made public a letter in which they declare their intention of observing the law.

A First National Picture

Depend on First National!

Following Belmar on the stand, Robert Lynch, Metro manager, called. He testified that the Metro Philadelphia exchange was not owned by Metro, that it was an independent proposition and held a Metro franchise. He said that shares were distributed as follows: Jules Mastbaum, 600; Sablosky and McGuirk, 200; Lynch, 200. Sablosky and McGuirk are officers of the Stanley Company while Lynch is a small stockholder.

Morris Wolf, secretary of the Metro exchange and also general counsel was the next witness. He was dealing with the reorganization of the Peerless Feature Film Co., which once held the First National franchise. Wolf stated under reorganization, the First National franchise was taken away from Peerless and turned over to a new company called Associated First Pictures Corp., of Eastern Pennsylvania. Under this reorganization, Wolf asserted, the first National company carried 51 shares and the Eastern Pennsylvania sub-franchise holder 49 shares. He said that the Stanley Company was interested in this company by virtue of the fact that it held sub-franchise and because its officers were stockholders.

Wolf testified that John Mc Guirk, who is a vice-president of the Stanley Co., was president of Peerless and that when the first National company was formed, Peerless did not liquidate but continued to sell pictures. This occurred in 1921.

W. H. Fuller of Government counsel then read into the record the form of contract which all exhibitors using the services of the Stanley Booking Corp. had to fill. Fuller referred to the previous Government investigation of the Stanley Company and said that the form of contract had now been changed.

Walter Vincent, of the Wiltern and Vincent Theater Co., was one of the principal witnesses of yesterday’s session.

Vincent told of his firm’s affiliations with the Stanley Co. of America, which included theaters in Reading, Allentown and Harrisburg. Besides having small interests in the Capital and Rahay theaters, Vincent testified, the Stanley Co. has an 18% interest in the Colonial, Hippodrome and Rialto at Allentown, and a third interest in the Colonial, Victoria, Grand and Capital at Harrisburg. Vincent stated that Somewhat Enterprises Inc., his firm and Arthur Lips had equal interests in the Odeon, Bijou, Colonial and Folly at Atlantic, and similar holdings with Robert Guckenheimer as the fourth party in Savannah.

The witness testified that the Richmond, Va., holdings of William Vincent are, shared equally with E. F. Albee, John J. Murdock and the Bell Amusement Co. He declared that some of his theatres were booked through the Stanley Booking Corp., and others by themselves directly, and admitted that both he and Wiltern held stock as individuals of the firm, and that he had been elected a director, but had not attended any of the meetings.

Other witnesses of the day included numerous Philadelphia exchange managers whose occupancy of the stand was comparatively brief.

Edgar Moss, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan manager, stated that 95% of his company’s product is sold before being made, and that the policy of the company has been to sell to groups, although the Stanley Co. bought only at a time.

Charles Henschel of Pathe, said that his exchange for the past year has handled only short subjects and a few re-issues, and that the Stanley Co. had taken practically all of their short subject output for the last ten years.

William Humphries and Joseph Heubrev, of the Hodgkinson and Fox exchanges respectively, both of whom have held their present positions for less than three months, were excused from testifying when Chief of the Government Fuller said that their brief tenure of office had not sufficiently familiarized them with conditions in the territory to enable them to provide the information desired.

The hearing in Philadelphia was brought to a close yesterday. It will be resumed on July 16 in Atlanta. Sixty witnesses were subpoenaed by the Government for the hearing here and of that number only 16 testified. In all, 25 witnesses have been called already and one more is on the stand. The Government admits that it will not find it necessary to go to the coast because Fuller feels he has secured all the testimony he wants here in the Eastern States.

Grand-Asher Releases

Among the scheduled forthcoming productions of Grand-Asher Pictures are: “The Pride of Possession,” “The Satin Girl,” “After Marriage,” “Man Made Law,” “Other Men’s Daughters,” “Soul and Body,” “I Am the Man,” “Leave it to Betty,” “Mine to Keep,” and “The Love Trap.” In addition to these feature productions Grand-Asher state that their organization will release 36 comedies.

At Broadway Theaters

Capitol

The main attraction at the Capitol this week is Pola Negri in “Passion.” Due to the length of this film the only other numbers are a prologue and a closing selection on the organ.

Rialto

A selection from “The Blue Paradise” is played as the overture, followed by Bernstein’s Classical Jazz, “Yes We Have No Bananas,” the Magic of “Homing,” sung by Frederick Barke, baritone; Jane Novak in “Divorce” and C. Sharpe Minor in the Warbler. Lord Hamilton brings the bill with “The Educator.”

Rivoli

“The Marche Slave” is the overture. Next comes a Revue Russe, “Russian Flashlights,” a scene and “Medieval Russia,” by the Rivoli Ensemble. Emil Jennings in “Peter the Great” is then reviewed, followed by Bing Gail, mandolinist and “Buster” Keaton in “Day Dreams.”

Strand

The current Strand program consists of a Novelty Overture, “Odd and Ends,” a compilation of short subjects, the Topical Review, a prologue to the feature “Period and Sam,” and a new Sunshine Comedy, “Circus Pals.” Percy Haines loses the performance with an organ solo.

At Other Houses

“The Isle of Love Ships” is the feature at the Broadway, “Main Street” at the Strand and “Enemies of Women” at the Cameo. “The Covered Wagon” is in its 15th week at the Criterion while “H mam Wreckage” opens at the Lyric today.

Dan Fish with Preferred

FILM DAILY MORALITY

Will be one of the Big box-office Sensations of the decade!

WATCH FOR IT! It's a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL
Newspaper Opinions

“Penrod and Sam”—First Nat’l Strand

AMERICAN—It is a moving example of what is meant by that elusive phrase—whole-some entertainment. “Penrod and Sam” has a cast that in itself could not help but make any picture succeed, but the unusually good picture and unusually good entertainment.

DAILY NEWS—Don’t miss this picture! It’s great!

EVENING JOURNAL—There is more pure, unadulterated joy to be had out of this Booth Tarkington story than there would be derived from hearing one’s landlord say that tomorrow the rent would be reduced fifty per cent.

EVENING WORLD—*if you wish to forget the heat just go off to the Strand and live the lives of the wonderland characterizations. It’s real summertime entertainment and we came away from the Strand feeling decidedly better for having seen it.

HERALD—the first real reproduction of Booth Tarkington’s stories that has ever been made on the screen. Consequently, it is a marvellously satisfactory picture.

We are grateful for “Penrod and Sam.” It is a motion picture that we have wanted to see for a long time.

MAIL—All the joy, pathos, mischief and delights of boyhood in a small town have been pictured most successfully in “Penrod and Sam.” ***

MORNING TELEGRAPH—*a thoroughly delightful picture, as a great deal of the novel’s charm has survived the transition to the screen, and a most competent assortment of juvenile performers  do full justice to the characters created for them by Booth Tarkington.

SUN—This adventure into juvenile psychology is an entertaining photodrama as one could find throughout the length and breadth of Broadway, and can still be credited with being an observant and legitimate light comedy.

TELEGRAM—The major portion of the picture is one succession of laughs, chuckles and smiles. There are moments of tenderness and pathos, however, especially the scene which shows the death of Penrod’s dog, Duke.

TIMES—Seldom has a picture been produced with the striking humor and pathos  in it they have discovered two capable boys stars * * Ben Alexander and John Butterworth. ***

TRIBUNE—The picture follows the story absolutely, and it should be enjoyed by all who love Tarkington. It is really remarkably well done, with a fine understanding of the author’s moods and subtleties. Neither the scenario writer nor the director has tried to improve the story.

WORLD—You may take the whole family to see this picture, as it seems to contain precious little of dramatic value, its backbone having been largely sacrificed to purity.

“Divorce”—F. B. O. Rialto

AMERICAN—The whole film is exceedingly indoors and amusing.

EVENING JOURNAL—Jane Novak, looking very pretty, is starred opposite John Bowes, who is playing the part of the marauding husband, Philip Litec. Miss Novak, child star, was too young to understand what all the foolishness was about, and therefore did the best acting of the cast.

EVENING WORLD—There is nothing especially new in its theme or in the working out of the story of “Divorce.” Miss Novak does fine work as the wife, as does John Bowes as the husband.

MAIL—Despite the falsity of its title, the film does nothing more than tell the sad little story about how the bad man, meaning success, came one and stole away “Ducky” Parker’s daddy from his very pretty and rather aimless mamma.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—*conventional story * * done rather well, and succeeds in entertaining at least. The work of Jane Novak in the role of the wife is particularly commendable.

SUN—*The cast is good and succeeds in entertaining, at any rate.

TELEGRAM—*made an immediate appeal at the Rialto Theater.

TIMES—The story is just what one might expect, and the subtitles are so exasperating by reason that it is a relief when the production comes to an end.

TRIBUNE—The story sounds like all that everybody could remember of something he read in the newspaper at a hurried breakfast.

WORLD—Chester Bennett,  was passing a dull afternoon in Hollywood. * * * As he sped the home edition,  “The headline, ‘Divorce!’ yelled at him from the yellow bottle. His feet came off the desk abruptly and he seized the telephone. Five minutes later author Andrew Bennett was in the office.

“Bennett!” said Bennett, “here’s a knock-down box office title; ‘Divorce!’ You've up a story of some sort and we'll shoot it next week.”

---

“Peter the Great”—F. P. L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—Jannings is powerful figure with a presence that is impressive and compelling. As Peter the Great he is placed in a background as vivid and as endless as the role he portrays. ***

The story is historically dramatic; the settings, effective; and the action is swift and compelling.

DAILY NEWS—*colorful, remarkable film portraying the reign of the great Russian empire builder.

There is interest in it for everybody. ***

The cast comprises Europe’s foremost motion picture actors and actresses. The settings are excellent.

EVENING JOURNAL—Although it tells somewhat with the facts of history, it is none the less one of the most smoothly flowing, compact and convincing pictures of its kind. It is the story of what luminous cutting will be. Originally eleven reels in length, it has been trimmed to six, and apparently without the loss of anything essential.

EVENING WORLD—The photography is superb and the work of Jannings at all times, as Peter the Great, is masterful and well worth the trip to the Rivoli.

MAIL—Each incident is placed with a high degree of intensity. Several of them achieve greatness and will remain in the minds of those who view this motion picture long after they have seen it.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is impressive, interesting, tragic and romantic. ***

TELEGRAM—*Jannings does great acting as the cruel despot, ***

SUN—To put it succinctly, this picture lacks the gripping dramatic which characterized every minute of the actual life of the interesting Czar.

TELEGRAM—Peter the Great takes its place beside “Deception,” in which Jannings played Henry VIII; “The Loves of Pharaoh,” in which he had the part of Pharaoh Amenmon; and “Passion,” now at the Capitol, in which he played Louis XIV.

TIMES—*should serve as an inspiration for all producers of motion pictures, for it gives a story of the moody Russian Czar with compelling acting, remarkable costumes, wonderful settings, original photography, and lighting and capable sustained dramatic interest. It is an historical photodrama that rivals all others of its kind, and one in which the director has ably counseled upon the story and the acting of his stars without resorting in any instance to anything in the form of hokum.

TRIBUNE—It is one of the best across-the-water productions we have seen. While we cannot thoroughly recommend this portrayal of the life of the great Russian ruler, we also cannot deny that it was an interest in us whatever side from admiration for his perfect technique.

We consider him a remarkably fine actor, and he is surrounded by fine actors and actresses.

Carolina Meeting
Large Attendance Expected—First Meeting Since Unit Seceded from National M. P. T. O.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Wrightsville Beach, N. C.—The M. P. T. O. of North Carolina starts its annual convention today. A large attendance is looked for in view of the fact that the first meeting of the organization since the unit withdrew from the National M. P. T. O. was held here.

The executive committee met last night preliminary to the actual convention. Following the annual report today and the announcement of the standing committees, Frank J. Rembusch will deliver an address on projection, and a representative of the Film Exchange Manager Ass'n of Charlotte will talk on the importance of prompt film shipments. In the afternoon, an address will be made by a representative of the Hays organization, and one by Al Hicks, exploitation man formerly with the Famous Players.

Tomorrow, the principal business will be in the hands of officers. H. B. Varner, of Lexington, will discuss the music tax situation, and the Honorable A. Sams, of the Pilot theater, Winston-Salem, will make the annual report of admission and seating capacity taxes.

Afternoon addresses will include a discussion on "Should Admission Prices be Uniform or Fixed According to the Cost of Film," lead by James A. Estridge of the Gastonia theater, Gastonia; "Fire Insurance Rates for Motion Picture Theaters," by Col. Walker Taylor of Wilmington; a report of the better films committee, and one from the financial committee. In the evening there will be a banquet.

Lloyd D. Willis of the Hays office left for the Carolina convention yesterday. Charles C. Pettijohn intended going but was taken ill.

Leave for Coast Today
Earl W. Hammons, F. B. Bruneneck, his personal representative, A.
Christie and Harry Edwards leave for the coast today. The latter two arrived from Europe on the Olympic yesterday.

"U" Plans Three More Universal plans to release a special group of pictures next week in which there will be eight all told. "The Roaring Forties" and "The Man Without a Conscience" will probably be in that group and also "Morality about which considerable fuss is being made at Universal. They will have all-star casts.

Brandt To Fight Admission Tax
In a statement issued yesterday discussing the admission tax, William Brandt, president of the State M. P.
T. O., declares that a fight against the admission tax will be launched soon. He stated that "the admission tax repeal is an imperative, urgent matter, and allows for procornization." Other matters to be taken up will be reduction of film rentals, elimination of the music tax, reduction of fire insurance rates, improvement of terms in the present uniform contract, and correction of legislation favorable to the industry.

Brandt asks theater owners over the country to communicate with the New York M. P. T. O. regarding these questions.

Lloyd Here
Harold Lloyd arrived in town yesterday. Mrs. Lloyd, John Nagold and Mrs. Nagold were with him. Nagold will represent Lloyd in the East. I. D. Williams was scheduled to come East with Lloyd from the Coast. Williams was in Chicago Tuesday, but, according to his office, "was out of town" yesterday but was expected today.

May Increase Tax
France Considering Jailing Up of Ad Valorem Duty on Imports—Is Now 20% Measure
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Paris—The Government is considering an increased tax on the ad valorem duty on imported films. The levy is now 20%.

The State may obtain close on to 5,000,000 francs from film taxes this year. If the tax is increased, the drop in revenue accruing from amusements caused by the Amendment Barthe will probably be made up. The boom-ering, however, may occur in the admission prices levied by exhibitors because if the tax is increased will be passed off on importer and exchangers to the exhibitor who will in turn pass it on to the public. This will be particularly aggravating in view of the high rate of taxation now in force.

Declare a 2% Dividend
The directors of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., at a meeting Tuesday, voted to declare a 2% dividend on the preferred stock for the second quarter of 1923 to stockholders of record as of June 30. This makes the complete payment of all dividends on preferred stock since the organisation of the company, March 1, 1921.

Hart's Contract for Nine Pictures
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—William S. Hart's contract with Famous Players covers nine pictures. Each will cost $200,000 and under the contract, Famous holds an option of renewal. The arrangement is a 70-30 one on the gross re-cipts. The first picture will be placed in production in about 10 days.

True Won't Talk Refuses to Comment on Reported Dearth of Activity in Theater Owners Distributing Corp.
W. A. True, president of the Theater Owners Distributing Corp., the exhibitor-distributor unit formed last fall in Chicago, refused to comment yesterday on current reports which indicated that the company had become inactive in operations.

It is the opinion of local film men that the company can no longer lineup pictures and can start releasing in the fall and the Missouri query was:
what is the organization doing?

THE FILM DAILY extended the courtesy to Mr. True of replying to these reports but True declared he had nothing to say and then amplified that by adding that it was not understanding the Hays office and First National were anxious to learn about the activities of the exhibitor-distributing organization and were using this publication for this purpose.

Warners Sign Hines
Johnny Hines has been signed by Warner Bros. for an indefinite period and will be featured in a number of forthcoming pictures. He recently completed "Little Johnny Hines.

Earle Engaged by Vitagraph
It is understood that William S. Earle has been engaged by Vitagraph to direct a special production which will be made in the East. The Vitagraph publicity department claimed to know nothing of this yesterday. "Tut-Ankh-Amen" Earle's new piece has been changed to "The Dancer of the Nile".

Fischer Not Paramount Ally
S. R. Kent yesterday denied the report published in Monday's issue of the Fischer chain of Wisconsin theaters which is negotiating for new houses in that territory is a Paramount subsidiary. Kent stated that Paramount has no theaters in Wisconsin "nor any thought in mind of securing some" and that Fischer merely uses the Paramount service.

M.E.O.W! Wonder whether Sydney Cohen will ever resign?
28 Houses In Deal

(Continued from Page 1) it has been pointed out that the interest of Jule and J. Allen in that house comprised 3,219 shares of common stock with a total par value of $320,900. The Vancouver theatre was erected on leased land. W. P. Devecs, of the Allen, Winnipeg, states that the purchase would not affect that house because it is locally-owned.

There is doubt in the minds of some Allen managers regarding future activities, it is said, because of the possibility of doubling up of theaters in various cities under the one manager. There is an Allen house in almost every city in which Famous Players has established a Capitol.

Weingarten Leaves Saturday
Larry Weingarten of Sacred Films, Inc., leaves for the coast on Saturday.

Gladys Walton Marries
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Gladys Walton and H. M. Herbel, assistant general sales manager of Universal were married yesterday.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Red La Roque has signed a long term contract to appear in Cecil B. De Mille Productions.

Tourneur To Make "Two Vagrants"?
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Unconfirmed reports have it that Maurice Tourneur will direct "The Two Vagabonds" for First National.

Will Make 2-Reel Comedies
James E. Judiche, president of Lightning Films Co., states that his organization will shortly start making a series of 12 two-reel comedies featuring Dedic Zelde, vaudeville performer. Adelaide Rondelle, Judiche says, will be female lead.

Control Theaters in Paducah, Ky.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Paducah, Ky.—Leo Keller and Roy C. Davis are once more in complete control here through the purchase of the Stard from John Rehkof. Keller and Davis also control the Orpheum, Star, Cozy and Arcade and have houses in Owensboro, Fulton and Mayfield, Ky.

Ginsberg Back; Lichtman Going
Henry Ginsberg, sales manager of the Lichtman Corp., yesterday returned from a sales trip that took him through the Middle West. He found conditions generally very good, considering the time of the year. Lichtman leaves the end of the week, going straight to Denver and then working his way West.

German Company Crashes
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Berlin—The Trans-Continental Co. has stopped activities. Carl Bratz and Max Davidson were connected with the business end of the project and Emil Jannings and Werner Krauss in production as stars. The trouble is said to have arisen from the withdrawal of the financial support of a foreign monied man.

New Theaters
Nappanee, Ind.—J. R. Boice and his son G. S., of Wakarusa, have entered the exhibiting field. They will build a 600 seat house here and are negotiating for control of a theatre at Bremen.

Quincy, Ill.—U. M. Dailey, of St. Louis, representing a large theater company in that city, has bought two downtown sites for the erection of a new theater. Construction will begin within two weeks.

Fairmont, W. Va.—Harry Gordon is the manager of the new Fairmont which has just been opened. The house cost over $400,000 to erect.

Ocala, Fla.—R. G. Walker and J. W. Phillips are sponsoring the new theater, now under course of construction in the business district.

Norristown, Pa.—The old Grand Opera House, which was destroyed by fire last Dec. 18, will be replaced by a new structure, work on which has already started.

Shreveport, La.—Plans have been drawn for the erection of a new theater building to be started soon.

Hannum, Mass.—Although talk of buying one of the local theaters persist there is some discussion of the recently organized theater company of building a new house. The new company is comprised of local business men.
ANNOUNCEMENTS of coming pictures are a trade necessity. Elaborate promises are justified—

—if there’s something more behind the announcements than the paper they’re printed on.

Announcements mean little unless they’re backed up by the actual film exactly as promised.

You can’t run just announcements through your projection machine.

Your theatre can’t live on paper pictures.

With Paramount’s 1923-24 pictures (one a week) you don’t need to book just promises.

Paramount’s 1923-24 pictures are not paper pictures. Every one of the 11 pictures in Paramount’s current announcements for the first three months of the 1923-24 season is either finished and in the exchanges, finished and on the way to the exchanges, or actually in work at the Lasky or Long Island Studio.

Paramount urges exhibitors to see for themselves that every promise made in its announcement is fulfilled—and more. Prints of “The Cheat,” “Bluebeard’s 8th Wife,” and “Hollywood” will soon be in the exchanges. See them and know what hooking up with Paramount means to you and your business.

See the others of the first 11 of the One-A-Week Paramounts.

Then when we tell you that these are just glimpses of the riches ahead, that Paramount Pictures for the WHOLE season of 1923-24 will be consistently and progressively bigger and better, you’ll realize what Paramount’s new policy of producing only great, box-office specials actually means.

Doubt Over Winnipeg House
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Winnipeg—Some question has arisen over the ownership of the Allen theater here. It has been intimated in Toronto if the local house is not included in the sale to Famous Players, an allowance of $25,000 will be made off the purchase price of $650,000.
In the Courts

In a suit of Abram L. Libman against Glenn Hunter on a note for $2,000 made April 23 last, which was payable June 10, a default judgment for $2,000 has been filed in the City Court.

A default judgment for $1,369 has been filed in the City Court against Arnold Daly in a suit of Jacob Abrahams on a check drawn in Paris on January 1922, which was not paid because of insufficient funds.

The Rivoli Holding Co., Inc., has filed a default judgment for $4,750 in the Supreme Court against the Blaney Producing Co. for rent of the theater at 383 Washington Street, Newark, at $16,500 a year, which is unpaid.

A suit for $842 has been filed in the Supreme Court by the Commonwealth Film Corp. against Abraham Such, who conducted the Sayville Opera House at Sayville, L. I. The plaintiff claims $95 due for the film, "Capt. Kidd" and "The Adventures of Tarzan" which were shown at Sayville, and the remainder of the claim is for pictures ordered and not shown.

Pyramid Reorganizes

Greene and Rosett Resign—Arthur Smallwood New Head—To Make 8 Fall Specials

Walter E. Greene and Louis J. Rosett, president and vice-president respectively of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., have resigned and disposed of their holdings in the company. Greene will be succeeded as president by Arthur N. Smallwood, president of Smallwood & Co., which financed Pyramid, while Rudolph Berger has been elected vice-president and secretary with charge of sales and exploitation. The Smallwood interests now control Pyramid with stock holdings, the company states, representing 90% of the total capital stock. Frederick Gage will be the new treasurer with supervision over production.

The company's releases for next season are: "Wife in Name Only," "The Deerslayer," "Dixie," "The Broadway Butterfly," "Annie Laurie," and "Time." The newly reorganized company offers to convert all outstanding syndicate unitts into Pyramid 8% participating gold bonds. A statement explaining this move says that "we believe it is to the best interest of every unit holder to make the transfer for the best protection of his interest with the company."

"U" Plans Many Short Reels

Universal has completed plans for production of a good many series of short reels. The fourth group of "Leather Pushers" will head the list. There will be a series of two-reel comedies called "The Gumps"; a series of one-reelers with Neeley Edwards and one with Bert Roach; and a group of one-reelers with Charles Ogle. There will also be two features of a week of International News and the Century Comedies.

More Help From N. Y.

Would Help Salesmen in Field, Says Nat Royster Commenting on Aronson Article

A number of letters have been received from exhibitors commenting on "The Golden Bubble" by Alexander S. Aronson, published recently. Among the more interesting is one from Nat L. Rosser, managing director of Alcazar, Birmingham, Miss. Rosser feels that if the home offices of the various distributors worked closer to the men in the fields, a greater feeling of confidence would prevail in the business. His letter follows:

"I have just finished reading your recent article, by Alexander S. Aronson, entitled, "The Golden Bubble," and while he hits very close in a few instances, still from some of my experiences, I am under the impression that he is in error in most of his views."

"First, I am now an exhibitor-manager, formerly a salesman, publicity man, and have seen service in every branch of the industry for fifteen years."

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—It is learned that Arundale & Harris intend building a theater in every important city in this territory. The first centers to be invaded will be Long Beach, Los Angeles and Hollywood. The theater company has given up the Casino and the Century will be reverted back to owners the latter part of this month. The new expansion plan calls for one house in each city.

No Tie-Up With 'J. D.'

Harold Lloyd Denies Any Connection with Williams—Four More for Pathe

Harold Lloyd, in New York on his honeymoon trip, took a few minutes yesterday to say something about the future activities. This is what he said:

"That, contrary to report, he has no tie-up in any way with J. D. Williams."

"That, following "Why Worry?" he has three more pictures to release."

"That his trip here is for pleasure only and not concerned about future distribution since his arrangement with Pathe will keep him busy for another year."

"There's no foundation to the reports linking my activities with J. D. Williams," said Lloyd over the telephone. "There's no connection in any way."

Lloyd's statement was in response to a general question about the persistent reports of the Lloyd-Williams tie-up. This report stated that Williams had Lloyd under a five-year contract and that by the time the Pathe contract had run out, (Continued on Page 2)

Award Laemmle Prize in Fall

The awards to the winners of the Laemmle Scholarship Contest will be announced in the fall. The contest was open to college students and to the winner of the best scenario, the first prize will be $1,000 and an additional $1,000 to his college endowment fund. The winner will also be paid for the screen rights to the story.

Close Pittsburgh Deal

Pittsburgh—Rowland and Clark have booked the entire Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan product for first-run showings at the State and Blackstone and the first group of 11 for the Arcade, Minor, Strand, Belmar, Plaza and Arsenal. The first group has also been booked for theaters in Erie, Braddock, East Liberty, New Kensington and Titusville.

Weingarten To Make Comedy

Larry Weingarten expects to make a feature comedy starring a well-known stage comedian. According to Weingarten, all prints on the bible subjects made by Sacred Films have been called in and these pictures will hereafter be distributed through a non-theatrical organization. Before leaving the company, he will turn it over to the executors of the estate of the late Dr. H. Huntington.
Wait Till You See the Next One!

PARAMOUNT takes this opportunity of thanking many exhibitor friends who have personally complimented us upon our line-up of pictures for the first three months of 1923-24.

The widespread satisfaction with which Paramount's new policy of making only big, worthwhile specials (one a week) has been greeted, the enthusiasm with which such pictures as "Hollywood," "Bluebeard's 8th Wife," and "The Cheat" has been received by exhibitors at exchange showings, has been very gratifying.

It is even more gratifying to Paramount to be able to announce that the best is yet to come.

—that Paramount Pictures during the remaining months of 1923-24 will be even bigger and better than the 11 money-making specials of the first quarter.

Paramount's next announcement—temporarily withheld for exhibitors' protection—will present 19 productions of the highest artistic and box-office value ever attained in the history of motion pictures.

So, again thanking the army of exhibitors who have praised our present announcement, we say:

Wait till you see the next one!

Are Films Better?
Cincinnati.—Recent picture productions have been no better and no worse than or-did. It is an artistic improvement that is necessary—the greatest weakness still being in production and ee characterizations.

Cleveland.—However, there is a great tendenacy at this time to make each picture of eight reels in length. Too much waste footage, too much padding in general.

Columbus, O.—I note by the Ohio censor's reports that the product is unforgivable, in taste from all companies and especially from the Dallas.—Public demanding more and more pictures of the best actors and actresses go hand in hand with the best advertised star.

Des Moines.—I believe pictures are geting better, as the public is learning to appreciate finer things.

Detroit.—General run of pictures indicates that we are striving for length rather than quality. I suggest some concerted method of holding a story within the bounds of solid, neat pictures with a minimum of padding.

Evansville, Ind.—If producers could only be convinced that short comedies are not in popularity much could be done to clean up the industry.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—The average run of motion pictures is as good as it can be extected to be when nine out of ten pictures are based on stories which were popular and are supposed to have drawing power on that account.

 Ft. Worth, Tex.—City gives poor support to motion pictures for its size. Photoplag on marriage and divorce have lamentably large following. Believe rentals on good pictures too high, encouraging fostering of low taste.

Indianapolis.—I find that the picture feature one on the whole is getting better both as regards story and direction. The feature picture is being better cast. It seems that studio favorites are no longer being given leading roles.

Memphis, Tenn.—Less elaborate society dramas depicting life of jazz of the rich with elaborate settings and more wholesome human interest films.

Minneapolis.—The pictures I have witnessed recently have been notably free from offensive treatment of any kind, except race. Their chief failure has been lack of realism in pictures.

Unless you are dealing with matter that is frankly pornographic, give real artists an opportunity in direction and acting—and the morality of the results eventually will take care of them-

New York—Present day pictures are too long. Need somebody with judgment to know what stories really deserve lengthy

If we have held the position of reviewer for the past three months and in that time have seen every little of the outwardly offensive.
There is a long step forward in this respect.

Pittsburgh.—In the first place I do not think that the motion picture makers want to make any better pictures than the general average at present, and if they did I do not believe all the hodge-podge prescription for better pictures evolved from the results of a composite opinion of all the picture re-vievers in the world would help them any.

Too little consistency and ordinary life in the picture offerings. Departure from facts and radical liberties upon the part of directors would seem to be an outstanding defect.

Richmond, Va.—My observation leads me to believe that the great weakness in the pictures from a production standpoint lies in the editorial departments—in the selection of stories and in lack of coordination of the various factors connected in their production—the author, continuity writer, director and editor.

Rochester, N. Y.—Thoughts, character and unfolding, real problems of real life—rather than papacy, exotic stories and bizarre dress (or undress) would I think, improve the movies pretty.

I feel that the tendency to exaggeration in all classes of life and people depicted in a serious fault in the movies. Poverty and class distinction are all over-emphasized in the average film. This constitutes a real danger, I feel, in sowing seeds of discontent and misunderstanding.

Springfield, Mass.—Directors pay too much attention to star system. Emotional placards displayed with annoying frequency.

Caricues, inept and ambiguous titles often spoil an otherwise good picture.

I believe that too much consideration is directed to the undeveloped intellects in the audiences.

St. Louis—As to the general run of productions: I find that there has been little reason to waste my time seeing them.

Televiza.—It is my opinion that feature films, many of which now take from 70 to 80 minutes, might be cut down to run, say 40 to 45 or 50 minutes, with a consequent saving to the makers. I would suggest that the short films, for educational, become more abundant on picture house programs.

Washington.—In my humble opinion, the only outstanding progress in the film recently has been entirely a matter of isolated individual achievement.

"Human Wreckage"—F. B. O.

Lyric

AMERICAN—The wrestling match, put on in the latter part of the film and in a lone cove on the Pacific coast, was the selection of last night’s audience as the best moment of the film.

"That there was not a dry eye in the house, the film can be attributed to the subject, a difficult one to handle, honestly albeit entertainingly. The producers have made a good compromise between these two sentimental qualities."

DAILY NEWS—There can be no doubt that this splendid characterization film will meet with at least some success. While the story is morbid and depressing, it is appealing and most effective.

"Human Wreckage" is well worth seeing.

EVENING JOURNAL—should have a considerable influence, in interesting the public at large in the perils of the drug traffic.

An annual amount of heavy emotional acting from the cast.

The big thrill comes when a taxi driver drives madly through the city into an oncoming locomotive.

Mr. Rea’s performance reflects intelligence and poise.

EVENING WORLD—But "Human Wreckage" is also a good picture in setting forth the story of the havoc wrought by drugs, though, of course, it could not but part of the tale.

"Human Wreckage," in dealing with drug addicts is not exactly entertaining, but it is not unnecessarily harrowing.

MAIL—"Human Wreckage" should be a great power in stamping out the traffic.

Unlike other propaganda pictures this one has the ring of authority.

Such details as photography, acting and staging were given as much attention as in any feature picture.

MORNINg TELEGRAPH—The whole picture is well handled, and the subject is dealt with seriously and in an effectively as possible.

There are many scenes which may offend the squeamish, but they are necessary for the success of the picture.

The acting is excellent in every instance. In some cases it is little short of wonderful. Some of the best emotional artists in pictures have been called upon to appear in this picture, and they have been well directed.

POST—portrays in a simple and direct manner, with emotional texture, the story of some drug addicts at Hollywood.

SUN—There is no denying its effectiveness as theatrical property, but it harrows one and makes one think.

There are strains of melodrama.

In short, the picture is a thriller.

It will make a lot of money. To us, however, its value as propaganda seems somewhat doubtful.

TELGRAN—* * * the film deserves commendation for its own sake. It is a notably beautiful picture, showing some of the finest photography that the screen has revealed. Moreover, it tells a story of cumulative interest.

It has real thrills, such as good, popular movies should have.

TIMES—* * * that might appeal to an audience of those who need narcotics, but to the average person who has a night off and goes to the theater for entertainment it is not pleasing.

A valiant attempt has been made to render this production effective, and James Kirkwood’s performances in certain sequences is unusually good. The story, however, wanders along until it becomes tiresome, and the dramatic climax is spoiled.

TRIBUNE—* * * a simple story, simply told without exaggeration or sensationalism, and that while there is (thank heaven) no plot, it is intensely interesting, because one feels instinctively that it is all true. Whatever one may have thought of the plan for making this picture there is nothing either from an artistic or an ethical standpoint by which the most exacting could object.

WORLD—In our judgment it is one of the most creatively ghastly things ever put into motion picture form, and while it may prove a financial success owing to its involvement of the memory of the handsome young film hero who has gone, it seems to us to be devoid of any great educational or preventive quality.

are in the matter of buying film, and that the selling is done before the salesman ar-ribes. There are many cases where the exbhibitor really has bought the picture in question before the salesman arrives, but the ones that have been bought in this manner would be bought by a child 15 years of age were he in the exhibiting end of the business, for there are some pictures that an exhibitor would want if he were never seen a salesman, so that they are few these days.

"Let's analyze and compare this salesman question. A salesman from the office of the Sherwin Williams Paint Co. comes into Birmingham, visits the stores, quotes his prices on all kinds of paints. Perhaps he has certain marginals that he is allowed to make a merchant, and perhaps to lend the order he does shave his price some, but when the salesman signs up the order blank after the merchant, that order goes into his home office and is filed.

"A film salesman enters the office of an exhibitor, quotes him prices on certain pictures, or a group of pictures. After perhaps haggling on prices, etc., the salesman will say exhibitor a contract, signs him up, and in most instances receives a deposit and then mails the contract into his home office.

"What happens there? The home office looks over the contract, decides that Birmingham should pay more rental for said pictures, rejects the contract and advises the branch manager to send the salesman back to ask for more money. The salesman has already spent perhaps one, two or three days on the first contract, then he goes back at the same expense to perhaps get more money.

"Is it the fault of the salesman that he has to make the second trip? Is it his fault that he does not pay the rentals than on the first contract? Should the salesman be eliminated because his home office failed to give him the proper rental price, or to trust him with the knowledge of the proper rental when he is in the region, and in most instances, wants to make a sale on the square for his company?

"The 'Price Haggling' that Mr. Aronson says is done by the salesmen, would seldom happen if said salesman had the proper instructions, and proper support from his branch and home office.

"Our industry is but very little different from any other industry, but it is different in that those who we place confidence in to carry square, are usually the ones that'
'pad' the cost of a picture, 'pad' the exhibition value and 'pad' other things, even to the extent of not backing up his sales force through whom he must get the bulk of his business.

"When an association, organization or any other plan of getting distributors and ex-bhibitors together has failed so far, due to the lack of confidence, which by the way is being more thoroughly destroyed each week at a time, then how in the name of common sense can the distributors ever form a 'union exchange' and expect to eat, sleep and do business together without creating real, sincere confidence in each other, which will take some time to build through fear of competition.

"Turn over boys. Get up on the right side. Either the exhibitor must have rentals where he can show at an admission that is in reason, or else Klau and Erlanger and the Shubert boys will be getting many road shows this coming season that should be playing the picture theaters."
